TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

AUDITOR-GENERAL

BEING ON

THE TREASURER'S STATEMENTS OF THE RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND, AND OTHER MONEYS, FOR THE PERIOD 1ST JULY, 1895, TO 30TH JUNE, 1896.

(Under Act 33 Victoria No. 18.)

1. THE accompanying Statements of the Treasurer's Accounts are for the new Financial Year, as fixed by the Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895, that is to say, for the period from 1st July, 1895, to 30th June, 1896, but the transactions in regard to the Disbursements, from the Revenue at all events, were only partially governed by the provisions of that Act, inasmuch as there were at the close of June, 1895, a certain amount of outstanding obligations under the Annual Appropriation Acts of previous years which could not be written off, and could only be discharged after that date, as will be explained further on.

2. The Statements were received from the Treasury on the 25th September, and were returned for correction and suggested amendments on the 30th December, 1896, and were finally received back on the 1st March, but not so fully corrected and amended as desired, and I have now the honor to submit to the Legislative Assembly my Report thereon, as directed by the 38th section of the Audit Act of 1870.

GENERAL STATE OF THE BALANCES.

3. The operations upon the General Public Account of the Colony which embrace those classified as transactions in connection with the Consolidated Revenue Fund proper, the Loan Fund, and the Trusts Funds, during the Financial Year ended 30th June, 1896, show the following gross results:—

Credit balances in cash and securities on 1st July, 1895...	... £5,814,456	8	2
Receipts within the year 1895-6	... 10,634,377	0	10

4. As, however, the transactions in London from the 1st May to 30th June resulted in a debit of £221,942 4s. 7d. (vide Appendix B), the total balance at credit of the Public Account at Sydney and London on the 30th June, 1896, was reduced to £8,586,670 12 1

At the same date there stood at the credit of Temporary Issues recoverable in cash, or by adjustment hereafter, the sum of 757,709 6 0
 Making a total balance of Ways and Means in Sydney and London at 30th June, of £9,344,379 18 1

The Temporary Issues recoverable all stood at the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, and are classified as follows, viz:—

Credited to the account of 1895 and previous years—

Treasurer's Advance Vote, 1893	£13,324	4	3

THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND ACCOUNT.

5. The transactions within the Revenue Account during the year 1895-6, have taken place under two different conditions. The operation of the Annual Appropriation Acts for 1895 and previous years required that all Votes taken under those Acts should remain open for expenditure up to the 30th June, 1896, while the Appropriation Act of 1895-6 is subject to the provisions of the second section of the "Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895," which limit the appropriating authority given by it and by all future Annual Appropriation Acts to the charges that may come in course of payment within each Financial Year, which is now fixed as for the period from 1st July to 30th June.

6. The Statements now submitted have nevertheless been prepared in the usual form, but practically they afford sufficient information so far as they go as to what portions belong to the old system and what portions belong to the new system of appropriating the Revenue. The result of the change of system cannot of course well appear until the accounts of the now current financial year, 1896-7, shall have been made up. As, however, all the annual appropriations for past years, as well as for 1895-6, absolutely closed on the 30th June, 1896, the balances of the old and new Revenue Account at that date will form starting points for future statements as to the condition of the current Revenue and the charges upon it, and also as to the condition of the Deficiency Account as ascertained at 30th June, 1896.

7. The form of analysis which has been adopted in previous years in regard to the "Revenue Account" as a whole shows that the Income credited to the Consolidated Revenue Fund during the Financial Year, ended 30th June, 1896, was derived from—

Taxation	£2,566,115 13 11
Land Revenue	2,017,735 19 6
Receipts for Services rendered	4,354,789 12 6
General Miscellaneous Receipts	315,696 10 3
	£9,254,337 16 2

The overdraft at 30th June, 1895, as shown at page 147 of the Report on the Accounts of the half-year ended 30th June, 1895, having been	1,787,714 0 4

The balance represents the amount available to meet the current Liabilities of the year ended 30th June, 1896	£7,466,623 15 10

Excepting Temporary Issues, hereafter recoverable, the actual payments charged to the Revenue Account up to the 30th June, 1896, were—

Towards the Interest and Extinction of the Public Debt	£2,116,925 16 10
Interest on Treasury Deficiency Bills	56,471 10 4
Interest on Treasury Bills issued in anticipation of Loans (55 Victoria No. 7)	112,099 0 0
Refunds and Charges on Collections	177,874 14 2
For other Statutory and Regulation Expenses	358,090 5 1
For Expenditure under the Annual Appropriation Acts	6,880,757 11 1
	£9,702,218 17 6

The final Disbursements therefore exceeded the available Income at 30th June, 1896, by	£2,235,595 1 8

8. The deficiency is now shown by the foregoing statement to have stood on 30th June at £2,235,595 1s. 8d., exclusive of Temporary Issues recoverable to the extent of £757,709 6s., but, inclusive of those issues, the overdraft was £2,993,304 7s. 8d., an increase on the previous account of £423,127 3s. 3d. An analysis of the overdraft shows the following figures:—

Cash overdraft	£215,720	7	8

A further nominal transfer of £500,000 from the Revenue to the General Loan Account has been made since last Report, making £1,500,000 nominally placed to the credit of the General Loan Account, which will be referred to further on, but, as formerly explained, the whole transfer is excluded from the above figures.

9. Having stated the condition of the Revenue as a whole, and as a Cash Account to 30th June, 1896, the year's operations require to be now distributed into two accounts, corresponding to the two conditions referred to above as having affected the results of the transactions of the Financial Year 1895-6.

10. Considered as a Cash Account only, it will be seen that up to 30th June, 1896, from which date the new system of accounts fairly begins, the transactions for 1895 and previous years show an overdraft of £2,651,867 4s. 2d., which has in the meantime been practically provided for by Deficiency Bills (see paragraph 17), while the transactions of 1895-6 show a surplus of £349,878 19s. 8d. By the operation of the "Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895," these and future Cash Balances will also constitute the Financial Balances.

THE LIABILITIES OF THE REVENUE.

11. The Undischarged Liabilities under the existing Statutory Authorities for Expenditure was shown in last Report to have been £1,895,337 12s. 10d., the particulars of which were set forth in Appendix A thereto. In accordance with the "Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895," it is necessary to distinguish between Appropriations of the Revenue made by Special Statutes of a permanent character, chiefly for Fixed Amounts, and those made annually by Votes first taken in Committee of Supply and finally embodied in the Annual Appropriation Acts. Accordingly the above-stated Liabilities are found to have consisted of—

Liabilities under Special Statutes	£683,492 17 9
Liabilities under Annual Appropriation Acts ...	1,211,844 15 1
	£1,895,337 12 10

12. In Appendix A to this Report (Supplements Nos. 1 and 2) full specification of the above Liabilities are given, along with the operations thereon during the year 1895-6. The following is a Summary of those operations.

Liabilities 30th June, 1895.	Discharged.		Balances 30th June, 1896.
	By Expenditure.	By Surrender of Balances.
Special Statutes.
£ s. d. 683,492 17 9	£ s. d. 530,341 15 0	£ s. d. 870 5 4	£ s. d. 152,280 17 5

£1,895,337 12 10	1,252,081 0 3	484,019 16 1	159,236 16 6

An addition was made to these Liabilities of £723 18s. 5d., by restoring some small balances which had previously been written off to meet outstanding engagements, particulars of which are added to Supplements Nos. 1 and 2.

13. Similarly the Liabilities of the Revenue for the Financial Year 1st July, 1895, to 30th June, 1896, are detailed as usual in Appendix A, and the operations during the year are shown in Supplements Nos. 3 and 4, distinguishing the two classes of Liability as referred to above. The following summary shows how these Liabilities were dealt with and the results at 30th June, 1896:—

Liabilities for Financial year 1st July, 1895, to 30th June, 1896.	Discharged.		Balances of Special Statutes at 30th June, 1896.
	By Expenditure.	By Surrender of Balances.
Special Statutes.
£ s. d. 2,985,753 1 11	£ s. d. 2,440,462 6 4	£ s. d. 2,144 2 1	£ s. d. 543,146 13 6
Ordinary Statutes.
6,493,919 2 0	6,158,951 12 6	339,967 9 6
£9,484,672 3 11	8,599,413 18 10	342,111 11 7	543,146 13 6

14. The effect of the "Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895" is to close absolutely at the end of each Financial Year—that is to say, a year commencing 1st July and ending 30th June—all appropriations by Parliament as set forth in the Annual Appropriation Acts, thus limiting the Annual Appropriations to payments to be made within each financial year. The foregoing Statements of Liabilities show, therefore, that there were no balances to be carried forward to the now current year's account, except for the small sum of £6,955 19s. 1d. in connection with previous years' Appropriations, which it is understood the Treasury considered it necessary to reserve to meet outstanding obligations, but which, so far as not met before the close of the current financial year will then be surrendered.

15. This new arrangement, however, does not apply to the obligations of the Revenue created by Special Statutes, any portion of which, if not discharged by the close of a financial year, must necessarily be carried forward as a primary obligation, either attaching to any Credit Balance that may have accrued at the 30th June, or to the growing produce of the Revenue after that date. This cannot be avoided and, in the case at all events of the unpaid Interest on the Public Debt, the Coupons attached to Securities are practically outstanding cheques which must be paid on presentation. The great bulk of the balances shown in the foregoing Statements as outstanding obligations at 30th June, 1896, consists of unpaid Coupons on Debentures, or of Dividends upon Funded and Inscribed Stock.

16. While the Authorities creating such obligations are not in any way limited in their operation by the provisions of the "Audit Act Amendment Act of 1895," they do not prevent the Public Accounts from being kept and presented to Parliament under what is now understood as the "Cash Basis" system. All the payments within any financial year are made either under the authority of the Annual Appropriation Act, or under the authority of Special Statutes, the only difference being that the payments under Special Statutes within any year will be accounted for as the Expenditure under them for that year, irrespective of date of claim or service in connection with them. But as the Authorities under Permanent Statutes do not die at the 30th June, the balances unused in connection with them at that date must necessarily be treated as Authorities for their payment whenever they may mature, but as Authorities only alongside the Annual Appropriation Act for the year in which claims may come in course of payment. The balances of Authorities shown in the above Statements of Liabilities as under Special Statutes, &c., constitute, accordingly, a primary claim for attention on the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account for 1896-7.

17. Towards covering, temporarily, the Deficiency Debt, as estimated by the Treasury at 30th June, 1895, the Act 59 Victoria No. 22 was passed, authorising the issue of Treasury Bills to an amount not exceeding £1,174,700, and at a rate of interest not exceeding 4 per cent., subject also to a provision for redemption at the rate of £150,000 per annum. This provision for redemption is made under section 7, by a continuance of the like provision made for the redemption of the Treasury Bills issued under the authority of the Act 53 Victoria No. 9, after those last-named Bills shall have been extinguished. The amount of Treasury Bills outstanding of the issues under 53 Victoria No. 9 having been, at 30th June, 1896, £1,602,884, it follows that the amount of Treasury Deficiency Bills subject to an annual redemption of £150,000 was £2,777,584.

18. Subsequently, however, to the issue of the new Bills, the estimate of the Deficiency Debt at 30th June, 1895, was found to have been sufficiently in excess as to allow of the new Bills being cancelled to the extent of £150,000; and this will appear in the now current year's Accounts.

19. It is to be observed here, that those new Bills were placed in one line with the Government Savings Bank at an interest rate of 3 per cent. only, with a currency of five years; but although the amount represented by those Bills is now credited to the Consolidated Revenue Fund, the issue of the Bills was, as in 1889, nothing more than a formal acknowledgment of the debt due to the Trust Funds for overdrafts therefrom. As the nominal proceeds of the Bills added nothing to the Revenue the Deficiency Debt is not reduced thereby.

THE TREASURER'S ADVANCE ACCOUNT.

20. The operations on the Treasurer's Advance Vote are now carried on wholly within the Revenue Account and are reduced to very moderate proportions. The Vote for 1895-6 was for £100,000. Of that amount £45,707 13s. 7d. only were drawn, but adjusted within the year to the extent of £17,004 16s. 2d., leaving only £28,702 17s. 5d. to be replaced. For the greater part of that sum Votes were taken on the Supplementary Estimates, and to that extent at least will be accounted for in the Statement for 1896-7. There were still outstanding at 30th June, 1896, sums to the amount of £22,692 6s. 8d. on account of the Advance Votes for 1893, 1894, and 1895, of which, with those on account of 1895-6, full particulars are given in Appendix C.

THE TRUSTS FUND ACCOUNT.

21. The General Trusts Fund Account had at its credit on 30th June, 1895, a gross total of £6,202,508 16s. 7d. Deducting, as in the previous account, receipts and re-issues of temporary credits to the Revenue Suspense Account to an amount of £452,337 3s. 8d., the—

Gross Receipts for the year 1st July, 1895, to 30th June, 1896, were	£	s.	d.
	4,220,245	13	9
And the Gross Re-issues for the same period were	3,628,656	17	9
Showing an increase over the Credit Balance of last Account of	591,588	16	0
Or an increased credit at 30th June, 1896, of	6,794,097	12	7
That balance is represented by—
Securities lodged in the Treasury Chest (which were verified on inspection) ...	4,506,888	13	2
Debenture for £100 in the Bank of New South Wales (Lunacy Trust, 42 Vic. No. 7)	100	0	0
Advance to the Consolidated Revenue Fund	215,720	7	8
Advance to the General Loan Account ...	1,500,000	0	0
Working Balance	571,388	11	9
	£6,794,097	12	7

The Treasury balance, however, may be seen to be £1,359 7s. 9d. more than above stated, being an amount due to the Consolidated Revenue Fund, part of a disallowance on the accounts of 1893, not yet adjusted.

22. The Special Trusts Accounts in connection with the Supreme Court Moneys show an aggregate credit of £473,146 0s. 4d., of which £318,554 were invested in Treasury Bills and New South Wales Funded Stock, 56 Victoria No. 1. With the addition of the Railway Loan Redemption Fund, £375,000, and the new Sinking

Sinking Funds under the Loan Acts, 58 Victoria No. 14 and 59 Victoria No. 6, £14,010 13s. 4d., together with the balance credit of Treasury Notes, £127 10s., there results a gross balance at the credit of the Trusts Fund as a whole of £7,656,381 16s. 3d.

23. The transactions under the Civil Service Superannuation Account show an increase in the Cash Balance of £7,698 10s. 3d. over the closing balance at 30th June, 1895—the total balance in cash and securities, at 30th June, 1896, having stood at £518,070 17s. 9d. New Pensions came into course of payment during the year at a total annual rate of £8,538 12s. 5d., while old Pensions lapsed to an annual amount of £3,280 13s. 5d., showing a net increase of rate of £5,257 19s. The list of pensions in course of payment at the close of the financial year (30th June, 1896) inclusive of those payable under Schedule B, amounted to an aggregate rate of £83,612 13s. 9d. annually. For lists of the new and lapsed Pensions see Appendix D.

24. Under the operation of the Public Service Act of 1895, the condition of the Civil Service Superannuation Account has recently become materially altered. The Income has been considerably reduced under the provisions of section 62, of which a large number of public officers have taken advantage, and have elected to discontinue their contributions, while the number of contributors to the Fund has decreased by the reductions effected by the Public Service Board in the Staff of the Service generally. Of course the claims to retiring allowances are also limited by the greatly diminished number of contributors under the Act of 1884; but the exact effect of the changes now being wrought upon the present condition and the future prospects of the Fund by the Public Service Act of 1895 cannot yet be fully ascertained.

25. The balance at the credit of the Police Superannuation Fund and the Police Reward Fund combined shows a reduction from £20,915 8s. 2d. at 30th June, 1895, to £13,109 8s. 9d. at 30th June, 1896—a loss on the cash transactions of the year of £7,805 19s. 5d. New charges for Police Pensions for the year 1896 came on for payment at the annual rate of £3,101 6s. 3d., while by the lapse of old pensions there occurred an annual reduction of rate to the amount of £1,565 0s. 5d. A net addition was thus made to the Police Pension List of £1,536 5s. 10d., the total annual charge at 30th June, 1896, having been £21,211 15s. 5d. At that rate of charge it will be necessary to provide some additional income to meet it, as the balance at credit of the Account is obviously inadequate for the purpose.

THE GENERAL LOAN ACCOUNT.

26. At the close of the half-year ended 30th June, 1895, the General Loan Account was in debt to the Public Account (or, according to the Treasurer's Statements, to the Consolidated Revenue Fund) for two advances of £500,000 each and being then overdrawn, a further nominal transfer of £500,000 was placed to its credit, making in all a sum of £1,500,000, which has not yet been replaced by the realisation of Loans, on the faith of which the advances or transfers were made. This matter was fully explained in paragraphs 23 and 24 of my last Report.

27. The General Loan Account was also under obligation to provide for meeting Treasury Bills to the amount of £2,750,000, balance of £4,000,000 issued in anticipation of Loans under the authority of the Act 55 Victoria No. 7. There was also required to be adjusted the Capital Stock issued in the Colony pursuant to the provisions of the Funded Stock Act of 1892, 56 Victoria No. 1, to the several Loan Service Acts. The amount of Stock so issued to the 30th June, 1895, was £2,389,010.

28. Towards liquidating the abovementioned Treasury Bills £2,750,000, and also for redeeming the Debentures for £219,400 (Act 29 Victoria No. 9), and for £758,000 (Act 29 Victoria No. 23), which fell due in 1896, making together £3,727,400, a new Loan of £4,000,000 was negotiated in London in October, 1895, for which there were received as net proceeds £3,804,573 4s. 4d.

29. In addition to the above, further issues of Stock were negotiated in the Colony—under 56 Victoria No. 1, £152,740; under 58 Victoria No. 14, £20,000; and under 59 Victoria No. 6, £230,000; in all, £402,740. A special credit also occurs of £1,513, recovered as insurance on the Hawkesbury Agricultural College Buildings, Richmond, which were destroyed by fire. This sum is in course of being applied towards the cost of their re-erection.

30. The whole amount of proceeds of Loans credited to the General Loan Account during the year 1895–6 was (pp. 64 and 81) £4,209,849 13s. 10d., after allowing for the transfer to the Consolidated Revenue Fund of £4,247 0s. 6d. balance of premiums received in connection with the issue of New South Wales Funded Stock under Act 56 Victoria No. 1. The expenditure out of those credits having been £2,495,097 17s. 3d. it follows that on the transactions within the year there results a balance credit of £1,714,751 16s. 7d.; but Treasury Bills under the Act 55 Victoria No. 7, for £1,000,000 fell due in London on the 1st October, 1896, and similar Treasury Bills for £750,000, negotiated in the Colony, were falling due at various dates during the half-year ended 31st December, 1896, and likewise a portion of the Debentures issued under the Loan Act, 29 Victoria No. 23—that is to say, £383,000, matured for redemption on the 1st July, 1896—making in all a liability of £2,133,000, for which the money had been raised by the Loan of October, 1895, and credited prior to the 1st July.

31. Credit is, however, taken for a balance on the General Loan Account at 30th June, 1896, of £2,867,951 8s. 1d.; but as the overdraft of £1,500,000 formerly explained had not then been adjusted, the apparent credit balance was virtually only £1,367,951 8s. 1d.—a sum insufficient to meet the Debentures for £383,000 payable in London on the 1st July, and the Treasury Bills for £1,000,000, payable also in London on the 1st October, as stated in the foregoing paragraph. Taking into account the further claim of £750,000 for Treasury Bills due in Sydney out of money raised in London for the purpose, it is clear that the General Loan Account was virtually overdrawn by £765,048 11s. 11d. at 30th June, 1896. (The account has not improved during the subsequent half-year, as the payments from, exceeded the receipts to, the General Loan Account by about £20,000.)

