SPEAKER, MR. :

Mr. Daniel Levy elected, 12.

Presented to His Excellency the Governor, 31.

SPEAKER, MR. (HON. DANIEL LEVY), RULINGS AND OPINIONS OF :

Parliamentary Allowances and Salaries Bill: It would be extremely inconvenient for the Speaker to take notice of statements made by members across the floor during a division; the Speaker could not constitute himself a tribunal to decide between conflicting versions of what had been said, 117; the bill was not a question in which members had the direct pecuniary interest contemplated by standing order 204; in interpreting the standing orders, the Speaker when in doubt could not construe them in such a way as to lead to an obvious absurdity; it would be utterly repugnant to one's common-sense to rule that the House had no right to pass a measure relating to the salaries of members, 148; the proceedings of Parliament were regulated not only by standing orders but also by ancient usage and established practice, and the standing orders, important and binding as they were, did not in any sense constitute a codification of the law of Parliamentary procedure. The rule in regard to personal interest was established in the House of Commons over 200 years ago, and broadly stated was that no member who had a pecuniary interest in a question should be allowed to vote upon it, but in order to operate as a disqualification the interest must be immediate and personal and not of a general or remote character. The bill was clearly a matter of State policy within the meaning of the rule explained by Mr. Speaker Abbott, and invariably followed in the House of Commons and in the Parliaments of other parts of the British Dominions. Therefore, the disqualification from voting referred to in standing order 204 did not apply to the bill, 150; the motion "That the bill do now pass" was a purely formal motion, and had been dispensed with in the House of Commons. No detailed discussion could be allowed on this motion or on the motion "That the title of the bill be, &c." The discussion would have to be strictly confined to reasons why the bill should not pass, seeing that the third reading had already been carried, 226; there was urgent need for new standing orders, which would dispense with a number of the purely formal stages in the progress of a bill, which had long been discarded by the House of Commons, 228.