32. This condition of the Loan Fund created difficulties as to certifying Warrants for Loan Services while there was no Loan Money available for issue, and led to further correspondence with the Treasury and the Law Officers of the Crown. The correspondence that has taken place since that given in Appendix L to my Report on the Public Accounts of 1893, on questions arising out of the anomalous condition of the Loan Fund and Loan Service Appropriations, has been considerable; but in this connection it may be sufficient to refer only to a case which I felt bound to submit for the opinion of the Attorney-General.

33. No steps having been taken to make good the overdraft of £1,500,000 on the General Loan Account, and a new Loan Act, 59 Victoria No. 6, authorising the borrowing and expending of a further sum of £1,555,200 having been passed on the 10th October, 1895, I was asked on the 17th of that month to certify for issue a sum of £49,920 under the new Loan Act. On inquiry it was stated that no money had then yet been borrowed to meet the sum asked for, and it was then suggested that my objections had better be referred to the Law Officers of the Crown. This was done, and the Attorney-General, Mr. Want, having been informed that there was "a large sum in hand at the credit of the General Loan Account" gave an interim opinion that those moneys were available, under 59 Victoria No. 6.

34. Until, however, I was furnished with the full text of Mr. Want's opinion, I declined to certify the instrument submitted for my signature. This led to an interview with the Attorney-General on the 16th November, 1895, on the Colonial Treasurer's suggestion, at which I explained that the statement of there being a large sum at the credit of the General Loan Account was far from being a correct one, and needed very considerable modification—in short, that there was literally no loan money at credit available for certificate to issue, and that the facts would be at once stated in a case for the Attorney-General's opinion. That statement was accordingly made, and forwarded to the Crown Solicitor on the 20th November, 1895, but owing to the absence of the Attorney-General from the Colony, a reply was not received until the 17th July, 1896. The correspondence will be found in Appendix E.

35. It had been conceded that if any Loan Money was actually at the credit of the General Loan Account, over and above what was already pledged for issue under Warrants, Treasury Bills, or Debentures, or unrepresented cheques, such open balance might be treated as available for issue for any Loan Service under the provisions of the Loans Fund Amalgamation Act. The Attorney-General's opinion may be seen to coincide with that view, except that it seems to imply that any moneys at the credit of the General Loan Account might be used, without reference to the question as to whether such credit had accrued correctly or not.

36. The General Loan Account throughout the Loan Acts is solely constituted by placing to its credit moneys actually raised by sale of securities, and it is only such moneys that are the subject of "appropriation" by Parliament. My real objection to issue further Certificates was, that the General Loan Account was overdrawn, as clearly set forth in the case submitted for opinion, and that until Loan Moneys were placed to credit under 59 Victoria No. 6, or any other Loan Act, no further Certificates for issue could be legally given. As a matter of fact no such Certificates have since been given except upon actual credit of Loan Moneys; but, as a matter of right, the conditions on which £1,500,000 were debited to the Public Account for Loan Services ought long ago to have been fulfilled, namely, by the negotiation of securities for the amount in terms of the Acts under which the sum in question has been expended.

37. The Loan of £4,000,000 raised in London in October, 1895, was in the form of Inscribed Stock, bearing interest at 3 per cent. per annum, with a currency of forty years, and was negotiated with the following results:—The gross proceeds amounted to £3,876,604 13s. 6d., giving an average price of £96 18s. 3½d. per cent. The accrued interest, as computed on the daily balance of unpaid instalments from 10th October, 1895, and to 9th January, 1896, amounted to £14,989 13s., which sum was credited to the Consolidated Revenue Fund as usual, and reduced the first half-year's interest from £60,000 to £45,010 7s. The balance of proceeds was further reduced by the ordinary charges for Stamp Duty, Bankers' Commission, and Incidentals, £55,720 11s. (see page 124), and also by discount on prepayments at 1 per cent., £1,321 5s. 2d., with a set-off of £8 7s. 11d. for interest on deferred payments.

The

The net produce, as stated above, £3,804,573 4s. 4d., carries an annual rate charge for interest of £3 3s. 1d. per cent.; but, if allowance be made for redemption at par on maturity, the rate computes to £3 4s., a very much lower rate than that for any previous Loan raised during the last ten years or more.

38. The Loan was intended to provide funds, as formerly stated, to reduce outstanding Treasury Bills for £2,000,000, bearing interest at 4 per cent., and Treasury Bills for £750,000, bearing interest at $4\frac{1}{4}$ per cent., also to pay off Debentures for £977,400, bearing interest at 5 per cent., all of which securities matured in 1896. The net proceeds of the new Loan exceeded the sum required for the purposes for which it was negotiated, by £77,173 4s. 4d. It appeared also that a portion of the Debentures to be redeemed had been issued for Railway purposes to the extent of £639,000.

39. This was pointed out to the Colonial Treasurer and his attention drawn to the fact that there was at the credit of the Railway Loan Redemption Fund, which had been specially created for the purpose, a sum of £375,000, of which advantage should be taken towards the redemption of the £639,000 issued under the Act 29 Victoria No. 23, and so relieve the proceeds of the new Loan from so much of the charge upon it. This was agreed to by the Colonial Treasurer, and thus a sum of £452,173 4s. 4d. became available for General Loan Services.

40. That sum was distributed under the authority of the Governor and Executive Council to the credit of the following Loan Acts (vide Appendix F).

41. The Funded Stock Act of 1892, 53 Victoria No. 1, authorised the sale of "Stock" to the extent of Three Million pounds sterling, at a fixed rate of interest of 4 per cent. per annum, but without specific allotment to the purposes of any any Loan Service. Finding, however, that money could be borrowed on like security at 3 per cent., it was determined to close the Stock Account of 56 Victoria No. 1, and at the same time to allot the sum raised to the services of specific Loan Acts. This was done accordingly on the 2nd September last under the authority of the Governor-in-Council, a copy of which forms Appendix G.

42. The amount of Stock sold from the 8th November, 1892 (the date of first issue), to the 30th June, 1896, was £2,541,750, at a gross premium of £9,440 14s., of which there were applied to cover cost of brokers' commission £2,363 9s. 6d., and the balance, £7,077 4s. 6d., was carried to credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. (Between the 30th June and the 2nd September, 1896, when the account was closed, further Stock was sold for £7,600, at a premium of £456, making thus a gross net receipt to the General Loan Account of £2,549,350, a sum equal to the face value of Stock sold.)

43. The total net disbursements for Loan Services to 30th June, 1896, were for the following classes of expenditure, viz. :—

* £1,300 of this amount remained outstanding at 30th June, 1896, but bearing no interest beyond that date.

† £2,600 of this amount also remained outstanding at 30th June, 1896, but bearing no interest beyond that date.

The annual interest payable on the above balance of the Public Debt from the 1st July, 1896, was computed to amount to £2,231,304 11s. 6d., but inasmuch as £375,000 of Debentures for £758,000, raised under 29 Victoria No. 23, bearing interest at 5 per cent., were absolutely redeemed by the Railway Redemption Fund, subsequently to the 30th June, 1896, and the balance, £383,000, by a renewal out of the £4,000,000 Loan of 1895 at 3 per cent., a reduction in the annual rate of interest has been effected to the amount of £26,410. (Appendix H.)

47. It was pointed out in reporting upon the Treasurer's Statements for 1892 and 1893 that the proceeds of the Treasury Bills issued under the Act 55 Victoria No. 7 were not so credited to the General Loan Account as to admit of their being allotted to Specific Loan Services. The distribution of the proceeds of the Funded Stock as given above, and the redemption of the Treasury Bills referred to, now furnish a basis of computation, although not a satisfactory one, for the allotment of the moneys so credited, or rather of the face value of the Securities issued, to Specific Services. A revised Statement has accordingly been prepared (vide Appendix H), showing the distribution of the outstanding Debt, and of the annual interest thereupon, to the several Classes of Services for which it had been incurred, and showing also the periods over which repayment of the several portions of the Debt extends.

48. Two Returns are now also appended showing the progressive condition of the Public Debt, year by year, from 1853 to 30th June, 1896, inclusive, and the progressive annual charge for interest on the same. The information required for the preparation of these Returns has been very carefully compiled from the Loan Service Appropriation Acts, and from the Registers of Securities kept in this Department. The first Return (Appendix I) gives the outstanding Debt as it stood on the last day of each Financial Year, without reference to the varying dates within each year on which additions or reductions took place. The second Return (Appendix J) also gives the annual charge for interest, but in this case, while commencing on the basis of the outstanding securities at the close of the preceding year, the actual charge is only for the period up to which within any year a security bore interest, or from which a new security began to bear it. Those two Returns have been prepared chiefly with a view to show what proportion the relative classes of Loan Services have contributed to the annual charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund for interest, and with a view also of affording an approximately accurate Statement of Liabilities for debt and interest as one of the necessary factors in any Account of the Expenditure and Income of the services classed as Reproductive Works which may hereafter be made out.

49. In reporting upon the Treasurer's Statements for the year 1894, exception was taken to the mode of stating certain lines of Expenditure on account of Loan Services, on the ground that they did not give sufficient information, inasmuch as there were not quoted in connection with such Expenditure the Special Acts passed pursuant to the provisions of the Public Works Act of 1888, and without which authority the Expenditure could not have been passed.

50. In the Statements now under review similar omissions occur which, although strongly urged to do so, the Treasury decline to insert, on the ground that the Special Acts whose titles were required to be stated were not Appropriation Acts; overlooking the fact, apparently, that those Special Acts were the only justification for expending the sums named in them for the Services to which those Acts apply.

51. The lines of Expenditure referred to are the following:—

1. Railways—Improvement of grades and curves (58 Victoria No. 14), page 75	£25,000	0	0
Railways—Towards improvement of grades and curves between Wellington and Dubbo, Locksley and Brewongle, and other places (59 Victoria No. 6), page 79	£81,628	9	0.

As those items stand, there is nothing to inform Parliament and the Public how much of that Expenditure comes under the sanction of the Special Act, 59 Victoria No. 21, passed pursuant to the Public Works Act of 1888, which authorised the construction of a deviation at Locksley, on the Great Western line of Railway, at a cost of £47,500, plus a possible addition of 10 per cent. The ascertained Charges as certified by the Railway Commissioners, the Constructing Authority in the case, are in regard to the first line, £8 15s. 3d.; and in regard to the second, £24,685 7s. 11d., as charged by the Treasury to 30th June, 1896. Those two items ought to appear, therefore, under a separate Heading as follows—

59 Victoria No. 6 and 59 Victoria No. 21.

Railways—Towards Improvement of grades and curves between Locksley and Brewongle	£24,694	3	2
And the other lines reduced proportionately to £24,991 4s. 9d. and to £56,943 1s. 1d.

2. Country Towns Water Supplies, further sum (58 Victoria No. 14), page 75	£26,566	7	6
Should be of that sum £4,930 8s. were paid for the construction and completion of Tramway from King-street to Ocean-street, and should be so stated as in connection with the Special Act 55 Victoria No. 18, which sanctioned the work being carried out, as, although the Special Act only sanctioned £80,000, the excess cost ought nevertheless to be shown in the public records. (See paragraph 45 of Report on Statements of 1894.)

52. It must be obvious that, in the absence of such amendments, no trace of the expenditure for the important works mentioned can be found, where they ought to be found, if anywhere, in the Annual Statements of the Public Accounts, which it is presumed are intended for the information of the public, and not simply as abstracts of entries in the Treasury ledgers, nor even of the entries in the records of this Department, however correct those entries may be in either case, and on their own lines.

THE MODE OF RAISING LOANS AND OF APPLYING THE SAME.

53. It is observed in the Loan Act of 1896, 60 Victoria No. 32, that some new provisions are included for dealing with borrowed moneys, which it is presumed are intended to interpret the provisions of the Loans Fund Amalgamation Act of 1879,

1879, with a view to make all Acts authorising the raising of Loans for specific amounts and services so elastic as to entirely alter the specialities of those Acts, both as regards the amounts authorised to be raised and the specific services to which those amounts were to be applied, notwithstanding that Loans authorised by the Special Acts have been actually raised under the conditions contained in those Acts, or, in other words, that contracts were made with the lenders on those conditions.

54. There is an obvious discrepancy between the authorities given for raising sums of money to a specific amount made up of items for which the money is to be borrowed, and the appropriating clauses which declare that such Loans may be appropriated and applied to items of a totally different description. This is virtually to make a double appropriation of the same sums. For economical reasons it is doubtless useful to employ a cash balance temporarily for purposes outside of its constitution, but in case of any such authorised employment the authority given ought to show distinctly that such employment is of the nature of an advance to be accounted for, and not of a final payment.

55. The new provisions contained in sections 1 to 4 of clause 7 were inserted to meet the objections I entertained to the principle of raising money for one purpose and applying it to another. In consequence of the General Loan Account being overdrawn it was necessary, for warrant purposes, to provide moneys for the issue of which a certificate of availability could be given. An investment of £50,000 was made of the Government Savings Bank funds in New South Wales Funded Stock, under the Act 59 Victoria No. 6, for which a minute of the Governor and Executive Council was passed; but it proposed to distribute the proceeds to the services of the Act 59 Victoria No. 6, to the extent of £29,000 only, and the remainder to four other Loan Acts of prior date. This was done on an alleged precedent afforded by the distribution of the surplus funds arising out of the £4,000,000 loan of October, 1895. I objected to the proposed distribution as a diversion of funds ostensibly obtained for the service of the Act 59 Victoria No. 6, to be operated upon under other Loan Acts, for two of which securities had already been issued to the full amount of the sums authorised by them. The proposed distribution was abandoned, and the full amount treated as for credit of 59 Victoria No. 6 only.

56. The provision apparently intended to be made by section 1 of the 7th clause can only apply in any case when the cash balance at the credit of the General Loan Account is sufficiently large to meet any outstanding and immediate claims upon it, and when such balance consists of Loan moneys only. It does not, therefore, alter the original provisions of the Loans Fund Amalgamation Act of 1879.

57. The remaining sections of clause 7 will probably be found to be inoperative, inasmuch as the nature of the sums proposed to be carried to the General Loan Account is not specified. Any sums available for temporary use for Loan Services can only be derived from the Consolidated Revenue Fund or from the Trust Funds. In the first case the Revenue can only be used under the express sanction of Parliament; and in the second a Trust Fund can only be legitimately handled when it may be subject to investment, or for the use of which, by Statute, Regulation, or Special Agreement, the Treasurer is under obligation to pay interest.

58. It is very respectfully submitted that it would place the Loan Service Accounts on a simpler and more satisfactory footing if the Authority for the Appropriation of moneys for Loan Services were given in an Act or Acts distinct from from any Act or Acts Authorising the borrowing of moneys for such services or classes of services on the following general lines :—

1. The authority to appropriate and expend Loan Moneys to be given (in a similar manner to that given for expending the Consolidated Revenue Fund) in a Loan Appropriation Act with such divisions into classes as may be found convenient, and with appropriating clauses only of so much Loan money as may be required to meet drafts thereupon for the respective services. The total appropriations themselves to be carried to a "General Loans Appropriation Account" with the same subdivisions in classes as are given in the Loan Appropriation Acts.
2. The authority to raise loans for the construction of public works or for other services authorised to be carried out by "Loan Appropriation Acts" to be given by a General Act similar to the Funded Stock Act of 1892 (56 Victoria No. 1) or to the Treasury Bills Act (55 Victoria No. 7). The Act to contain the requisite provisions in regard to the nature and forms of securities, the conditions of negotiation, of redemption (by sinking funds or otherwise) and of transfers, the rates of interest, and periods of currency. The provisions to be of such a comprehensive character as to cover all forms in which money may be borrowed, either temporarily or otherwise. The repayment of the principal of all securities to be guaranteed by the Consolidated Revenue Fund, and the proceeds to be placed to the credit of a General Fund for Loan Service purposes only, to be called "The General Loan Fund," and the amount of securities issued in any form to be regulated by the requirements from time to time of Loan Moneys to meet drafts on the General Loan Fund in payment of Loan Services, not, however, exceeding the balances at the credit of appropriations for Loan Services under Loan Appropriation Acts: Provided that in any case where the amount at the credit of the General Loan Fund may be insufficient to meet such drafts, the Governor-in-Council, in anticipation of the exercise of any power to borrow, may (as the Loans are all secured on the Consolidated Revenue Fund) authorise any overdraft that may thus arise on the General Loan Fund Account to be treated as a charge on the Revenue Account, but without any actual transfer, leaving the overdraft to be covered as soon as it may be found expedient to do so by the issue of a New Loan, in terms of the proposed General Act of Authority to borrow.

59. The general practice hitherto has been to consider the total amount of any Loan Act as a fixed sum to be raised, whether required or not, and it has given rise to numerous difficulties in the keeping and stating the Accounts of Loans and their expenditure. It is considered that if the proposed arrangements, as outlined in the preceding paragraph, were carried out, the difficulties referred to would not occur, and a foundation would be laid for dealing with the Loan Accounts as a whole in such a manner as to exhibit the cash and financial balances on the several classes of services, and even if necessary on the individual services themselves.

THE RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.

60. The total collections for Railway and Tramway Tolls, and Miscellaneous Receipts in connection therewith, as credited during the financial year 1st July, 1895, to 30th June, 1896, amounted to £3,156,526 13s. 3d., against which there is a set-off by refunds of £34,793 16s. 5d., as detailed at pages 39 and 40. The net income credited was, therefore, £3,121,732 16s. 10d.

61. The Expenditure out of Revenue, as brought to account within the same period for Working and all other Expenses chargeable to the Railways and Tramways Account, reached the sum of £1,967,029 1s. 10d. The net balance on the year's operations shows thus a credit in cash of £1,154,703 15s. The interest upon the money borrowed and expended for the services of the Railways and Tramways during the same period is computed at £1,476,393 19s. 5d., on the principles explained in paragraphs 48 to 50 of the Report on the Treasurer's Accounts of 1891. The general result of the Income and Expenditure for Railways and Tramways for the year ended 30th June, 1896, and also the total results from the commencement in 1850 to that date, are shown in Appendix K.

The progressive condition of the Public Debt as regards the Railway and Tramway Services, and of the interest thereupon, is also shown as part of the General Statements contained in the Appendices I & J to this Report, prepared as explained above in paragraph 48.

LOCAL INSPECTION OF RAILWAY AND TRAMWAY STATION ACCOUNTS.

62. Independently of the Cash Receipts and Payments as stated above to have been included in the Treasurer's Statements, the Railway and Tramway Station Accounts show the "Earnings" during the year 1st July, 1895, to 30th June, 1896, to have been as follows:—

Dr. To net outstandings at 30th June, 1895	£61,392	19	1
			£3,255,249	2	8
			<hr/>
Cr. By Cash remittances to the Treasury through the Public Account	£2,960,251	8	2
„ Accounts for services paid by Public Departments through the Treasury (vide Appendix L)	155,548	14	0
„ Special credits allowed under authority as a set-off against earnings, and refunds of excessive charges made from the cash takings prior to remittance			52,680	11	3
„ Uncollected and outstanding	86,768	9	3

63. The Inspectors of this Department have carefully investigated, on the spot and otherwise, the whole of the items summarized as above—a labour of no mean magnitude, and carried out in some cases under unavoidable disadvantages, accompanied often with a considerable amount of anxiety. It speaks well for the Commissioners' collecting staff that out of nearly 300 inspections only 4 were attended with unsatisfactory results. Although no unusual time has in consequence been taken up over the large majority of those inspections during the year, there is yet a considerable remanet of stations unvisited, and with the gradual extension of the railway lines, along with increase of traffic, which the existence of the railways encourages and promotes, it will very soon become necessary to extend the staff of inspectors specially engaged in the audit of the Railway Accounts.

64. As in former Reports, there will be found attached a statement of the cases in which the Railway Commissioners found it desirable to establish rates for the immediate advantage of the public as well as for the benefit of the railway interests, prior to obtaining the formal sanction of the Governor and Executive Council, which, as may be seen in the Appendix M, was subsequently granted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

65. The usual Certificates of Discharge have been issued to the Treasurer under clause 28 of the Audit Act. The amounts disallowed are shown in Appendix N.

66. The Mint Bullion Accounts and the Accounts of the Government Savings Bank have been examined, and certified to agree with the books and vouchers representing the same.

67. The following special statements are also appended for information, viz. :—

69. Subject to the above-stated corrections, explanations, and observations, to the disallowances specified in Appendix N, and subject to all outstanding advances and queries being satisfactorily accounted for, the Abstracts of the Treasurer's Receipts and Disbursements within the year ended 30th June, 1896, are considered to be correct.

70. The Statements marked D, H, and I, together with the detailed Statements of the Public Debt, being, however, outside the requirements of the 22nd clause of the Audit Act, do not come under the examination and report required by the 36th clause, and their contents rest, therefore, on the responsibility of the Treasurer.

EDWARD A RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

Department of Audit,
Sydney, 25th March, 1897.

APPENDIX E.

OPINION of the Attorney-General as to the issue of certificates by the Auditor-General of legal availability and applicability of Loan Service Appropriations in the absence of moneys actually raised for the purpose.

Instrument 63.

The Auditor-General to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

MEMORANDUM.

INFORMATION is requested as to whether the money, for the issue of which my certificate is asked, has been borrowed and placed to the credit of the General Loan Account, in terms of clause 5 of Loan Act 59 Victoria No. 6.

E. A. RENNIE.

Department of Audit, 18th October, 1895.

No money has yet been borrowed under the Act 59 Victoria No. 6, but an advance of £500,000 has been made from Consolidated Revenue Fund for General Loan purposes, pending negotiation of loans authorised.—J.J.H., 21/10/95.

The money has not yet been borrowed, but an advance has been made from the Public Account. The Auditor-General.—F.K., 21/10/95.

The Auditor-General to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

IN the absence of any credit by the sale of debentures or the issue of stock—and in the absence of any authority in the Act 59 Vic. No. 6, to apply to the services named in it, any other fund pending sales of securities—there is no appropriation by which a certificate of legal availability or applicability can issue. The transfer alluded to was made prior to the passing of the Act 59 Vic. No. 6, and is of itself of doubtful legality, the Public Account, or rather the Consolidated Revenue Fund Account, from which it professes to transfer £500,000, having been and being still largely overdrawn. Perhaps these objections had better be referred to the law officers of the Crown.—E.A.R.

B.C., 22/10/95.

MEMORANDUM.

THE action of the Auditor-General is seriously embarrassing this Department. There is no occasion to raise money under the Act whilst the Treasury has a large sum in hand at the credit of the General Loan Account. The Loans Fund Amalgamation Act of 1879 authorises the application of any loan moneys to loan services. The papers might be referred as suggested.—F.K., 23/10/95.

Submitted. Approved.—G.H.R., 23. The Crown Solicitor.—F.K., 23/10/95.

I am of opinion that under the 59 Vic. No. 6 these moneys are available, but as the matter is important I will send a carefully written opinion; in the meantime the Treasury may act upon my opinion as a definite one.—J. H. WANT, 14/11/95. The Auditor-General.—F.K., 14/11/95.

The Auditor-General to The Crown Solicitor.

Sir,

Department of Audit, 20 November, 1895.

I have the honor to enclose a statement of a case which you will perhaps have the goodness to submit for the opinion of the Attorney-General, referring to the conditions on which in view of the 12th clause of the Audit Act I should be justified in certifying to the Governor that Loan Moneys authorised to be raised for carrying out Public Works are legally available and applicable to those services.

You will perceive that this is practically the same question which has already been discussed, but in its last phase as presented by the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, viz., that there was "a large sum in hand at the credit of the General Loan Account"—the facts under which that statement was made are omitted.

In the case I have submitted the omissions are supplied, from which it must I think be clear that the so called balance in hand does not contain one penny of Loan Money at all, and has been created by mere book transfers from an account which had no funds at credit to transfer, but was in fact overdrawn to a considerable amount.

The fact that three such transfers were made of £500,000 each, or £1,500,000, is proof conclusive that the real Loan Fund was exhausted.

It may be said that I have nevertheless recognised those transfers as legitimately creating a Loan Fund balance on which to certify warrants for issue for Loan Services, but I did so on my own responsibility, expecting that the conditions on which the Governor and Executive Council authorised the transfers would be at once attended to, viz., "pending the realization of further securities."

Until those transfers are made good under the conditions on which they were made, I do not see that I should be justified in issuing any fresh certificates beyond their amount, except upon the actual credit of Loan Moneys to the Account of 59 Victoria No. 6, or any other Act against which such certificates may in future be required.

The difficulty might perhaps be overcome or minimised, were the Treasurer to obtain from Parliament an authority to raise temporary Loans in some form or other until the Permanent Loans specified in the several Loan Acts could be conveniently realized.

May I request the favour of an early reply as warrants will certainly be asked for immediately beyond funds available under my view of the state of the Loan Fund and of the authorities for their application.

I have, &c.,

E. A. RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

CASE

CASE for the opinion of the Attorney-General.

THE Loan Act of 1895 (59 Victoria No. 6) was assented to on the 10th October, 1895. It authorises, in the usual form, "The Governor to raise by the sale of Debentures or the issue of stock, secured upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Colony, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding four per centum per annum, such sums of money not exceeding on the whole the sum of one million five hundred and fifty-five thousand and two hundred pounds, as are respectively set against the following public works and services."

The fifth clause directs the sums borrowed to be accounted for and appropriated in the following terms, viz. :—"All moneys borrowed under this Act shall be paid to the Treasurer, and shall be by him carried to and form part of the General Loan Account, and be appropriated and applied, as required, to the works and services hereinbefore specified, or to any other duly authorised loan service, in terms of the 'Loans Fund Amalgamation Act of 1879.'"

On the 17th October the Auditor-General was asked to certify an instrument for the Governor's signature to authorise the issue from the Public Account of £49,920, for sundry services specified therein as payable from and chargeable to the Loan authorised to be raised for those services by the Loan Act 59 Victoria No. 6 (and on subsequent dates like certificates for further sums were asked for to the amount of £35,225, or in all £85,145).

Upon inquiry as to whether the money asked to be certified to had been borrowed and placed to the credit of the General Loan Account in terms of clause 5 of the Loan Act 59 Victoria No. 6, the Treasury replied, under date 21st October, "that the money has not yet been borrowed, but an advance has been made from the Public Account."

The Bank Sheets for 28th September (copies of the Bank Account furnished under the Audit Act by the Bank of New South Wales) show a "transfer" of £500,000 from the "Public Account" to the "General Loan Account."

The "Public Account," as constituted, consists of entries of transactions under the "Consolidated Revenue Fund" and the "Trust Fund" combined as one drawing account.

The General Loan Account, by the Audit Act, should form part of the "Public Account," but is dealt with for convenience sake as a separate bank account.

On the 28th September, the date of the transfer, the "Public Account" was overdrawn by £147,699 1s. 1d.; the "transfer" caused that overdraft to be increased to £647,699 1s. 1d.

On the same date the "General Loan Account" had at its credit £379,379 6s. 2d.; by the "transfer" that credit was increased to £879,379 6s. 2d.

The credit of £379,379 6s. 2d. was, however, merely the result of two previous similar transfers of £500,000 each, one on the 9th January, and the other on the 10th April, 1895, thus showing that instead of a credit balance, the "General Loan Account" was really overdrawn £620,620 13s. 10d., plus unrepresented cheques to the amount of £2,444 16s.

Moreover, assuming the credit balance of £379,379 6s. 2d. to have been correct at 28th September, warrants had been certified, and were waiting to be acted upon by issues against Loan Votes, to the amount of £483,361 13s. 3d., or £103,932 7s. 1d. in excess of apparent balance. That excess was the ground for making the third "transfer" of £500,000.

On putting the balances of 28th September together the result is :—

Balance apparently at credit of the General Loan Account ...	379,379	6	2
Dr. Balance on the Public Account	147,699	1	1
	231,680	5	1
Outstanding warrants for Loan Services (exclusive of warrants for Public Account services at same date)	483,361	13	3
Balance short to meet loan warrants alone ...	£251,681	8	2

In another form the balances on the General Loan Account appear thus :—

Overdraft at 30th June, 1895	346,800	8	6
Payments 1st July and 28th September	276,265	1	4
	623,065	9	10
Warrants outstanding	483,361	13	3
Gross overdraft after the discharge of warrants in full ...	£1,106,427	3	1

In these circumstances, there being really no loan money amalgamated, or otherwise available for drafts to meet new services under Loan Act 59 Vic. No. 6, the Auditor-General considers that he is justified in declining to certify as available or applicable any sum asked for under that Act until Loan Money raised in terms of it has been placed to credit, and thus made available to be "appropriated and applied."

The opinion of the Attorney-General is respectfully solicited as to whether the Auditor-General is right in the views above expressed as to the condition of the Loan Funds, and of the authorities for their application.

E. A. RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

Department of Audit, 20th November, 1895.

The Crown Solicitor to The Auditor-General.

Subject :—Whether, in view of the 12th clause of the Audit Act, the Auditor-General would be justified in certifying to the Governor that loan moneys authorised to be raised for carrying on public works are legally available and applicable to those services.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 17 July, 1896.

I have the honor to return herewith the papers relating to the above matter, forwarded to me from your Department on the 20th day of November, 1895, and to state that I have submitted them to Mr. Attorney-General Want, a copy of whose opinion thereon will be found herewith.

I have, &c.,

GEO. COLQUHOUN,

Crown Solicitor.

OPINION of the Attorney-General.

Subject :—Whether, in view of the 12th clause of the Audit Act, the Auditor-General would be justified in certifying to the Governor that loan moneys authorised to be raised for carrying out public works are legally available and applicable to those services.

Attorney-General's Department, Sydney, 16 July, 1896.

I UNDERSTAND my opinion is asked as a dry matter of law upon these facts, viz., there is at present to the credit of the General Loan Account a certain sum of money. I care not how it got there. A Loan Bill was passed for 1895, in which it was enacted that money borrowed under that Act was to be paid into the General Loan Account to be appropriated and applied as required to the work and services therein specified. It is contended by the Auditor-General that, before these moneys can be available, they must be borrowed under that Loan Act. This would be perfectly correct if it were not for the existence of the Loans Fund Amalgamation Act. This Act was passed for the express purpose of enabling the Government to use any loan funds to the credit of that account for all works authorised by previous Act or Acts to be passed subsequently, and this was done, to prevent the absurdity of the Government being in possession of (say) a million of money, on which they were paying interest, and yet being compelled to borrow more money, and also pay interest on that further sum. This being the reason and the intention of the Act, it is clear that once money appears to the credit of the General Loan Account, that money is available for any loan works approved by Parliament without the necessity of actually borrowing the money or ear-marking it when borrowed as belonging specially to the works mentioned therein.

Attorney-General.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Subject :—Distribution of the proceeds of sale of "New South Wales Funded Stock," under the Act 56 Victoria No. 1.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 30 October, 1896.

THE Colonial Treasurer recommends confirmation by His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council of the following proposed distribution of the proceeds of sales of "New South Wales Funded Stock," under the Act 56 Victoria No 1, during the period 8th November, 1892, to 2nd September, 1896, amounting to £2,549,350, namely :—

G. H. REID.

His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council.

The Executive Council approves of the distribution herein proposed of the proceeds of the sale of the Funded Stock referred to.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council; 3/11/96. Min. 96/59 confirmed.—10/11/96. Approved.—HAMPTDEN, 3/11/96. The Auditor-Genl. B.C., Treasury.—F.K., 14/11/96.

The Treasury, Account Branch, Sydney, 23 October, 1896.

Subject :—Distribution of proceeds of stock sold under the Funded Stock Act of 1892, Act 56 Victoria No. 1.

MEMORANDUM.

ADVERTING to my memorandum of 27th March last proposing a plan for the distribution of the proceeds of stock sold under the Funded Stock Act, 56 Victoria No. 1, which at that date amounted to £2,494,580, then to be distributed as follows, viz. :—

" 55	" " 35	300,000	0	0

" 59	" " 6	340,008	10	0
Total ...					£2,494,580	0	0

which plan has never been acted upon.

I would suggest the following amended plan of distribution of the proceeds of the stock sold from 8th November, 1892, to 2nd September, 1896 (last issue), to the extent of £2,549,350, the gross proceeds of which amounted to ... £2,559,246 14 0

From which was deducted—

Brokerage, at $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent....	£2,363	9	6
Premium credited to Consolidated Revenue Fund	7,533	4	6
		9,896	14 0

Leaving a net credit to the General Loan of... £2,549,350 0 0

which might now be distributed to works and services authorised under the following Acts, viz. :—

To Act 52	Vic. No. 17	323,691	10	0
" 53	" " 23	15,000	0	0
" 55	" " 35	699,778	10	0

The amount proposed for Act 52 Vic. No. 17 is identical with that in previous proposition.

The small sum of £15,000 to Act 53 Vic. No. 23 is to cover warrants granted by the Auditor-General on the faith of this credit.

The sums allocated to Act 56 Vic. No. 24 and Act 57 Vic. No. 17 will meet the whole amount required to be raised under these Acts, their appropriations being almost expended.

I have excluded Acts 58 Vic. No. 14 and 59 Vic. No. 6 from participation in the proposed amended plan of distribution, as authority has recently been obtained, and the registers opened, for the sale of the whole of the available stock under these Acts, to bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, i.e., 1 per cent. less than we are paying for the funds now under distribution.

Acting Accountant.

* The original estimate of Land and Income Tax was:—

Land Tax	£400,000
	£508,000

The Act, as finally passed, removed mortgagees of land from the position of land-tax payers to that of income-tax payers, and the income-tax they paid was deducted from the land-tax payable by the owners. This amount is estimated at £70,000. Under the Act, therefore, the figures of the estimate of £508,000 would be—

Land Tax	£330,000
	£508,000

The amount of £215,696 is for the year 1896, and will be increased by £60,000, which will be received next year, making £275,000 for the year 1896, or £55,000 less than the estimate of £330,000.

TREASURY BALANCES.

(APPLICATION OF, FROM ONE HEAD OF SERVICE TO ANOTHER.)

Printed under No. 1 Report from Printing Committee, 4 May, 1897.

The Auditor-General to The Honorable the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

Sir,

Department of Audit, Sydney, 27 April, 1897.

Under the directions contained in the 18th section of the "Audit Act of 1870," I do myself the honor to submit to you, for presentation to the Legislative Assembly, copies of minutes of His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council, numbered 97/3⁽²⁾, of date 19th January, 1897, and No. 97/10, of date 2nd March, 1897, authorising the transfer, in each case, of an amount from one head of service to supplement a Vote for another service.

I have, &c.,

E. A. RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 19 January, 1897.

Subject :—Transfer of £1,422 10s. from the Vote for "Inspectorial Branch, Treasury," and also of £500 from the Vote for "Travelling Expenses of Inspectors, Treasury," to the Vote of £5,000 for "Reorganisation of the Public Service," Estimates 1896-7.

FOR the reasons set forth in the accompanying paper, I submit, for the approval of His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, that, in accordance with the provisions of section 18 of the "Audit Act of 1870," the undermentioned amounts be transferred from the Votes specified hereunder to the credit of the Vote of £5,000 for "Reorganisation of the Public Service," viz.:—£1,422 10s. from the Vote for the "Inspectorial Branch, Treasury," and £500 from the Vote for "Travelling Expenses of Inspectors, Treasury," Estimates 1896-7.

JAMES N. BRUNKER.

The Executive Council approve of the transfer of the amounts herein specified from the Votes to the Vote referred to, as herein recommended.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Minute 97-3, 19/1/97. Approved.—HAMPDEN, 19/1/97. Confirmed, 21/1/97.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 18 January, 1897.

Subject :—Transfer of £166 10s. from the Vote "To meet adjustments of Salaries on revision by the Public Service Board," to the credit of the Vote for "Auditor-General," Estimates 1896-7.

FOR the reasons set forth in the accompanying paper, I submit, for the approval of His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, that, in accordance with the provisions of section 18 of the "Audit Act of 1870," the sum of £166 10s. be transferred from the Vote of £10,000, item No. 232, "To meet adjustments of Salaries on revision by Public Service Board" to the credit of the Vote of £11,178, item No. 12, "Auditor-General," Estimates 1896-7.

JAMES N. BRUNKER.

The Executive Council advise that authority be granted for the transfer of the said amount from the Vote to the Vote specified.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Minute 97-3, 19/1/97. Approved.—HAMPDEN, 19/1/97. Confirmed, 25/1/97.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

Department of Justice, Sydney, 2 March, 1897.

Subject :—Transfer of certain Salaries from the Government Statistician's Office to the Registrar-General's Department as a temporary arrangement.

THE Public Service Board having transferred, from the 1st ultimo, the undermentioned officers from the Government Statistician's Office to the Registrar-General's Department to the positions and with the salaries specified in connection with their names respectively, viz.:—Mr. W. Ridley, Registrar of Vital Statistics and Deputy Registrar-General, £500; Mr. A. L. Vider, clerk, £160; Mr. G. C. Goodman, clerk, £150; Mr. M. J. Gunning, clerk, £100; Mr. E. C. Wright, clerk, £190;—I recommend that, pending the requisite provision being made therefor by Parliament in due course, the amounts of the salaries in question, which have been voted on the Estimates for the current financial year, for the Government

Government Statistician's office under the head of the Chief Secretary, may, under the provisions of section 18 of the "Audit Act of 1870," be transferred to the Registrar-General's Department (now under the control of the Minister of Justice) and temporarily applied to supplement the amount voted for that Department, which is insufficient to meet the salaries of the officers referred to.

J. H. YOUNG.

The Executive Council approve of the transfer of the Votes referred to as proposed, in terms of the 18th section of the "Audit Act of 1870."—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Minute 97-10, 2/3/97. Approved.—HAMPDEN, 2/3/97. Confirmed, 9/3/97.

The Auditor-General to The Honorable the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

Sir, Department of Audit, Sydney, 27 April, 1897.
Under the directions contained in the 18th section of the "Audit Act of 1870," I do myself the honor to submit to you, for presentation to the Legislative Assembly, copies of minutes of His Excellency the Governor and Executive Council, numbered 97/8, 97/9, and 97/14, dated respectively 16th February, 1897, 2nd March, 1897, and 30th March, 1897, authorising the transfer, in each case, of an amount from one head of service to supplement a Vote for another service.

I have, &c.,
E. A. RENNIE,
Auditor-General.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 16 February, 1897.

Subject :—"Audit Act of 1870."—Application of a balance under section 18.

THE Colonial Treasurer recommends that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, may be pleased to authorise, in terms of section 18 of the "Audit Act of 1870," the application of £100 (one hundred pounds) of the balance of £476 4s. 6d. (four hundred and seventy-six pounds four shillings and sixpence), at credit of the amount of £600 (six hundred pounds) voted under item No. 179 of the Appropriation Act of 1896-7, for "Gold and Escort," to supplement the Vote "To meet unforeseen expenses to be hereafter accounted for" (item No. 222 of the Appropriation Act of 1896-7) which has been found to be insufficient to meet the charges upon it.

It may be mentioned that the Inspector-General of Police, by whose Department the Vote for "Gold and Escort" is expended, reports that it will bear the application herein recommended.

G. H. REID.

The Executive Council approve of the appropriation of the portion of the Vote referred to in the manner proposed, as provided by the Audit Act of 1870.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Minute 97-8, 16/2/97. Approved.—FRED. C. DARLEY, Lieut.-Govr., 16/2/97. Confirmed, 23/2/97.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 26 March, 1897.

Subject :—"Audit Act of 1870."—Application of a balance under section 18.

WITH reference to the authority granted by His Excellency the Governor-in-Council on the 16th ultimo, under section 18 of the "Audit Act of 1870," for the application of £100 of the balance at credit of the Vote of £600 for the current year for "Gold and Escort" (item No. 179), to supplement the Vote for the current year "To meet unforeseen expenses to be hereafter accounted for" (item No. 222), which had been found insufficient to meet the charges upon it, the Minister acting for the Colonial Treasurer now begs to report that funds are again required on the last-mentioned Vote, and recommends that authority be given to further supplement it by the application of a further sum of £100 from the Vote for "Gold and Escort."

It is reported by the Inspector-General of Police that the Vote for "Gold and Escort" will bear the proposed further application.

J. H. YOUNG.

The Executive Council advise that authority be granted for the appropriation of a further sum of £100 from the Vote to the Vote referred to.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Minute 97-14, 30/3/97. Approved.—HAMPDEN, 30/3/97. Confirmed, 6/4/97.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 25 February, 1897.

Subject :—"Audit Act of 1870."—Application of a balance under section 18.

THE Colonial Treasurer recommends that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, may be pleased to authorise, in terms of section 18 of the "Audit Act of 1870," the application of £587 10s. of the balance of £656 13s. 4d. on the "Salaries" Vote for the Audit Department (item No. 12, Appropriation Act, 1896-7), to supplement the Vote of £5,000 for the "Reorganisation of the Public Service" (item No. 32, Appropriation Act, 1896-7).

G. H. REID.

The Executive Council approve of the appropriation of the balance of the Vote referred to in the manner proposed.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Minute 97-9, 2/3/97. Approved.—HAMPDEN, 2/3/97. Confirmed, 9/3/97.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

STAMP AND PROBATE DUTIES BILL.

(PETITION FROM THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL PROVIDENT SOCIETY PRAYING THE HOUSE TO EXEMPT THE SOCIETY FROM FURTHER TAXATION UNDER THE.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 18 November, 1897.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Colony of
New South Wales.

HUMBLY SHOWETH:—

1. That the Australian Mutual Provident Society was established in the city of Sydney in the year 1849 for the purpose of transacting the business of life assurance on the mutual principle, whereby the whole of the surplus arising from the operations of the society is returned to the members whose premiums have produced it.

2. That notwithstanding the fact that the business of the society has been confined to the Australian Colonies, so successful have been its operations that it is now the largest mutual life office established in the British Empire.

3. That the facilities which the society has afforded to persons of small means to make reasonable provision for the support of their families in the event of death has probably been the means of preventing many thousands of persons from becoming dependent on the charity of the State.

4. That the society is already assessed to, and has paid income tax on, the interest derived from its investments on mortgage and land tax on properties held by it.

5. Your Petitioners view with alarm the proposal of the Government to impose a further burden on the society, and to impede the orderly conduct of its business by levying a stamp duty on life policies, on valuation reports, and on proxy forms.

6. Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will exempt the society from such further burden, for the following reasons:—

- (a) In the colonies of Victoria and Tasmania mutual life offices are entirely exempt from taxation.
- (b) The proposal to impose a stamp duty on policies involves a double tax, inasmuch as the first premium and renewal receipts for all payments made in respect of such policies are already subject to stamp duties where the amount of the payment is £2 or upwards.
- (c) The proposal to impose a stamp duty on valuation reports will not only seriously interfere with the society's business but will operate with great harshness on the poorer classes of the community, who seek to borrow money on mortgage, and who are already compelled to pay for such reports.
- (d) The proposal to impose a stamp duty on proxy forms will practically disfranchise such members of the society as are resident out of Sydney, and will consequently throw the management of its affairs into the hands of the small minority resident in this city.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

[Here follow 7 signatures.]

The common seal of the Australian Mutual
Provident Society was affixed hereto at a duly convened Board meeting in the presence of,—

ROBERT CAMERON,
Secretary.

No. 1.

The Collector of Customs to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir, Custom House, Sydney, 4 October, 1894.

I forward herewith a claim made by Mr. Ward for a reward of £100 to be paid to him in consideration of certain information given.

Mr. Ward was in the employ of Tooth & Co. (Limited) for about four years as an expert in brewing, with a special knowledge of a preparation for improving beer.

During the whole of the time of his engagement Mr. Ward added his preparation to the beer brewed by Tooth & Co., but about three weeks back he was dismissed by his employers, and Mr. Ward then immediately called upon me to make a charge against Tooth & Co. of evading the payment of excise.

I requested Messrs. Tooth & Co. to explain. They referred me to section 32 of the Beer Duty Act of 1887, which directs “that every person who withdraws beer liable to duty from any vessel or receptacle upon which the prescribed stamp has not been affixed for the purpose of bottling shall be liable, &c.,” and offered to pay any sum for which, in my opinion, they might have become liable.

109—A

The

The beer was not bottled from casks. It was bottled from a vat into which the beer was started from stamped casks and mixed with Mr. Ward's addition. I therefore decided that the outcome or mixture must be regarded as beer for bottling, and that duty must be paid on the quantity drawn off for bottling.

The company at once accepted my ruling and destroyed stamps (value £508 18s. 3d.) to cover the excise claim.

Mr. Ward claims £100 for the information he gave, although he knew from the first that duty had not been paid on the additions of his preparation to the beer.

I admit that Mr. Ward gave the information by which I was enabled to claim the amount mentioned above.

I consider that a reward of £50 should be ample in this instance, and I beg to recommend the payment of that sum to Mr. Ward, and that the amount be charged to the Customs Vote for contingent expenses.

I have, &c.,

JAMES POWELL,
Collector of Customs.

Submitted.—F.K., 5/10/94. I wish to know something more of this matter, of which I hear officially for the first time.—G.H.R., 5/10/94. The Collector of Customs.—F.K., 5/10/94. I called your attention to the matter, and asked you to bring it under the notice of the Treasurer. The facts are as stated herein. I shall be glad to offer any explanation required.—JAS. P., 6/10/94. The Under Secretary Finance and Trade. £50 approved.—G.H.R., 8/10/94. The Collector of Customs.—F.K., 8/10/94.

[Enclosures.]

Sir,

Referring to the information supplied by me to you with reference to Messrs. Tooth & Co. (Limited), on which information the above company paid your claim for excise duty, I now give you notice that I claim the sum of £100 out of the amount paid by Messrs. Tooth & Co. (Limited).

Yours, &c.,

F. G. WARD.

The Collector of Customs.

Sir,

I have the honor to inform you that I have received from Messrs. Tooth & Co., beer excise stamps to the value of £508 18s. 3d., in equilisation of duty payable by them on bottled beer, from 1st January, 1891, until the 31st August of this year.

These stamps I beg to hand you herewith, together with statement of values, and number of each stamp. You will also note that every one has been duly cancelled.

I have, &c.,

FRANK A. EAGAR,
Senior Inspector Breweries.

The Collector of Customs.

No. 2.

The Collector of Customs to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Custom House, Sydney, 26 October, 1894.

I have the honor to forward a letter addressed to me by Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, solicitors for Messrs. Tooth & Co. (Limited), with reference to a recent decision given by me, relating to the excise duty chargeable on beer bottled by their clients, and asking me to reconsider that decision, or to refer the question generally (as stated by them) for the opinion of the Crown Solicitor.

The case, as decided by me, and accepted by Messrs. Tooth & Co. by payment of the additional duty demanded, differs in my opinion from the case submitted by Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, which they now wish to refer.

Messrs. Tooth & Co., brewers, as bottlers, prepared for bottling (say) 100 hogsheads of beer, which were duly stamped as required by section 32 of the Beer Duty Act of 1887. The beer was not bottled from the casks, as required by Regulation No. 8, made under the Act, and dated 27th September, 1887. It was started into a vessel; certain additions were made largely increasing the quantity, and the whole was aerated in a separate vessel prior to bottling.

I claimed, under section 2 of the Act, that the additions became beer within the meaning of the Act, and that the vessel from which the beer was bottled should have borne stamps to the full amount of duty on the beer bottled therefrom, the contents of the stamped casks being less than the quantity bottled, and the bottling not having been from the casks.

The points raised by Messrs. Macnamara and Smith are, as I understand them, that they claim for their clients the right to remove beer in hogsheads duly stamped to the bottling department, and to treat the beer for bottling by adding a certain vegetable unfermented compound which, as they say, "naturally has the effect of increasing the bulk." They also claim that, having stamped the casks containing the beer for bottling, they should not be called upon to pay duty on the beer bottled for actual delivery. They suggest that when the brewer has stamped the casks he is at liberty to remove the beer for sale or consumption, or for bottling, or any other purpose, and that there is no provision in the Act charging him with any further duty on the liquor, no matter what use he may make of it.

It appeared to me that the beer taken from the brewery for bottling had reached a certain stage only of preparation, and was in a condition unfit for bottling, the addition of other matter of whatever kind, intended to make beer, or imitation of beer, rendered the whole of the out-turn subject to the excise duty.

I think the intention of the Act, and certainly the intention of the Regulation No. 9, was that a record was to be kept. The words are:

Every brewer who carries on the bottling of beer shall enter in a book solely for that purpose the kind of beer and number in detail of hogsheads, barrels, half hogsheads, kilderkins, firkins, and kegs of beer which have been bottled by him, and the quantity removed in bottles from the brewery, &c.

The object being to check the bottling out-turn against the quantity taken from the stamped casks.

The beer for bottling should, in my opinion, be wholly prepared for bottling in the brewery, and, in the brewery, transferred to casks to be stamped all ready for bottling. In this way only can the full duties on the beer going into consumption be collected, and in this way only can section 32 of the Act be complied with.

I understand section 32 as requiring that beer in vessels stamped and removed for the purpose of bottling shall be withdrawn from the stamped casks only. The Regulation No. 8 favours this view by directing that no beer shall be bottled in any brewery except from a cask, and no beer shall be withdrawn from any cask for the purpose of bottling the same in the brewery where the same is made, unless such cask has been duly stamped, and before any beer shall be withdrawn from any such cask for the purpose of bottling the same, the stamp shall be destroyed or defaced.

I think I am right in stating that Messrs. Tooth & Co. are the only bottling brewers who add a preservative to their beer—I believe the preservative increases the bulk of their bottled stout by 25 per cent., and their bottled ale by from 12 to 15 per cent.

Other bottlers add, as a preservative, salicylic acid, in the proportion of 1 part in 10,000, to resist decomposition, but the addition is infinitesimal compared with the additions made by Tooth & Co. to their beer.

My contention is that all the liquor bottled by Tooth & Co., and sold as beer, is liable to the excise duty.

I have, &c.,

JAMES POWELL,
Collector of Customs.

Submitted—F.K., 30. Since Tooth & Co. paid the claim without protest, I cannot see the propriety of going any further in the matter.—G.H.R., 30. The Collector of Customs.—F.K., 31. Perhaps this matter might now be referred to the Crown Solicitor, as suggested.—F.K., 2/11/94. Approved, as the duty was paid under protest.—G.H.R., 2. The Crown Solicitor.—F.K., 2.

[Enclosure.]

Sir,

Sydney, 20 October, 1894.

We are instructed by Tooth & Co. (Limited) to write to you with reference to your recent decision relating to the excise duty chargeable on beer bottled by this company, and with a view to a reconsideration of your decision.

We understand that the practice with regard to this bottled beer is as follows:—

Tooth & Co. (Limited) brew, say, 1 hogshead of beer: this hogshead is duly stamped as required by the Beer Duty Act of 1887 (section 15), and then is removed to the bottling department (which is on the same premises as the brewery), and is then treated for bottling.

As is well known, it is always necessary before bottling beer to add to the beer certain vegetable compounds for the purpose of clearing the beer and freeing it from sediment, and for the better preservation of the beer; in fact, beer, pure and simple, could not be bottled with advantage.

This compound that is added is unfermented, and naturally has the effect of increasing the bulk.

We understand that you have decided that under the Act excise duty is chargeable not only on the original hogshead as brewed, but upon the quantity which, after the above treatment, is actually bottled.

With all respect, we submit that this decision is opposed to a true interpretation of the Act of Parliament in question.

The Beer Duty Act of 1887 (50 Vic. No. 38) enacts, section 7, that "after the passing of the Act there shall be charged, collected, and paid, for the use of Her Majesty, upon all beer brewed in New South Wales, and sold, or removed, for consumption, &c., an excise duty of 3d. per gallon, which duty shall be paid by the brewer by whom such beer has been brewed, in the manner and at the time hereafter specified."

The time when such duty has to be paid appears to be prescribed by section 9, which sets out the conditions of the bond to be given by the brewer, namely, to pay the duty payable on all beer made by him before the same is sold or removed for consumption or sale.

The manner in which this duty is to be paid is prescribed in section 15, namely, "the brewer is to obtain from the collector the proper stamps," and is to "affix upon the spigot or tap-hole of every hogshead, barrel, cask, vessel, or other receptacle in which any beer is contained a stamp denoting the amount of duty payable in such a way that the stamp will be destroyed when the liquor is drawn."

From these provisions it is perfectly clear that excise duty is chargeable only upon beer that is brewed within the Colony. "Brewing" under the interpretation clause is to include "every process by which beer can be made," and "beer" includes every fermented beverage purporting to be beer, or made in imitation of beer.

It seems to us, from a study of these provisions, that the Act contemplates that the brewing or process of making the beer is absolutely completed at the time that the liquor is put into the hogshead, on the spigot or tap-hole of which is to be affixed the proper stamp denoting that the duty has been paid. When this is done the brewer is at liberty to remove this beer for sale or consumption, or if he please, for bottling or any other purpose. There is no provision in the Act charging him with any further duty on the liquor, no matter what use he may make of it.

This view is supported by a consideration of the provisions of section 32. That section imposes a penalty on every person who (1) "withdraws any beer liable to duty from any hogshead upon which the prescribed stamp has not been affixed for the purpose of bottling the same"; or (2) "carries on the business of bottling beer in any brewery, or on premises having communication with such brewery, except as may be prescribed," that is, by regulations under the Act.

From this section it appears to us to be clear that the Legislature has treated brewing or the making of beer as one thing, and bottling (with its necessary process of mixing other compounds) as another.

The bottling business is not to be carried on on the brewery premises, except under such regulations as the Executive may prescribe, and the brewer is not to withdraw beer liable to duty, i.e., beer that has been brewed (in other words, the process of making of which is complete) from any hogshead which has not been stamped, for the purpose of bottling; and the necessary implication follows that if he has duly stamped his hogshead he is at perfect liberty to withdraw the beer for the purpose of bottling, and in bottling he is perfectly entitled to use such necessary treatment, including the admixture of unfermented compounds, and cannot be chargeable with any further duty.

If the bottling business was carried on by a third person, and the beer was supplied by a brewer, it seems to us to be perfectly clear that the brewer, having stamped his hogshead, is at liberty to send it over to the bottler, and that the latter is entitled to bottle that beer, and sell the beer in bottles without paying any duty whatever.

And it seems to us that it can make no difference whatever that the beer when brewed is bottled, not by a third person, but by the brewer himself; the only provision that the Act makes with regard to this being, that if the bottling is carried on within the precincts of the brewery, it shall be subject to regulations by the Government.

Another argument might be adduced from the wording of section 13, which requires the brewer every month to render a true statement showing the estimated quantity of beer brewed. If this process to which beer is subjected before bottling is to be taken to be a part of the "brewing," it is clear that the company is not bound to include in their monthly statement any beer which has been taken to their bottling department and set aside for the purpose of being treated, preparatory to bottling. This, according to ordinary notions, is beer which has been brewed on the premises, but according to the meaning now sought to be given to the statutory expression, is clearly beer which has not been completely brewed, and therefore should not be included in the returns, and is not at that stage liable to duty.

As is well known, Acts of Parliament of this kind are to be construed most strictly against the Crown, and in favour of the subject; taxes and duties are not to be imposed on the subject, except under the clear authority of an Act of Parliament, and we submit that, on these principles, if there is any doubt as to which construction of this Act is to prevail, that construction must be allowed which is against the imposition of this additional duty.

We have now the honor to request that you will reconsider your decision, and, if you do not see your way to adopt the view here presented on behalf of the company, we would ask that the matter be referred to the Honorable the Attorney-General, for his advice and direction.

The Collector of Customs.

Yours, &c.,

MACNAMARA and SMITH.

Memorandum

Memorandum for the Collector of Customs.

Custom House, Sydney, 25 October, 1894.

In their letter of the 20th instant addressed to you, Messrs. Macnamara and Smith state that "As is well known, it is always necessary, before bottling beer, to add to the beer certain vegetable compounds for the purpose of clearing the beer, and freeing it from sediment, and for the better preservation of the beer; in fact, beer pure and simple could not be bottled with advantage. . . . This compound that is added is unfermented, and naturally has the effect of increasing the bulk."

Assuming this contention to be correct, it would seem to end the matter, for brew, or brewed, is construed by section 2 of the Beer Duty Act, 1887, as applying to every process by which beer can be made; how, then, can beer be said to be brewed or made when further ingredients have to be added to it to complete the process and render it fit for bottling?

The excise duty upon beer is charged by liquid measure, not by strength or weight (50 Vic. No. 38, sec. 7).

I therefore submit that no brewer has a right to make strong beer, then to increase its bulk by added matter, and to pay duty upon the former decoction only.

In the case under review the added liquid is coloured to resemble beer; therefore it is made in imitation of beer (see 50 Vic. No. 38, sec. 2).

This compound, when bottled and sold, is labelled either ale or porter; therefore it purports to be beer (see 50 Vic. No. 38, sec. 2).

I desire to draw particular attention to the fact that this so-called "preservative" is mixed in the aerating chamber, with the original decoction, being one of the necessary processes of brewing for bottling purposes.

Senior Inspector.

The Crown Solicitor to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 26 February, 1895.

In compliance with your verbal request, per telephone, I have the honor to return papers in connection with the alleged evasion of the Beer Duty Act by Messrs. Tooth and Company (Limited), and numbered 9,431.

I have, &c.,
GEO. COLQUHOUN,
Crown Solicitor.

Return and say that the opinion is urgently required, I having promised to lay a copy on the Table some time ago.—G.H.R. The Crown Solicitor.—F.K., 7/3/95.

The Crown Solicitor to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 9 March, 1895.

I have the honor to return the papers numbered 2,192, relating to a recent decision by the Collector of Customs as to excise duty charged by him upon beer bottled by Messrs. Tooth & Co.

After a careful perusal of the papers and consideration of the Act, it appears to me that the circumstances mentioned in the minute of the Collector of Customs justify his action, and that he has correctly interpreted the Beer Duty Act of 1887.

Whilst admitting the contention of Messrs. Tooth & Co.'s advisers that "taxes and duties are not to be imposed on the subject except under the clear authority of an Act of Parliament," it appears to me, after very careful consideration of the Act referred to, that the duty in this instance has been properly charged.

The mandatory part of the Beer Act is in the 7th section, which says that an excise duty of 3d. per gallon "shall be charged" and "paid by the brewer" upon all beer brewed in New South Wales, "and sold or removed for consumption or sale."

The 9th section requires that a bond shall be entered into for the payment of duty "on all beer made by or for him (the brewer) before the same is sold or removed for consumption or sale."

The interpretation clause, after defining "beer," gives the meaning of the words "brew," or "brewed," which, it says, "applies to every process by which beer can be made."

It must, I think, be admitted that this beer is made for the purpose of sale, and upon it must be paid the full duty per gallon before the same is sold or removed for consumption or sale.

There are some clauses in the Act which are, in my opinion, to be considered as directory clauses, such as the 15th, which provides a method for ascertaining the amount of duty, and also the 19th, whilst the 9th regulation renders it necessary that proper books shall be kept, in which, amongst other things, shall be recorded "the quantity removed in bottles from the brewery, &c."

It is contended that the making of beer is "absolutely completed at the time that the liquor is put into the hogshead, on the spigot or taphole of which is to be affixed the proper stamp denoting that the duty has been paid." I cannot agree with this contention. If, as is admitted, "it is always necessary to add to the beer certain vegetable compounds for the purpose of clearing the beer, &c.," and of course thereby rendering it "fit for consumption or sale" it appears to me that this is another process in the brewing of beer, and that the completion of the brewing is only "absolute" after such process has been carried out.

The duty is imposed upon beer "brewed" and "sold or removed for consumption or sale."

In my opinion the affixing of a spigot to every hogshead, &c., is but a step in the ascertainment of the duty, and if by any further process used for the purpose of clarifying and rendering the draft beer suitable for bottling, the bulk of the article has been increased, such bulk or quantity is to be ascertained by the quantity removed in bottles as pointed out in the 9th regulation, and, as a consequence, the duty is charged accordingly upon "beer sold or removed for consumption or sale."

Sir,

Crown Solicitor's Office, Sydney, 17 October, 1896.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your B.C. numbered as in margin, requesting return of papers sent to me under your letter of 26th June (as per margin), in which you mention that you forward to me the whole of the papers in the case of Tooth & Company (Limited) and the Beer Duties Act, together with a copy of Hansard containing a report of the proceedings in Parliament on the 10th instant (June), and ask me "to go into the question of the refund to the abovenamed firm, and to advise Mr. Reid whether any refund was legally payable under the circumstances, and if not, what is the best course to be pursued in the matter." 7,723,

After having again given this subject anxious consideration, I see no reason to alter the advising contained in my letter of the 9th March last.

Another question, however, has been asked, viz., "whether any refund was legally payable?" The answer to this question depends upon whether the refund was of duty legally payable in the first instance. If it was paid upon beer brewed and sold under the circumstances detailed in the Collector of Customs' minute of 26th October, 1894, then I consider that the refund should not have been made. It may be, however, that part of the beer upon which duty was paid and refunded was not brewed under the same conditions, but part of it was, and that it may be difficult to ascertain upon how much a refund was properly made, and upon how much there should not have been any refund at all. Considering this, I do not think it would be wise to incur the expense of seeking to recover either the whole or a part, according to the the circumstances of the refund that has been already made; but as to paying back the amount that was paid, as is stated "under protest," I am of opinion that the request to do so should not be complied with, and Messrs. Tooth & Co. should be left to their legal remedy if they consider that the duty was not properly claimed.

The question at issue could then be decided by the Supreme Court.

MEMORANDUM.

Customs House, Sydney, 26 October, 1896.

I AM directed by the Treasurer to report especially upon the passage underlined in the letter of the Crown Solicitor, dated 17th October, 1896.

The paragraph referred to is as follows:—"Another question, however, has been asked, viz., whether any refund was legally payable? The answer to this question depends upon whether the refund was of duty legally payable in the first instance. If it was paid upon beer brewed and sold under the circumstances detailed in the Collector of Customs' minute of 26th October, 1894, then I consider that the refund should not have been made. It may be, however, that part of the beer upon which duty was paid and refunded was not brewed under the same conditions, but part of it was, and that it may be difficult to ascertain upon how much a refund was properly made, and upon how much there should not have been any refund at all. Considering this, I do not think it would be wise to incur the expense of seeking to recover either the whole or a part, according to the circumstances of the refund that has been already made. But as to paying back the amount that was paid, as is stated, 'under protest,' I am of opinion that the request to do so should not be complied with, and Messrs. Tooth & Co. should be left to their legal remedy, if they consider that the duty was not properly claimed."

I beg to point out that the only refund in question is that of excise duty on eighty-four hogsheads, containing 4,284 gallons of beer, £53 11s. The refund was allowed on the 25th April, 1893, on the certificate of the Assistant Inspector that the contents of the eighty-four hogsheads were emptied "down the sewer." This operation and refund took place eighteen months before Mr. Ward gave the information which led to a surcharge against Tooth & Co. of £508 18s. 3d., in which was included the sum of £53 11s., refunded on the 25th April, 1893, on the eighty-four hogsheads above referred to.

My reasons for recommending the refund of the duty on the eighty-four hogsheads are fully explained in my memo. of the 23rd June, 1896, attached.

At

At the time the refund was recommended there was no suspicion of wrong, and when the addition of Ward's blend was made known in 1894 the over-claim extended to 16 hogsheads only. As I have already explained, the whole amount of the refund on the 84 hogsheads was debited to Tooth & Co. when the accounts were adjusted in 1894.

The Crown Solicitor is of opinion "that it would not be wise to incur the expense of seeking to recover either the whole or part according to the circumstances of the refund that has been already made."

When Mr. Colquhoun gave his opinion, I do not think he was aware that the whole amount had been refunded by Tooth & Co.

JAMES POWELL,
Collector of Customs.

[Enclosures.]

MEMORANDUM. Subject.—Refund of excise duty upon eighty-four hogsheads of spoilt beer granted to Messrs. Tooth & Co. (Limited) in April, 1893.

Custom House, Sydney, 23 October, 1896.

IN his letter of the 17th October, addressed to the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, the Crown Solicitor advises:— "Another question, however, has been asked, viz., whether any refund was legally payable? The answer to this question depends upon whether the refund was of duty legally payable in the first instance. If it was paid upon beer brewed and sold under the circumstances detailed in the Collector of Customs' minute of 26th October, 1894, then I consider that the refund should not have been made. It may be, however, that part of the beer upon which duty was paid and refunded was not brewed under the same conditions, but part of it was, and that it may be difficult to ascertain upon how much a refund was properly made, and upon how much there should not have been any refund at all. Considering this, I do not think it would be wise to incur the expense of seeking to recover either the whole or a part, according to the circumstances of the refund that has been already made."

I may first mention that this refund was granted and paid about eighteen months before the question of "added blend" was brought under the notice of the Department.

A certain proportion, estimated at about 16 hogsheads, consisted of "Ward's blend," the duty upon which, amounting to £10 4s., was unpaid; but, on the other hand, the whole 84 hogsheads were debited to Messrs. Tooth & Co. in their bottling account (copy herewith).

The legality of allowing any refund under the circumstances has been questioned, the beer not having been sold or removed from the brewery premises, but the Beer Duty Act of 1887 (section 1) is to be read with the Customs Regulation Act of 1879, and the 86th section of the latter empowers the return of duties paid on goods damaged in warehouse.

It would be obviously unfair to retain any duty paid upon unsaleable goods. In bottling, brewers have to affix stamps before commencing operations, and are therefore unable to protect themselves from loss through beer spoiling in bottle. Bulk or cask beer, on the contrary, need not be stamped until leaving the brewery, and provision is made under section 23 of the Beer Duty Act for allowing a refund upon the same if unfit for use after removal.

No. 10.

The Collector of Customs to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Custom House, Sydney, 2 July, 1895.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your memo. of the 11th May, forwarding a copy of Hansard, No. 50, and requesting me to report, for the information of the Treasurer, on matters brought under notice in Parliament by Mr. Rose, M.P.

I have carefully read the speech delivered by Mr. Rose, and I think it will be better to report briefly the circumstances which have given rise to rather extreme accusations before I report on the statements introduced and commented upon by Mr. Rose in his speech.

Mr. Ward, who had been in the employ of Messrs. Tooth & Co. (Limited) for a period of about four years, called upon me at the Custom House on or about the 25th September, 1894, and gave me certain information. Before introducing the subject Mr. Ward desired to know what reward would be paid to him for the information he wished to give. I told him that I could not make any bargain whatever, but I expressed my willingness to recommend the payment of a reasonable reward, adequate, in my opinion, to the value of the information given. I then sent for Mr. Eagar, the Senior Inspector of Breweries, and Mr. Ward made a general statement to the effect that he, as the inventor of a certain liquid for the improvement of beer, had, during the time he was employed by Tooth & Co., added such liquid to the beer bottled by the firm.

He explained that he had left the employ in consequence of some misunderstanding, and considered it his duty to call my attention to the fact that the additions to beer by him had not paid excise duty, and that the revenue had suffered to the extent of 25 per cent. on bottled stout and from 12 to 15 per cent. on bottled ale. Mr. Ward also stated that 5 per cent. of the casks of beer for bottling were taken to the bottling department from the brewery unstamped.

Mr. Eagar, by my request, visited the brewery on the same or the next day after Mr. Ward saw me, and found Mr. Ward's statements correct.

Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Tooth saw me with Mr. Eagar on the subject. It was admitted by Mr. Mitchell that Ward's statement was substantially correct—that liquid was added; and his contention, supported by Mr. Tooth, was that the firm had not in any way attempted to evade the just payment of duty; they considered that the law had been complied with by affixing stamps for the full amount of duty upon each hogshead (except as will be explained) taken from the brewery to the bottling floor. It was also urged that the addition of a liquid (Mr. Ward's secret) which was not beer should not be charged with duty.

The

The position I took was, that the bottling had not been from the casks as they left the brewery, that the beer was taken from the stamped casks, started into a vessel, and that the liquid (not beer) prepared by Mr. Ward was then added, and when the whole mixture was in fit condition the bottling took place, and the compound so mixed and bottled was then sold as beer, and therefore liable to the excise beer duty on the full quantity sold.

I demanded the duty estimated by Mr. Eagar to be due, and Mr. Mitchell arranged for the cancellation of beer duty stamps to the amount of £508 18s. 3d. on the 29th September as a surcharge of duty on beer bottled by the firm from the 1st January, 1891, to 31st August, 1894.

On the 4th October Mr. Ward claimed a reward of £100 as payment for the information he had given. I recommended the payment of £50 to Mr. Ward, because I felt it to be my duty to keep faith with him, and because as the whole transaction had been treated at the brewery by Mr. Ward and the firm as a trade secret, I might not have been in a position to make a claim against the firm unless Mr. Ward had, after nearly four years' participation in the profits of his secret, unburdened his mind to me when he was dismissed by his employers.

When Mr. Mitchell paid the claim made for additional duty it was distinctly understood that an appeal would be made to the Treasurer against my decision, and on the 20th October an appeal was made by Messrs. Tooth & Co.'s solicitors, Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, to me, which was in due course forwarded to you; and a report followed on the 9th March, 1895, in which the Crown Solicitor stated his opinion that the duty was properly imposed upon beer brewed and sold or removed for consumption or sale.

I think the foregoing is a fair statement of the whole affair from an official point of view, and I now turn, as directed by you, to the speech delivered on the subject in Parliament, by Mr. Rose, on the 1st May, 1895.

Mr. Rose, in his speech, introduced a great deal of entirely new matter, in the shape of a sworn affidavit by Mr. Ward, in which he made new charges. I do not undertake to defend Messrs. Tooth & Co. They may have brewed their stout excessively black for one object, namely, to receive added matter, "thus reducing the cost of excise 25 per cent.;" and Mr. Ward may (as he tells us now) have applied the added matter, which (he now says) was made from the constituents of beer. The whole affair was Mr. Ward's secret—it was his invention; but what it was made from I cannot say, and I fail to understand what the strength of the beer has to do with the question.

I submit that Mr. Ward's new charges should be referred to Tooth & Co.; but I will endeavour to deal with the statements in the speech by Mr. Rose, which reflect upon the Department and the conduct of the officers charged with the control of the breweries.

Mr. Rose states "All that was done was to ask for £500 as arrears." The amount demanded and paid was £508 18s. 3d. (see notes herewith, Account "A," page 1), and the figures are shown in the Dr. and Cr. account. From January, 1891, to 31st August, 1894, the whole quantity of beer bottled at "Tooth's" was 381,667 gallons. It is assumed this included 76,320 gallons of Mr. Ward's blend. Duty was paid on 342,232 gallons in the usual course of business, and the surcharge (the result of Mr. Ward's information) represents an additional 40,713 gallons.

It will be seen that in making up the accounts Tooth & Co. have been charged an additional duty of 25 per cent. on all their bottlings from January, 1891, to August, 1894. I submit that Tooth & Co. have paid the full amount due for excise duty, and that the Department has no further claim against the firm on that account.

Mr. Rose, quoting Ward (page 2, notes), says "That during four years 500,000 gallons of beer went into consumption, of which 125,000 gallons did not pay duty." The total quantity of bottled beer sold during that period amounts to 339,210 gallons, leaving 25,386 gallons in stock (see Account "B" page 8, notes). Duty was originally paid on 342,232, to which add the surcharge, 40,713 gallons, and the evidence is complete that all dues have been collected or accounted for.

Mr. Rose, quoting Ward (page 3, notes), says "Tooth & Co.'s books show that we sold thousands of gallons of beer that never paid 1s. of duty." The thousands of gallons represent Mr. Ward's addition, upon which I claimed duty (as beer) when Mr. Ward gave me the information, after he was dismissed by Tooth & Co.

It is perhaps desirable to know something about the additions made to Tooth's beer by Mr. Ward. The liquid, whatever it is, was Mr. Ward's secret, and until I saw Mr. Ward's affidavit published in Hansard, I did not know that the liquor was made from the constituents of beer, and I am not sure of it now.

Mr. Ward says (page 3, notes) I brewed about 100,000 gallons of liquid. Tooth's say that "Ward" made and was paid for 1,462 hogsheads (notes, page 3), equal 68,714 gallons. Mr. Ward when he gave information handed in a statement (page 12, notes) showing that during the four years he was employed he used 1,624 hogsheads of blend, or 76,028 gallons, and upon reference to the Dr. and Cr. bottling account at page 1 of the notes herewith, it will be seen that we debited Tooth's for 1,696 hogshead of blend, equal, at 45 gallons per hogshead, to 76,320 gallons.

These figures prove on Ward's written statement that we have collected duty on the whole of the liquor, preservative, blend, or constituents of beer, described by Mr. Ward as his secret preparation, and made by him during the time he was in Tooth's employ.

The statement made by Mr. Ward that his department (bottling) received an allowance of 50 hogsheads of beer in every 1,000—is answered by the Inspector (page 3, notes). The allowance is, as Mr. Eagar states, perfectly fair and legitimate—it has received the sanction of the Department, and is an accepted allowance.

Mr. Rose (notes 18, 19, 22, 23) stated that the whole of the returns for over four years are false, that the entries in the books were not verified for four years, and that the officers of the Department were humbugged, because books were shown in which a diminished quantity was entered.

It is admitted that the bottling returns supplied by Tooth & Co. to this Department were incorrect during the period of Mr. Ward's engagement, and they were so to the extent of Mr. Ward's additional liquor. Mr. Ward's conclusions on the subject are wrong. The entries relating to excise were verified throughout the whole period, but Mr. Ward's secret was kept a secret; Mr. Ward's books were never seen by the Excise officers, and Mr. Ward never tendered his books for examination. The beer from the brewery for bottling was stamped for delivery to the bottling floor in charge of Mr. Ward. Mr. Ward manipulated the beer, but he certainly did not succeed in (as Mr. Rose put it) humbugging the officers, because the officers knew nothing of Mr. Ward or his methods of book-keeping and beer-improving.

Mr.

Mr. Rose (notes 25 and 27) said: Why should we ask this firm for arrears instead of prosecuting them? I have proved this firm has been evading the payment of duties, making thousands of pounds, and all they are asked to pay is a paltry £500.

The latter part of the above is sensational, but it is not exact. Mr. Ward had to do with the bottling, and it is shown that he was paid for 1,462 hogsheads of his blend, equal to 68,714 gallons, yet Mr. Rose makes a statement that the firm has evaded the payment of duty amounting to thousands of pounds.

The question asked by Mr. Rose, "Why should we ask this firm for arrears instead of prosecuting them?" is a question calling for reply. I heard all that Mr. Ward had to say when he first saw me and gave information, with an expectation of reward. I heard all that the firm said in reply. I did not believe that Tooth & Co. at any time intended to defraud the revenue, and although my reading of the law (supported subsequently by the Crown Solicitor) justified me in demanding duty on all Mr. Ward's blend used and delivered from the brewery as beer, I thought it quite possible that an appeal might reverse my decision. I never suspected fraudulent intent, and thought the question open to argument.

I will illustrate my meaning by putting a case—a possible case—bearing upon the matter. If I, as a dealer in beer, and not being a brewer, purchase from Tooth & Co. 100 hogsheads of beer, and remove the beer to my store, all duties of excise being paid and the casks duly stamped, after fining the beer, wish to bottle it for sale, I can do so without breaking the law. Then suppose that I am introduced to Mr. Ward, and that he imparts his secret, or that I engage him to add his preservative or blend to my duty-paid beer, increasing the quantity 25 per cent., can I be charged with defrauding the excise?

I had this in my mind when I demanded payment of the surcharge, and I afterwards found that Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, on behalf of Tooth & Co., were of opinion that the bottling business might be carried on by a third person (not being a brewer), and the beer sold without committing a breach of the law.

Mr. Rose (notes, page 6, No. 26) said a brewer at Goulburn, without money and without political influence, omitted to stamp some casks of beer, and his little brewery was confiscated.

Mr. Rose has been misled in this matter. I have not met with any case similar to that of Tooth & Co., and I know that no influence was used. The Inspector who has had the charge of the breweries from the day the excise duty was imposed on beer, informs me (page 6, notes) that five years ago a brewer at Goulburn was fined not exceeding 20s., for sending out unstamped beer. Some further charges were withdrawn. The beer was not seized, and the brewery was certainly not confiscated.

Mr. Crick, M.P., in his speech on the subject, said, "An officer of the Department under him (the Treasurer), fixed the penalty at £500. If the Hon. Member for Argyle is right, and if these returns are correct, the penalty, instead of being £500, should have been over £2,000, and it certainly does seem to me that this is a matter which should not stop where it is."

The Treasurer interjected: "I quite agree with the Hon. Member. That is quite new to me; I never heard it before."

Mr. Crick's "if" is most important. In the first place, a penalty of £500 was not fixed; the duty on the short-paid beer was demanded, and the demand was promptly met. In the second place, £2,000 would represent a short payment of 160,000 gallons of beer—a quantity very far in excess of the whole number of gallons of blend made by Mr. Ward during the time he was in Tooth's employ.

I have to the best of my ability dealt with the original charges made by Mr. Ward against Tooth & Co. Mr. Ward's information proved correct, and Tooth & Co. admitted they had not paid duty on "Ward's" preparation. Mr. Ward knew that duty was not paid on the addition, but he remained in the employ of the firm without objection to practices he denounced when he was dismissed.

I have, &c.,

JAMES POWELL,
Collector of Customs.

As I propose to lay these papers on the Table of the Legislative Assembly, I think Messrs. Tooth & Co. should be asked to peruse the statement made by Mr. Rose in the Assembly, of which a Hansard copy should be sent, and should also be asked to make such reply as they deem fit.—G.H.R., 10/8/95.

1. Mr. Rose.—All that was done was to ask for £500 as arrears.

Collector of Customs to Senior Inspector of Breweries.—Describe what was done; what was the amount demanded, and how the amount was arrived at?

Senior Inspector in reply.—Messrs. Tooth & Co. (Limited) were surcharged 6 gallons per hogshead, equal to 1s. 6d. each on 6,785½ hogsheads, amounting to £508 18s. 3d. From experience I find that a hogshead of beer, when bottled, owing to waste, sediment, bursting of bottles, &c., usually turns out from 21½ to 23½ dozens, say from 43 to 47 gallons. Taking 45 gallons as the mean, the amount due was arrived at as follows:—

Account "A."

MESSRS. TOOTH & Co. (Limited) in account with the Excise Beer Duty Act of 1887—Bottling Department.

Dr.—January, 1891, to 31st August, 1894—6,785½ hogsheads, each 45	305,347

2. Mr. Rose.—There was no word about prosecution—no word in the papers, no publicity—but nearly four weeks after the money was paid without demur a protest came from the lawyers of Messrs. Tooth & Co.

Collector to Inspector.—Was there not a verbal protest and an understanding that the amount was paid subject to appeal?

Inspector in reply.—At the interview that Messrs. Mitchell, Tooth, and myself had with you on the 24th September, 1894, it was thoroughly understood that Tooth & Co. reserved the right of appealing against any surcharge made by the Department.

3. Mr. Rose.—The lawyers asked the Premier to have the case reconsidered by the Crown Law Officers.

Collector.—I do not remember anything about reconsideration. Messrs. Macnamara and Smith asked me to reconsider my decision or to refer the question to the Crown Solicitor.

Inspector.—Messrs. Tooth & Co.'s solicitor, Mr. E. A. Smith (Macnamara and Smith), waited upon you, stating that he wished the whole matter to be referred to the Crown Solicitor for his opinion as to the legality of the surcharge.

4 to 7. Mr. Rose.—Book with Mr. Tooth's initials proves that during four years 500,000 gallons of beer have gone into circulation, one-fourth of which, viz., 125,000 gallons, did not pay duty.

Collector.—Is this as stated?

Inspector.—Mr. Ward was paid so much per hogshead on quantity of blend made by him. To enable him to receive his money from the cashier, Mr. Tooth used to initial a book as proof that the quantity claimed for had actually been made. 339,210 gallons of bottled beer were actually sold between 1st January, 1891, and 31st August, 1894, leaving 25,386 gallons in stock. If the surcharge be added to the duty originally paid, the excise claim has been fully satisfied. (See Account "B," page 8, notes.)

Original payment...	342,232 gallons.
Add surcharge	40,713 "
									382,945 "

8. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—(Ward) I brewed about 100,000 gallons of liquid. This was done to reduce the cost of beer, chiefly through evading the excise.

Collector.—Is this the preservative (Ward's secret)?

Inspector.—I am informed that Mr. Ward actually made and was paid for 1,462 hogsheads blend, say at 47 gallons per hogshead, 68,714 gallons.

9. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—This added matter was made from the constituents of beer, the method of applying same was my own invention.

Collector.—Does this mean brewed?

Inspector.—The composition of this blend is a trade secret belonging to Mr. Ward; I do not know the ingredients.

10. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—All the stout was brewed excessively black for one object, namely, to receive this added matter, thus reducing the cost of excise 25 per cent.

Collector.—Does this mean that the beer was brewed stronger, in order to receive the preservative?

Inspector.—This statement is probably correct, the blend being of a light colour; some darkening mixture would have to be added, either to the beer or the blend, to bring the porter to the proper shade.

11. Mr. Rose (quoting Mr. Ward's affidavit).—My department received an allowance of 50 hogsheads of beer in every 1,000—50 thrown in without stamps.

Collector.—Explain this.

Inspector.—This statement is true, but is easily explained. The final process of preparing the beer for bottling is completed in the upper floor of the bottling warehouse, and 5 per cent., say 1 hogshead in 20, is allowed for topping, i.e., filling up the hogsheads which froth over. The allowance is perfectly fair and legitimate.

12. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—Tooth & Co.'s books show that we sold thousands of gallons of beer that never paid 1s. of excise.

Collector.—Is this as stated?

Inspector.—Messrs. Tooth & Co. deny that any of their books are in the possession of Mr. Ward. The thousands of gallons mentioned were brought to account by the payment of the surcharge, £508 18s. 3d., being 3d. per gallon on 40,713 gallons.

13. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—I have a book, initialled by Mr. Tooth, showing that in ten weeks (1893) I brewed 900 hogsheads of liquor that never paid 1s. of excise—over £600 loss to the revenue.

Collector.—This is specific charge, and should be capable of proof or disproof.

Inspector.—In the period mentioned Mr. Ward actually made 869 hogsheads of blend; of this quantity, 344 hogsheads were used in bulk beer, and the duty paid.

14. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—In November, 1892, Tooth applied for drawback on 80 hogsheads of stout—one-fourth of which never paid excise. The whole of the drawback was credited to my department. (Ward.)

Collector.—Can this be proved or otherwise?

Inspector.—The date given is incorrect; in April, 1893, a refund was granted on 84 hogsheads, say 4,284 gallons of decanted beer (i.e., bottled beer, duty paid, returned to unstamped casks).

15. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—We brewed large quantities of hop ale, which was largely used in the stout, and never paid any excise.

Collector.—Is this as stated?

Inspector.—I understand that a few hogsheads of hop beer were mixed in by way of experiment, but the result was not a success.

16. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—There are over forty false declarations made.

Collector.—Is this so?

Inspector.—Incorrect, I think, would be a better word to use than false, as Messrs. Tooth & Co. were of opinion that they were entitled to use "Ward's blend" as an addition, without payment of duty as beer.

17. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—The day I laid my information with the Collector there were over 125 casks without stamps, and between 15 and 20,000 dozen of ale and stout insufficiently stamped.
Collector.—Is this so?
Inspector.—These 125 hogsheads were all greatly ullaged, and were repacked into 45 hogsheads, upon which stamps were affixed. The total stock of bottled beer on hand was, on the 31st August, 1894, 12,700 dozen quarts.
18. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—The stock-books of the bottled beer are copies of the books in my possession, and they show our sales were thousands of dozens in excess of the amount paid excise.
Collector.—Is this as stated?
Inspector.—Messrs. Tooth & Co. deny this statement. It would be as well to point out that any books, jottings, and memoranda in the possession of Mr. Ward are not brewery books.
19. Mr. Rose (quoting Ward's affidavit).—The whole of the bottled beer returns to the Collector for over four years are false.
Collector.—Is this so? If Mr. Ward means that the added preservative does not appear in the bottling returns, I agree that the returns are to that extent not correct.
Inspector.—Vide supra paragraph 16.
20. Mr. Rose (quoting Collector of Customs).—I believe the preservative increases the bulk of bottled stout by 25 per cent., and bottled ale from 12 to 15 per cent.
Collector.—This statement was made to me by Mr. Ward. Tooth & Co. have always maintained that it is an over-estimate.
21. Mr. Rose.—He (Collector) tells the Premier that Tooth & Co. are the only firm of brewers in the Colony who doctor their bottled ale to the extent of 25 per cent.
Collector.—I have never used the word "doctor" in connection with this business.
22. Mr. Rose.—The entries in the books were not verified for four years.
Collector.—Is this so?
Inspector.—This is a mistake; the books were regularly verified, and compared with the monthly statements.
23. Mr. Rose.—The officers were humbugged, because books were shown in which a diminished quantity was entered.
Collector.—I presume the returns were found to be in agreement with the brewery bottling books, containing particulars of which Mr. Ward had control, or at least knowledge.
Inspector.—The Department has no right of access to Messrs. Tooth & Co.'s private books.
24. Mr. Rose.—The firm contend that they have the right to brew the beer so strong that from one cask they can bottle as much as it would take ten casks to hold. Mr. Ward distinctly says that the Customs have been defrauded to the extent of 25 per cent.
Collector.—I suppose the alleged 25 per cent. partly represents Mr. Ward's preservative?
Inspector.—It is impossible to brew beer so strong as stated. Mr. Ward's assertion is an exaggeration.
25. Mr. Rose.—Why should we ask this firm for arrears instead of prosecuting them.
Collector.—Define the offence disclosed by the Act.
Inspector.—I do not think there would be the slightest chance of obtaining a conviction against Messrs. Tooth & Co., as there was no appearance of fraudulent intent.
26. Mr. Rose.—A brewer at Goulburn, without money and without political influence, omitted to stamp some casks of beer; his brewery was confiscated. This was some years ago.
Collector.—Can the case be traced.
Inspector.—Mr. Rose's memory is at fault. About five years ago a brewer at Goulburn was fined 10s. or 20s. for sending out two casks of unstamped beer; as he pleaded ignorance, some further charges were withdrawn. His brewery was not confiscated, nor even the unstamped beer.
27. Mr. Rose.—I have proved this firm has been evading the payment of duties—making thousands of pounds, and all they are asked to pay is a paltry £500.
Collector.—If Mr. Rose has proved Mr. Ward's case, the Department is very much in the wrong. I do not consider that the statements are proved.
Inspector.—To show the utter baselessness of this statement, I append an account, showing the transactions of Messrs. Tooth & Co.'s bottling department during the whole period they had the advantage of Mr. Ward's services. You will see that after crediting them with the surcharge of £508 18s. 3d. the firm actually paid on 14,065 gallons of beer (say, £175 16s. 3d.) which was lost in bottling; this is a loss which all bottling brewers are subject to, but it effectually disposes of the vague assertion that the Company have been making thousands by evading payment of duties.

No. 12.

Queries by Collector of Customs to Senior Inspector of Breweries.

1. Does this mean that taking 45 gallons as the mean bottling outturn, that Tooths paid us on 5,828½ hogsheads at 51 and 957 at 47?

Does the difference between 45 mean and 51-47 represent Ward's additions, and does the 40-713 balance the amount due?

What is meant by balance variation, 1,278 gallons?

Inspector.—Answer.—Yes. Messrs. R. Tooth & Co. paid excise upon 5,828½ hogsheads of beer at 51 gallons per hogshead, and upon 957 hogsheads at 47 gallons per hogshead, say 342,232 gallons.

No. It means beer lost in process of bottling, and 40,713 gallons represents very closely the amount due.

1,278 gallons variation means the small balance over-estimated.

8. Collector (quoting Ward).—I brewed 100,000 gallons of liquid. Does the word "brewed" mean that Ward actually prepared malt and hops, or sugar, so as to make ale, beer, &c.?

Taking Ward's statement to mean that he prepared 100,000 gallons of his preservative, and that 40,713 represents our surcharge, what has become of the balance?

Inspector.—Answer.—The word "brewed" has been adopted to signify the secret process by which Mr. Ward prepared his blend; it is used in the sense of prepared or made.

Mr. Ward did not prepare 100,000 gallons of blend, but 1,462 hogsheads, each 47 gallons—68,714 gallons; of this quantity, 344 hogsheads (say, 16,168 gallons) were used in bulk beer, and 125 hogsheads remained on hand when Mr. Ward left the service of Messrs. R. Tooth & Co. It is doubtful whether the hogsheads were originally quite full, for the 125 hogsheads when examined were found to be greatly ullaged, and were repacked into 45 hogsheads, to which stamps were affixed.

The annexed statement shows that 3,972 gallons blend remain unaccounted for; this may, to a certain extent, have been lost in the sterilising bath, where the bottles burst freely, or very possibly the hogsheads were not altogether full.

Stock account bottling—Hogsheads, 51 gallons; hogsheads, 47 gallons.—This is the bottling stamp, is it not?

Answer.—Yes.

I suppose 4,234 gallons went back into stock. This is the parcel referred to in paragraph 14, I suppose, which I assumed to be sour beer, in my query above?

Answer.—Yes.

13. In your reply to question 8 you say Mr. Ward was paid for 1,462 hogsheads. I presume that covers the whole period of his service?

Answer.—Yes.

Question 13.—Ward says I brewed 900 hogsheads in ten weeks (1893); that leaves only 562 for al. the rest of the time.

You confirm Ward by saying, "He made 869 hogsheads in the period named, and of this quantity 344 hogsheads were used in bulk beer."

Following that, do the 344 hogsheads represent partly or wholly the 28,000 short under question 8?

Answer.—A part.

14. The term "drawback" is, I suppose, a mistake. Was it a return for sour beer, upon which we allowed refund to the extent of 4,284 gallons; 51 gallons each?

If this view is correct, Toth's were improperly paid to the extent of the preservative added?

Answer.—Yes.

22-23. You say the books were verified regularly, and you follow on that you have no right to examine Toth's private books.

How were the accounts verified?

Answer.—By comparison with returns.

Mr. W. B. Mitchell (Manager for Tooth & Co.) to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Kent Brewery, Sydney, 19 August, 1895.

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 13th instant, in which you state that you are directed by the Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer to hand me a copy of Hansard containing the speech of Mr. Rose, M.L.A., and to add that as Mr. Reid intends to lay the papers in connection with the matter on the Table of the House, he would be glad if I would read the speech referred to and make any reply I may deem desirable.

The first part of the speech relates to certain charges or allegations made by a Mr. F. G. Ward, a discharged employee of this company. With regard to his statements, I beg to say that they are utterly unreliable, he having no books, or access to any, beyond those he kept himself, and that if the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer desires any inquiry to be made into those or any other matters affecting this company in which the interests of the public are concerned, every assistance will be rendered by the company to ensure the fullest investigation, and with this object the books and vouchers are, and have always been, open to inspection by any proper officer appointed by the Government.

With reference to the latter portion of the speech, which contains extracts from the minutes of the Collector of Customs, and the opinion of the Crown Solicitor on the question whether the company was legally liable to pay certain excise duty, I further beg to say that I have nothing to add to the arguments already adduced on behalf of the company by its solicitors, Messrs. Macnamara and Smith, in their letter to the Collector of Customs, dated 20th October, 1894.

I have, &c.,

W. B. MITCHELL,

Manager for Tooth & Co. (Limited).

Dear Sir,

Parliament House, Sydney, 17 September, 1895.

In reference to the matter of the alleged evasion of the excise by Messrs. Tooth & Co., upon which I had the honor of an interview with you, I should be glad if you would give it your earliest and best attention.

The matter is, in my opinion, of so grave a character as to call for your speedy and close investigation.

Yours, &c.,

W. M. HUGHES.

Senior Inspector of Breweries to The Collector of Customs (Report).

Sir,

Custom House, Sydney, 27 December, 1895.

I have the honor to report that, as instructed, I have examined the sale books, &c., of Messrs. R. Tooth & Co. (Limited).

I find that from 1st January, 1891, to 31st August, 1894—

	Gallons.
Messrs. R. Tooth & Co. (Limited) sold bottled beer in quarts,
170,846 dozen =	341,692
Held bottled beer in quarts in stock on 31st August, 1894,
12,693 dozen =	25,386
Received in April, 1893, refund on	4,284
	371,362

Used in bottling—6,797 hogsheads beer; 99½ hogsheads blend.

An average of 47½ gallons of beer was thus obtained from each hogshead of the mixture.

During the same period duty was paid upon—

	Gallons.
Beer, 6,797 hogsheads =	343,419
Customs surcharge =	40,713
	384,132

This shows a loss of 12,770 gallons in bottling operations—in other words, an over-payment at the rate of 3d. per gallon on that quantity.

I have purposely omitted minor details to render the account clearer; they are unimportant, and will not affect the result.

I have, &c.,

FRANK A. EAGAR,

Senior Inspector Breweries.

Memo.

Memo.—Tooth & Co. did not bottle from the casks of beer taken direct from the brewery. Ward (their servant at the time) added a preparation known as preservative or blend to the beer, the whole being put into a vessel to be aerated; the beer for sale was bottled therefrom instead of from the casks, as required by the Act and regulations. Tooths were of opinion that payment of duty on the beer (before bottling) covered all excise claims. When informed by Ward, I demanded duty on all the liquor bottled from the vessel referred to, as purporting to be beer under the Act. I shall be glad to wait upon the Treasurer whenever his convenience will admit.—JAS. P., 26/12/95. The Under Secretary, Finance and Trade.

No. 17.

Memorandum of The Collector of Customs to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Custom House, Sydney, 23 June, 1896.

THE papers herewith, prepared by the Senior Inspector of Breweries, fully explain the causes which led to the destruction of the 84 hogsheads of beer upon which Tooth & Co. were allowed a refund as sour beer.

Mr. Eagar explains the method of bottling, and shows that the plan of aerating beer for bottling can only be conducted by putting the beer from stamped casks into a receiver specially made for the purpose. Beer cannot be aerated in the wood, and if bottling is to be allowed modern methods must be accepted.

The bottled beer representing the 84 hogsheads had been in stock for a considerable length of time, when it was found to be out of condition and unsaleable. Application was made by Tooth & Co. for permission to destroy the beer on 25th April, 1893 (copy herewith), under an arrangement made by Mr. Eagar, with my consent. This was allowed on condition that the bottles should be decanted back into hogsheads, which was done; and the beer was then emptied into the sewer.

Before recommending the refund, and before assenting to the application to destroy the beer, I looked through the Act of 1887, and found that sections 18 and 23 would allow a brewer to sell sour beer and deliver it from a brewery without affixing a permit or stamp upon the packages, and that sour beer returned to a brewery entitled the brewer to a refund equal in value to the duty paid.

These sections of the Act did not appear sufficient to warrant me in recommending a refund of duty for beer which had not left the brewery; but I thought it reasonable and fair to refund duty on stamped beer which had become sour in the brewery.

Under the 5th section of the Act, the Collector of Customs, subject to the directions of the Colonial Treasurer, is permitted to exercise the like powers and authorities in relation to the collection and administration of the Beer Duties Act as he now has in relation to the collection of duties of Customs and Excise under Acts now in force for the collection of such duties.

Section 86 of the Customs Regulation Act allows a refund of duty on goods damaged while in the warehouses, if such damage be proved to the satisfaction of the Collector of Customs.

Tooth's beer was damaged in the warehouse, and it seemed to me that the claim for refund was a good claim under the Acts and sections I have quoted.

By a return herewith, it will be seen that the whole amount refunded during 1895 for duties paid on beer returned as sour was £1,359 19s., a trifle over 1 per cent. of the total receipts for duty.

The return of beer bottled by Tooth & Co. (herewith) shows Dr. and Cr. the account of bottling operations from January, 1891, to 31st August, 1894. The whole of the beer is accounted for, and there is a loss of 12,770 gallons for which duty was received, and for which no claim for refund has been made.

As Mr. Eagar has pointed out in his memo., it is admitted that Tooth & Co. overclaimed in their refund papers duty (£10) on about 16 hogsheads, which represents "Ward's blend," and upon which duty was not paid until Tooth & Co. were called upon after Mr. Ward informed me of the system he initiated, controlled, and carried on at the brewery.

JAMES POWELL,
Collector of Customs.

No. 18.

Memorandum of The Senior Inspector of Breweries to The Collector of Customs.

Custom House, Sydney, 22 June, 1896.

As instructed, I have the honor to submit a few remarks on the circumstances under which a refund was granted on 84 hogsheads sour beer to Messrs. R. Tooth & Co. (Limited) in April, 1893.

Sometime in March, 1893, Mr. Mitchell, of Tooth & Co. (Limited), informed me that he had a large stock of bottled beer which had gone bad, and asked me whether I could estimate the quantity stacked in the bins, and recommend a refund of the duty paid thereon. This I declined to do, not being able to survey beer in bottle. It was therefore arranged that all bottles should be uncorked, and the contents decanted into hogsheads for inspection.

Eighty-four

Eighty-four hogsheads were thus treated, examined, and destroyed by the Excise officer, Mr. J. C. R. Brown (copy of certificate herewith), and refund amounting to £53 10s. allowed in the usual manner.

There can be little doubt that part of these 84 hogsheads (say, about 16) consisted of added matter, the duty upon which would be £10 4s., but in my report of the 27th December, 1895, I debited Tooth & Co. (Limited) with the whole 84 hogsheads, amounting to 4,284 gallons (account herewith).

Mr. Mitchell informs me that Mr. Ward was in sole charge of the bottling department; that he manipulated and dealt with the beer at his discretion; that he used the blend in any proportion he considered desirable; and, upon completion of the examination of the 84 hogsheads, he notified Mr. Styles, an employee of the company, who thereupon wrote out and forwarded the proper application.

Mr. Little, who was employed upon the recommendation of Mr. Ward, worked with, and under the supervision of, the latter.

Whilst upon this subject I should like to call your attention to the method of bottling beer, concerning which some misconception seems to have arisen.

Formerly beer was bottled and stacked for some considerable time, to allow it to evolve gas from its own substance in a natural manner.

Of late years a system has been adopted of conducting beer into an aerating chamber, forcing carbonic acid gas into the liquid, filling and corking the bottles at once, and placing them in a warm or sterilising bath to destroy the yeast germs and check further fermentation.

The aerating process is somewhat similar to that employed in preparing soda-water, and is adopted by many of the leading bottling firms, not only in New South Wales, but throughout the world. The advantage is that beer can be at once issued for consumption, instead of being retained in stock to mature; it is likewise maintained that a weaker, and therefore cheaper liquor can be used, and a lighter and more palatable beverage be produced.

Beer cannot be bottled directly from the cask by this process; gas forced in at high pressure would burst the cask or escape; a closed air-tight chamber has therefore to be used.

Provided the beer be led from stamped casks into the aerating chamber, the revenue can suffer no loss, and I think it inadvisable to obstruct improvements, simply because they involve a slight deviation from the strict wording of a minor section of the Act.

FRANK A. EAGAR,
Senior Inspector Breweries.

Mr. John F. D. Little to The Hon. the Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

Re Tooth & Co. and the Beer Duties Act.

Sir, 36, Mount Vernon-street, Forest Lodge, 23 June, 1896.

I consider it my duty, in view of recent occurrences, to communicate with you in the above matter. I attended at the Legislative Assembly last Wednesday evening for the purpose of hearing the debate, and having heard it I decided, before I addressed you, to purchase a copy of Hansard, in view of the altered circumstances, inasmuch as that Mr. Powell, Collector of Customs, was not fully aware of the circumstances under which proceedings were sought to be taken against Messrs. Tooth, Mitchell, and Partridge.

In

In order the better to lay my version of the matter before you, I desire to proceed in the regular sequence of occurrences. I had a contract with Messrs. Tooth & Co. from about June, 1891, to May, 1894, for the handling of all their bottled ale and porter—that is to say, dealing with it from the time it entered the bottling department until its delivery for consumption. About the latter date it was sought to put me on wages, and I declined to accept what I was offered, and left the firm, and with good references. When I left I thought of starting business as a bottler of beer, on the same lines as was practised at Tooth & Co.'s, but having some doubts, and not being quite clear about the matter, I interviewed Mr. Eagar and the other inspectors down at the Custom House, and put a case similar to Tooth & Co.'s, asking if I would be allowed to bottle beer under similar conditions, that is to say, purchase foundation stout from a brewer, and add whatever I liked to it for the purpose of sale. The answer I got verbally from Mr. Eagar was "that I would not be allowed to do so." I then said "that it was being done now in the city." Mr. Eagar asked me "to put the matter in writing, and to disclose the names of the parties doing it," and also asked me my name, which I gave, but I declined to give any further information, saying, "I would let the parties fall into somebody else's hands," and that ended the interview.

I subsequently saw by the papers that Mr. Fredk. Greening Ward had given information concerning Messrs. Tooth & Co.'s practices, and also that they had to pay a sum of some £508 back duty. Up to this time I never troubled about Messrs. Tooth's affairs, but when I saw a report that Ward had made a sworn declaration charging offences against Messrs. Tooth & Co., I turned the matter over in my mind, Ward having interviewed me on the subject. I, however, steadily declined to have anything to do with him. What attracted my attention most particularly in Ward's sworn declaration (see Debates, Session 1894 and 1895, page 5,786) was paragraph No. 7, in which he says "in the month of November, 1892, the excise returns held by the Collector show that Tooth & Co. applied for a drawback on 80 hogsheads of stout, one-fourth of which never paid any excise, the whole of this drawback was obtained and credited to my department." I remembered the transaction quite clearly, and turned up the pay-sheets that I hold under the contract with the firm, and found that they had paid me for uncorking the liquor, but at the time I was under the impression that the stout was returned from the bottling department to the brewing department, and treated over again, instead of which they applied to the Collector of Customs for a drawback under section 23 of the Beer Duties Act, and obtained the sum of £53 11s. It is needless for me to say that this sum was improperly obtained, as I am quite sure that if Messrs. Tooth & Co. had told the Collector of Customs that five-sixteenths of it had never paid any excise, and that it had never left the brewery, he would not have allowed them one penny drawback. Mr. Tooth was brewer at the time, and he and Messrs. Mitchell and Partridge knew every circumstance connected with the bottling, mixing, and uncorking of the 84 hogsheads. During the time I was in the brewery there were a great number of hogsheads of liquor collected similarly to those 84 hogsheads, and I have since learned that drawback was obtained on them also; but the actual transactions cannot be ear-marked from start to finish, as in this transaction of the 84 hogsheads amounting to £53 11s., and I am prepared to produce conclusive evidence (in fact, I believe it is admitted by Messrs. Tooth & Co.) of this sum having been obtained on this identical 84 hogsheads, and I beg to impress upon you that I do not require assistance from Mr. Ward to prove this charge, and that the evidence in support of it is altogether independent of him, and also evidence that Messrs. Tooth & Co. sent out Ward's blend in their draught beer and paid excise on it. Therefore, how can they plead innocence of knowing that it was liable to duty? I can also prove that Ward's blend was purely and simply an adulterant, and if necessary I can produce samples of it for the purpose of analysis. I had heard that there was an unwillingness to pursue Messrs. Tooth & Co. in respect of penalties incurred in connection with the alleged evasion, and I concluded that I would not be facilitated if I approached the Customs authorities in connection with the obtaining of the £53 11s. drawback; and having consulted Mr. R. S. Lambton, my solicitor, I was advised by him to issue summons against Messrs. Mitchell, Tooth, and Partridge for having knowingly obtained the refund from the Treasury by false pretences, and with the result, as you already know, that Mr. Paton, the Chamber Magistrate, having consulted Mr. Powell, the Collector of Customs, that gentleman being under the impression at the time that the proceeding had reference to the refund of £508 which was paid by Messrs. Tooth & Co. as a result of information given by Ward, whereas it was for something totally different, as appears by the information communicated by you when Mr. Watson was speaking on Wednesday last (see Hansard, Session 1896, page 737), when you were pleased to say, "I have just referred to the Collector of Customs; he says that the honorable gentleman is perfectly right; that he was under the apprehension that he was asked about the transaction of £584." As the Honorable Member, Mr. Watson, then remarked, "that puts a very different complexion on the whole thing," and I would say, with all respect, that if Mr. Powell had been fully seized of the circumstances, I have no doubt, from the undoubted high reputation for dealing out evenhanded justice in all quarters which has characterised the administration of that official, that he would have offered no opposition to those persons being made answer to the serious charge that was sought to be made against them by me.

I have but little doubt but that this letter conveys all I have to say on the subject. I say a grievous wrong has been done, and I desire to set that wrong right. I look for no reward—only this, that if I make out a case for inquiry, Mr. Lambton's costs shall be recouped me. I deny that I am an informant against Messrs. Tooth in any shape or form. I refused to join Ward; I refused to give information at the Custom House; I never asked anyone for a shilling in connection with this business, but, having taken the matter up, and knowing all the circumstances, I think, as a citizen and taxpayer, I was entitled to pursue it. If I make any false charge against those people I am willing to suffer punishment, but I know fully the strength of my position, and the advice I have received has fortified me in that position.

I write this letter with the full approval of my solicitor, Mr. R. S. Lambton, and I have authorised him, should you now deem it your duty to clear this matter up, to place every information that he possesses at your disposal.

I have, &c.,

JOHN F. D. LITTLE.

(PETITION FROM THOMAS HADFIELD, PRESIDENT, AND T. T. BAWDEN, SECRETARY, OF THE CLARENCE RIVER FARMERS, PRODUCERS, AND COMMERCIAL UNION, IN FAVOUR OF A ROYAL COMMISSION TO INQUIRE INTO THE.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 18 November, 1897.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

Your Petitioners, as executive officers of the Clarence River Farmers, Producers, and Commercial Union, comprising 700 members, and by virtue of a resolution passed by that Union,—

HUMBLY PRAY:—

That you will give the consideration of the motion asking for a Royal Commission your most favourable consideration, seeing that it is of vital importance to the sugar industry of New South Wales that the fullest inquiry should be made as to the best methods to be employed for carrying on the industry in the Colony.

Your Petitioners would humbly show that upwards of 30,000 are dependent upon the industry for their existence.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that favourable consideration be given to their representations.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

(PETITION FROM JOHN STOREY, CHAIRMAN OF A PUBLIC MEETING HELD AT CORAKI, PRAYING FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS IN REFERENCE TO.)

Received by the Legislative Assembly, 23 November, 1897.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned farmers, engaged in the growth of sugar-cane in the Richmond River District, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

SHOWETH:—

1. That, at the request of a large number of the ratepayers of the Municipality of Coraki, a public meeting was convened by the Mayor of the said municipality, and was held at Coraki on Saturday, the 30th day of October, 1897, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best means of preserving to the district the great sugar industry, and of getting the opinion of cane-growers on the subject.

2. That the said public meeting was presided over by the Mayor (Mr. John Storey), and was large and thoroughly representative of the farming population of the district and of those interested in sugar culture, having been attended by upwards of 500 cane-growers and others residing in the Richmond River District.

3. That, at the said public meeting, the first resolution passed was as follows:—"That, in the opinion of this meeting, the removal of the sugar duties is opposed to the interests of the farmers of the North Coast Districts, and will prove disastrous to the Colony in general,"—which resolution was moved by Mr. T. Martin (Mayor of Ballina), and seconded by Mr. H. Williams, J.P., of Swan Bay, and was carried by a very large majority, only fourteen hands having been held up against it.

4. That the second resolution passed at the said public meeting was as follows:—Moved by Mr. T. F. O'Flynn, Mayor of Lismore, "That it is the opinion of this meeting of cane-growers and others interested in the industry, that the various statements which have recently found their way into print, namely, 'That a hundred have failed to make it pay where one has succeeded, and that the abolition of the duty was a blessing in disguise,' are misrepresentations of the real facts and of the opinion of the people of this district. This resolution was seconded by Mr. Willam Gollan, J.P., of Woodburn, and carried with only four dissentients.

5. That the third and last resolution, moved by Mr. D. Gillies, of Tintenbar, and seconded by Dr. Finselback, of Lismore, was as follows:—"That the foregoing resolutions be forwarded by the Chairman of this meeting, through the Member for the Electorate, for presentation to the Parliament of the Colony."

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will be pleased to take into your favourable consideration the foregoing resolutions, with a view to affording relief.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Signed for and on behalf of the meeting,
JOHN STOREY,
Chairman.

PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD—RETIRING ALLOWANCES AND GRATUITIES.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on 10th August, 1897, “to inquire into and report upon the question of the retiring allowances and gratuities granted or refused by the Public Service Board to persons retrenched or retired from the Public Service,”—have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee have held twenty-one sittings, and have examined forty-five witnesses (whose names appear in attached list), being persons who have submitted their claims for consideration; and have also received statutory declarations from other ex-Civil Servants, whose absence from Sydney rendered difficult their personal attendance before your Committee.

1. A large number of other retrenched State employees desired to submit a statement of their cases, and your Committee express regret that the time at their disposal did not admit of the examination of all those persons who desired to appear before them.

2. Your Committee have also examined the members of the Public Service Board and their Secretary; but, for want of time, were unable to make their examination as complete as was desired.

3. From the précis attached to this Report it will be seen that the retired Public Servants who appeared before your Committee may be divided into the following classes, viz.:—

- (a) Public servants who have been refused any retiring allowance or gratuity, on the ground that they were neither permanent nor temporary officers, but were “casual” employees.
- (b) Public servants who have been classified by the Public Service Board as “temporary officers” contrary to the practice of the Departments in which they were employed.
- (c) Public servants of long standing who were retired shortly before attaining the age or length of service which would have entitled them to the enjoyment of the pensions, to provide which, deductions had been made from their salaries.
- (d) Public servants who have been denied the leave of absence authorised by law, the granting of which leave would have brought such public servants within the ages or lengths of service entitling them to pensions.
- (e) Public servants having miscellaneous causes for complaint.

4. Dealing with Class (a), your Committee draw attention to the fact that the Public Service Act of 1895 refers to and provides for but two classes of public servants, viz., permanent and temporary; and that in creating a third classification, namely, “casual employees,” the Public Service Board have, your Committee believe, acted without authorisation, and not in accord with the intentions of Parliament. Your Committee cannot believe that when adopting the Public Service Act, Parliament intended that public servants, who had faithfully served the State during many years, should be classified as “casuals,” and denied compensation when retired from the Service.

5. Your Committee draw special attention to the following letters, setting forth that the Public Service Board had created this "casual employee" class, "to guide them in their recommendations to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, otherwise the expenditure would be altogether beyond his expectations, and the reasonable aspects of the case." That the Board's action had the endorsement of the Colonial Treasurer, is shown by the letter of the Under Secretary to the Treasury, under date the 16th March, 1897 :—

Sir,

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 16th March, 1897.

Referring to your letter of the 22nd ultimo,—I am now directed by the Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer to forward herewith, for your information, copy of a communication from the Secretary, Public Service Board, dated 10th instant, relative to the claims of Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus to compensation owing to their retirement from the Government Printing Office.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK,

E. M. Clark, Esq., M.P., Parliament House.

Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 10 March, 1897.

With reference to your B.C. communication of the 3rd instant, conveying a request from the Honorable the Premier to be furnished with the facts which are held to disqualify Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus, lately employed in the Government Printing Office, from receiving compensation, I am directed to state that the cases of gratuity being so numerous, the Public Service Board have had to lay down definite rules to guide them in their recommendations to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, otherwise the expenditure under this head would be altogether beyond his expectations and the reasonable aspects of the case, viewed in the light of the serious responsibilities of the Board in relation to the whole question.

The rules laid down are :—

1. Persons appointed by the Governor and Executive Council are considered as "permanent officers."
2. Persons appointed by a Minister, and whose appointments have not been confirmed by the Executive Council, are considered as "temporary officers."
3. Persons appointed by the Head of a Department, and therefore removable by the same authority, are considered as "casual" employees, and, therefore, not entitled to compensation when their employment is brought to a close.

Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus come under the latter category, they having been appointed by the Government Printer, who, therefore, had the power to dispense with their services at any time.

I have, &c.,

J. W. HOLLIMAN,

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Secretary.

6. Your Committee draw attention to the fact that though the Public Service Board appear to have sought and obtained the opinion of the Honorable the Attorney-General respecting the legal status of persons employed in such Departments as had Regulations under any Act other than the Civil Service Act of 1884—vide the Board's minute to the Colonial Treasurer,—the Board do not seem to have sought, and certainly have not obtained from the Attorney-General any opinion confirmatory of their action in classifying old servants of the State as "casual employees" (vide Question 1832). After refusing, for many months, to recommend that retiring allowances be granted to the public servants whom they had thus classified as "casuals," the Public Service Board appear to have entertained doubts respecting the legality of their action, and on the 21st April, 1897, addressed the following important minute to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer :—

The question of granting compensation on retirement in the Public Service is a matter to which the Board have given a great deal of anxious attention. Prior to the passing of the Public Service Act of 1895, no public servant was entitled to any consideration on his retirement except so far as he came within the operations of the Civil Service Act of 1884.

That Act provided for the formation of a Superannuation Fund, to which all permanent "officers" were compelled to subscribe, and the option to do so was also given to persons not designated as "officers," who came within the terms of section 8 of the Act. The Act further provided that from this fund a pension should be granted to persons with over fifteen years' service who might retire by reason of their having reached the age of 60 years, or through ill-health, or whose offices might be abolished. Where the service was less than fifteen years it was provided that a gratuity not exceeding one month's pay for each year of service should be granted. This consideration was limited entirely to subscribers to the fund, and other employees were not entitled to any consideration whatever; but, as a matter of fact, this rule has been departed from at different times, and the practice then seems to have been to grant persons, not subscribers to the fund, one month's pay for each year of service if they had been permanently employed, and a fortnight's pay if their service had been of a temporary character. The money so paid, however, was not a charge upon the Superannuation Fund.

The Public Service Act of 1895 introduced considerable modification of the benefits to which officers would be entitled on retirement during the first twelve months after the passing of the Act, and considerably improved the position of officers continuing to subscribe to the fund after the expiry of that period. A new principle was, however, introduced, which is found in section 11. It is therein provided that officers temporarily employed at the commencement of the Act whose services are dispensed with shall shall be granted by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Board, out of moneys provided by Parliament for the purpose, a gratuity at a rate not exceeding a fortnight's pay for each year of service prior to the commencement of the Act.

This principle of compensation to "temporary" officers, although, as already pointed out, from time to time tacitly recognised prior to the passing of the Public Service Act, was for the first time made law when that Act came into operation. The Board have had no trouble in dealing with the cases of persons who are permanently employed, and who are subscribers to the Fund; but they have experienced great difficulty in their endeavour to arrive at the intention of Parliament as expressed in the proviso to section 11 above quoted. Officers and others employed in the Public Service are divided into three classes—permanent officers, temporary officers, and persons casually employed.

The distinction between the two latter classes appears to the Board to be that "temporary" officers are those appointed by some member of the Executive Council, and "casual" employees are persons employed on the authority of the head of a Department or some other official. The distinction between temporary officers and casual employees is one, however, which cannot always be made, as many persons whose employment is simply from day to day have been taken on under the instructions of a Minister of the Crown. In their desire to carry out the intentions of Parliament, the Board have had to decide who are officers coming within the meaning of the proviso to section 11. It seems to them that the only persons who could come within the proviso are those who, if they were permanent officers, would come within the operations of the Public Service Act.

This opinion of the Board has been confirmed by the Attorney-General, who has decided that persons whose employment and dismissal do not come within the cognizance of the Board are not officers within the meaning of the Act. This places outside the operation of the Public Service Act, except for the purpose specifically reserved to the Board in section 55, all persons employed in the Department of the Inspector-General of Insane and the Department of Prisons, as well as such other Departments as had Regulations under any other Act than the Civil Service Act of 1884, which were in operation when the Board took office. This exclusion, although it considerably narrows the circle of officers who would be affected by the operations of the Public Service Act, still leaves a large number of officers to whom the term "temporary officer" could be applied, and the Board are seeking for some instruction or guidance which would enable them to come to a definite determination as to the persons to whom the beneficence of Parliament was intended to be applied. There are several thousand persons now in the employment of the State who were in their present employment on the passing of the Act, and who, by the terms of their engagement, are liable to be discharged from their employment practically without notice. If it is the intention that such persons should receive a gratuity on loss of office, the expenses of the Government will be very materially added to, as a fortnight's pay for each year of service is practically equivalent to an addition of 4 per cent. on the remuneration received by them prior to December, 1895.

The matter is so important, and the provisions of the Act so obscure, that the Board think it would be highly desirable that some legislative interpretation should be given to the proviso under section 11. At the present time there are a very large number of cases awaiting the decision and recommendation of the Board; but, in view of the very large sum of money at stake, the Board do not feel able to make the recommendation until they have had some authoritative decision, either by the Cabinet or by Parliament, as to the real intention of this portion of the Act.

It may not be out of place to point out that the provision in respect of the compensation to temporary officers was introduced in the Assembly by a private Member.

At Question 1795, Mr. Barling, Chairman of the Public Service Board, says:—
"We are now (2nd November) awaiting a reply to that communication."

7. Your Committee feel compelled to draw attention to the uncertainty and confusion of ideas which appear to exist respecting the question of classification of Government employees. In their letter of the 10th March, 1897, addressed to the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, the Board say they classify as permanent officers persons appointed by the Governor-in-Council; yet at Question 1828, Mr. Barling shows that men on wages had a right to make themselves permanent officers by notifying the Treasury of their desire to contribute to the Superannuation Fund. Amongst the retired public servants who have laid their claims before your Committee, there are persons who, though coming under Mr. Barling's definition of a permanent officer, have been refused the retiring allowance authorised to such officers under the Act, and have only been granted the retiring allowance applicable to temporary officers. It would appear, from the evidence of Mr. Wilson (Question 2181), that the words "not exceeding" in subsection 1 of section 60 of the Public Service Act were interpreted by the Board as giving it a discretionary power in regard to the amount of retiring allowances, and which discretionary power the Board exercised in certain cases.

8. The same uncertainty exists in relation to the public servants who have been appointed by Heads of Departments. The Board's letter of the 10th March, 1897, classifies these, by the Board's "definite rules," as "casual" employees; but at Question 1829, Mr. Barling says:—"We have not classified them; we have merely pointed out those whom we suppose to be casual men"; yet there is abundance of evidence to prove that not only did the Board classify them as "casuals," but, having done so, repeatedly refused them any gratuity, on the ground that they were, as casuals, not entitled to any such consideration.

9. The doubts and confusion of ideas on the part of the Board is expressed in answers to Questions 1805, 1819, 1823, &c.; and the fact that the Board, as Mr. Barling says at Question 1823, "coined" the word "casuals," is, your Committee consider, presumptive proof that the Public Service Board in their efforts to limit expenditure have in many cases lost sight of the intentions of Parliament regarding the treatment of persons retired from the Public Service.

10. Your Committee also draw attention to the unsatisfactory nature of the Board's "definite rules" of classification, whereby "persons appointed by a Minister" are deemed "temporary officers," entitled to retiring gratuities, while "persons appointed by the head of a Department," by the authority of a Minister, are classified as casuals and denied consideration. In the latter class of cases it is admitted that appointments made by the heads of Departments were so made under the direct authority of a Minister. Your Committee disagree with the proposition that any distinction should be drawn between the two methods of appointment.

11. Referring to Class (b), public servants who, though regarded departmentally as "permanent officers," have been treated by the Public Service Board as "temporary officers," your Committee draw attention to the cases of persons employed in the Government Printing Office. These it will be seen were treated departmentally as members of the "permanent staff"; were returned as such in the lists published in accordance with section 16 of the Civil Service Act; were, as per Parliamentary Return, acknowledged to be members of the permanent staff, and were described as such in the Gazette notice authorising their retirement; and yet have been refused, by the Public Service Board, any gratuity but that applicable to temporary officers—i.e., have had their gratuities reduced by one half.

12. Your Committee do not consider that the rule created by the Public Service Board, and applied to these and similar cases, embodies the intentions of Parliament, or is in accordance with equity.

13. Class (c), public servants of long standing, retired shortly before becoming entitled to the pension for which they had contributed, include some of the most painful cases which have come before your Committee; and, to quote Mr. Barling, at Question 1545, "there are a number of cases of that kind." Your Committee do not believe that Parliament, when passing the Public Service Bill, contemplated that the law would be administered with the harshness exhibited in these instances, and be used for cancelling long existing pension contracts. Some of these cases may be mentioned:—

Mr. Dalway Bell—Twenty-nine years and eight months service; would have qualified for a pension in four months and a few days.

Mr. H. C. R. Doyle—Twenty years in the service; would have qualified for a pension in five months.

Mr. Henry James Greville—Upwards of forty years service; would have qualified for a pension in eighteen months.

Mr. Charles Sydney Ormiston—Thirty-nine years and nine months service; would have qualified for a pension in a few months.

Mr. Peter Herbert's case is somewhat similar. After thirty-two years and five months service, the Public Service Board refused to allow him to remain fifteen days longer in the Service, when by so doing he would have been enabled to claim pension in respect of an additional year. And the Board also refused to accept the Blue Book as evidence of this gentleman's appointment, and insist on reducing his service by eighteen months, thus cutting off two years and six months of his actual service. Though doing this, the Board deducted 4 per cent. pension contribution from the year's salary in respect of which he was refused a pension.

14. The Class (d) of public servants who complain of being denied the leave of absence authorized by law are numerous. Each of the retired officers mentioned in the preceding paragraph are examples. The evidence given by Mr. Barling respecting the question of leave of absence contains the following:—Question 1856—"I understand you deny Mr. Bell's right to six months' leave of absence? Absolutely." Question 1860—"I suppose you admit in Bell's case the Governor might have granted him six months? Yes." Question 1861—"He did not lose any right to receive it at the hands of the Governor by the passing of the new Act? No—i.e., if he were kept in the Service." In

In this case, Mr. Bell applied in July for leave of absence, and was promptly retired, while his application for leave was not answered till the following October.

The case of Mr. G. L. Little is another of those where the leave authorised by law was refused, not by His Excellency the Governor, but by the Public Service Board, the members of which appear to have assumed the power of refusal in all cases without reference to the Governor, in whom the power is vested by statute. In this connection attention is directed to Mr. Barling's evidence, questions 1856 to 1867.

15. The Class (e), miscellaneous causes of complaint are both numerous and varied; but your Committee have been unable to inquire into them, the time at disposal being so limited that, though sitting usually thrice a week, it has been found impossible to examine the Public Service Board in reply. The nature of these cases will be readily seen by a reference to the accompanying précis.

16. Your Committee, while regretting the impossibility of completing the work of inquiry, draw attention to the fact that, so far as they have obtained the evidence of the Public Service Board, in no instance have the statements of retired public servants been contradicted on any material point involving duration and nature of service, emoluments, and the granting or refusing of pensions or gratuities.

17. Your Committee have pleasure in drawing attention to the small number of the retired public servants whose characters militated against their receiving retiring allowances.

18. Your Committee draw attention to the unnecessary discourtesy shown to many public servants in the failure to notify them of their impending retirement, and leaving them to become acquainted with the fact through the medium of the public Press. Your Committee fail to recognise any necessity for such treatment; indeed, it is a question whether public servants, discharged without notice, are not legally entitled to compensation in lieu of notice, though this question does not appear to have been raised in any instance.

19. Your Committee respectfully recommend that action may be taken—

1. To comply with what they believe was the intention of Parliament, viz., the granting of retiring allowances to persons who have creditably occupied positions in the Public Service for lengthy periods.
2. That persons who were departmentally recognised as permanent officers may receive retiring allowances as such.
3. That the cases of old public servants retired shortly before reaching the pension age or period may be reconsidered, with a view to their receiving pensions in lieu of the gratuities already granted them.
4. That those retired public servants of fifteen years standing and upwards, who were denied, though entitled by custom to, the leave of absence authorised by law, may have their cases reconsidered.

20. Your Committee are strongly of opinion that the interests of justice, not only as regards the Public Service Board and the retired public servants whose cases have been but partially inquired into, but others, whose complaints your Committee have been, for want of time, unable to hear, require that your Committee should be reappointed early next Session, so that the work of inquiry may be properly concluded.

JNO. C. NEILD,
Chairman.

No. 1 Committee Room,
Legislative Assembly,
2nd December, 1897.

PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD—RETIRING ALLOWANCES AND GRATUITIES.

Précis.

Mead, David William.

Appointed tide-waiter on 2nd May, 1884; acted as tide-waiter for about six years; was acting locker in charge of a bond for about six years; retired in July of 1896, without notice. Refused any gratuity.

Robson, Matthew Emerald (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed tide-waiter, 12th July, 1880; acted as such about sixteen months; was Chinese Inspector for three years; subsequently was tide-waiter for a few weeks; was acting locker up to 1st August, 1886; from August, 1886, to 31st March, 1893, was a permanent locker; dismissed in 1893 without being called on to show cause; resumed his position on tide list; retired, 5th August, 1896. Refused any gratuity.

Matthews, Joseph.

Appointed tide-waiter in 1876, acted nine years; appointed night watchman at Custom House, 1885; appointed locker, June, 1886; retired, July, 1896. Refused any gratuity, after twenty years' service.

Thomas, Byron Belmore.

Appointed tide-waiter, August, 1892; appointed clerk in warehouse-keeper's room, June, 1893; retired in July, 1896; in March, 1893, passed Civil Service examination at the head of the list; remarkable evidence, questions 988 to 1001. Refused any gratuity.

Ryan, Herbert Edward.

Appointed temporary clerk in Customs, 21st March, 1892; sent to Land and Income Tax Department by Collector of Customs, February, 1896; retired, 29th July, 1896; though styled a tide-waiter, never acted as one; very responsible duties in re banking moneys. Refused any gratuity.

Elliott, Joseph Warwick.

Appointed messenger in Custom House, 1st April, 1886; was messenger for three years; was tide-waiter for seven years; retired, 4th August, 1896. Refused any gratuity.

Brophy, Phillip (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed tide-waiter, 1867; appointed acting locker, 13th September, 1881; gazetted a permanent officer, 1st June, 1883; retired, 31st July, 1896. Refused any gratuity for fourteen years and three months' service prior to gazettal, during portion of which time he was acting locker, landing-waiter, and clerk in long room.

Wight, Borthwick Macdonald.

Appointed acting locker in 1892; nine months later transferred to Ad Valorem Branch; retired, 2nd January, 1896; from that date till March, 1896, became a tide-waiter, then sent to Land and Income Tax Department; retired, 17th December, 1896. Refused any gratuity.

Adams, William.

Appointed tide-waiter, 12th August, 1881; was a tide-waiter for five years; was an acting locker, in charge of bonds, for ten years; retired 1st August, 1897. Refused any gratuity.

Bell, Dalway (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

First employed in Post and Telegraph Offices; inspector of distilleries; and latterly a Customs' landing-waiter; total service, twenty-nine years and eight months; retired 1st August, 1896, on twenty-four hours' notice. Had he been allowed to remain in the Service four months and a few days longer he would have been entitled to a pension; applied to be allowed to remain in the Service so as to qualify for a pension, and seven weeks before pension age was refused; also applied for customary leave so as to qualify for pension and was refused three months after dismissal; was appointed by the Governor by commission as a Customs officer in 1874, which commission was not revoked till he was retired; hence claims to have been in continuous service; was refused a pension; received a gratuity of £618 7s., and refund of Superannuation payments, £193 13s.; was refused any gratuity in respect of ten years and eight months' service on account of four months' alleged break of service.

Mason, Mrs. Isabella (widow of William James Mason, overseer of letter-carriers in General Post Office, contributor to Superannuation Fund).

This widow was left with three young children to support, and without sufficient means to take out probate of her husband's will; was left a small house, subject to some debt. Public Service Board refused any help on the ground that she was not in necessitous circumstances; husband had been in the Public Service for twenty-seven years; his retirement from the Service had been arranged to take effect from 31st July, 1896, but he died on 4th of the same month.

Doyle,

Doyle, Herbert Cyrus Rowland (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed to General Post Office by Governor in Council, 28th August, 1876; in 1896 was granted eight weeks' statutory accumulated leave; entered upon that leave in July, 1896, which leave would have expired on 2nd September, 1896; during currency of such leave—viz., in July—received a notification of retirement; Mr. Doyle, who had been nearly twenty years in the service, applied for customary leave of absence to enable him to obtain his pension; this was refused; Mr. Doyle maintains that, having been retired during the currency of his leave, his dismissal was illegal; he has been refused salary up to the end of his leave, though the Minister has ordered its payment; though refused both pension and salary to end of leave, the 4 per cent. Superannuation Fund deduction was made from the last payment made him; Mr. Doyle maintains his right to a pension.

Byrnes, Francis Oakes (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Thirty-three years and nine months in Post and Telegraph services and Sheriff's Department; was a permanent officer; has suffered in health and eyesight, consequent upon the nature of his duties; was retired in July, 1896, on seven days' notice; was refused a pension which he claimed under section 44 of the Civil Service Act; was paid a gratuity of £500, and refund superannuation payments, £120.

Quinn, Edward.

Three years in the Police Force; thirty-five years in Postal Department as letter-carrier; was refused a gratuity of one month's pay for every year of service, and was only granted a fortnight's pay for every year, was—he considers—wrongly classed as a temporary employee; amount of gratuity, £196 13s.

Rush, John (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Ten years and four months in Police Force; twenty-one years a letter-carrier in General Post Office; retired, July, 1896; no notice given; read his retirement in the daily papers; received a pension of £51 6s. a year, but is allowed nothing in respect of his payments for over ten years into the Police Superannuation Fund.

Baumann, Samuel (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed a probationer in General Post Office service, June, 1879; gazetted a permanent officer in January, 1883; was retired, 31st July, 1896; was paid a gratuity of one month's salary for each year of service; claims he is entitled to a pension under sections 46 and 48 of the Civil Service Act.

Connolly, Mrs. Bessie (wife of Hugh Connolly).

Mr. Connolly was appointed a letter-carrier in General Post Office service in 1874; retired 31st July, 1896; age at retirement, 50 years; is now engaged in Public Works Department, West Australia; received a gratuity of £114 for twenty-two years' service; claims one month's salary for each year of service.

Little, George Lynn (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed a permanent clerk in Post and Telegraph Department in March, 1873; became first clerk in the dispatch branch of the mail department; retired 31st July, 1896; received one week's notice; refused a pension under sections 46 and 48 of 1884 Act after twenty-three years' service; six months after retirement was offered a gratuity of £448 3s. 11d. and refund of Superannuation Fund contribution, £143 16s. 1d.; Mr. Little applied for leave of absence on full pay, and also on half pay, under Regulations of the Public Service Act; this application was made prior to his being retired, but the answer refusing such leave was issued immediately after he had been notified of his retirement; the reason for the refusal was that the Board did not approve of leave to retrenched officers; Mr. Little claims he is entitled to a pension on account of abolition of office, and to pay in lieu of the leave of absence provided for by regulation.

McNamee, Michael (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Was a porter in the Railway Service for ten years and six months; was transferred to Post Office as a letter-carrier; held this position for twenty-three years; was retired on 31st July, 1896; was offered a gratuity of £36, which sum included his payments to the Superannuation Fund after over thirty-three years of continuous service; it appears that because Mr. McNamee was some years ago suspended for three months and then reinstated, the Public Service Board claimed his service had been broken, and so refused him the legal gratuity on retirement.

Simpson, William Palgrave (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Employed in Postal Department for thirty years and seven months; was called upon to resign by the Public Service Board; no inquiry was held upon certain charges made against him, but an explanation was asked for; this was given, and subsequently Mr. Simpson applied for leave to furnish further evidence, but he was refused, and, his resignation being demanded, he tendered same, and it was accepted; Mr. Simpson considers he has a moral claim for gratuity in consequence of long service.

Waugh, Dr. Isaac (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed Medical Superintendent of Macquarie-street and George-street Asylums, Parramatta, in 1892; retired 1st May, 1896; received no notice of retirement beyond reading it in the newspapers; Dr. O'Connor took over the duties, 1st July, 1896; received a gratuity of £150, and £74 8s., refund Superannuation Fund payments; complains that he was induced to give up a valuable practice in order to undertake Government duty, only to lose both practice and appointment.

Stewart, Neil.

Appointed Visiting Justice to Parramatta Gaol, 12th September, 1878; retired in June, 1896; refused retiring allowance; claims that under section 60 of the Act he is entitled to one month's salary for each year of service; was a permanent officer appointed by the Governor-in-Council.

Sheahan, John Michael (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed 5th September, 1876; employed as Clerk of Petty Sessions and Mining Registrar in various townships: retired 15th July, 1896; apparently retired consequent upon abolition of office; after considerable delay was offered a refund of his superannuation payments and a gratuity of 20s. Public Service Board gives as a reason the unsatisfactory nature of his conduct.

Greville, Henry James (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Employed in the Public Service over forty-three years, thirty-seven of which were consecutive service; first appointment, 8th January, 1853; retired by Gazette notice on 30th June, 1896, and subsequently by letter; first intimation, a newspaper paragraph; had he remained in the service eighteen months longer he would have been entitled to a pension of about £266 per annum; refused a pension, and tendered a refund of superannuation payments, £165 2s., and a gratuity of £830 1s. 9d.

Wilton, Edward George.

Employed in Government Printing Office for about eighteen years; entered service as a temporary hand, 28th January, 1879; promoted to permanent staff, 1st June, 1883, as per Parliamentary Return laid before the Assembly, 20th August, 1890; retired by Gazette notice of 31st December, 1896; wherein again described as a permanent officer; granted a gratuity of £81 2s. 5d. as a temporary officer only; claims a gratuity of £220 to £230 as a permanent officer.

Macdermott, Frederick (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Employed in Government Printing Office over twenty-one years; temporary hand for seven and a half years, and a permanent officer for twelve and a half years, vide Parliamentary Return as in previous case; retired by Gazette notice, 31st December, 1896, wherein he was again described as a permanent officer; granted a gratuity of £78 as a temporary officer only; claims a gratuity of over £200.

Shettle, Frederick.

Employed in Government Printing Office since 5th February, 1877; temporary hand until 1st June, 1883; promoted to permanent staff on that date, vide Parliamentary return; retired by Gazette notice, 31st December, 1896, wherein he is again described as a permanent officer; granted a gratuity of £72 19s. 3d. as a temporary officer only; claims a gratuity of about £140.

NOTE.—All these three officers daily signed a form headed "Daily check—Permanent Staff," and in the lists published in accordance with section 16 of the Civil Service Act of 1884 their names always appeared as permanent officers.

Bell, Charles Edward (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed to Litho. Branch of Government Printing Office in June, 1880; called upon by Public Service Board to resign for overstepping leave; his explanations were deemed unsatisfactory; never previously complained of; considers he is entitled to a refund of Superannuation deductions, £120.

Croft, Herbert.

First appointment, October, 1865, as deed contractor; temporary clerk, 26th April, 1866; permanent officer, 1st November, 1867; Crown Lands Agent, 8th June, 1875; transferred to head office, 15th July, 1878; retired on score of age (65), 31st July, 1896; granted a gratuity, as a temporary officer, of £252 16s.; claims to be entitled to gratuity as a permanent officer; (say) £500 for thirty-one years' service.

Manton, William Arthur.

First appointment, temporary officer in Telegraph Department, in 1874; temporary clerk in Lands Office, 1875; temporary conditional purchase inspector until 1890. After being notified of his retirement was given two months further employment. Offered a gratuity of £61 18s. 1d., calculated on last five years' service. Refused any gratuity for eighteen years' service on the ground that he had received fees for seven years. This constituted a break in his service, though the break was not in the service, but in the method of remuneration.

Pope, Edwin Rupert (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

First appointment (temporary), October, 1888; storekeeper and schoolmaster, Goulburn Gaol, June, 1889; appointed a permanent officer, 1st July, 1890; resigned voluntarily, 29th February, 1897; relying on a memorandum issued by the Public Service Board that retirement would include voluntary resignation, Mr. Pope applied for a retiring allowance, and a refund of amount paid into Superannuation Fund; was offered the latter, but refused any retiring allowance.

Horsley, Charles John (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

First appointment, Crown Lands Agent, September, 1882; resigned from the Public Service in 1891, owing to an "irregularity." Temporarily employed in Attorney-General's Office, 30th November, 1891. Went to Crown Solicitor's Office in 1892; appointed by Governor-in-Council as Clerk to Arbitration and Conciliation Board; on abolition of office went back to Attorney-General's Department; appointed assistant clerk by Executive, to date from 1st July, 1895; retired, 31st May, 1896; temporarily employed in Taxation Department. Refused gratuity of any kind.

Peachey, Charles Isaac.

First appointment, February, 1883, as temporary hand in Government Printing Office; services dispensed with, 12th January, 1897. Claimed a gratuity, but being re-employed, withdraws any such claim "at present."
Ormiston,

Ormiston, Charles Sydney (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

First appointment, 1st October, 1856, apprentice in Government Printing Office; appointed a permanent officer by Governor-in-Council in 1873; retired, 1st July, 1896. Refused both re-employment and pension. Had he been granted his annual and final six months' leave, he would have become entitled to a pension. Was granted a gratuity which, together with Superannuation Fund repayments, amounted to £719 2s. 8d.

Cooper, Michael (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed by Governor-in-Council, October, 1878, as permanent officer in Registrar-General's Department; required to resign in January, 1897, in consequence of "over-indulgence in liquor." Refused any gratuity on the ground that he had resigned.

Jenkins, James (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed warder in Mudgee Gaol, 15th January, 1874; permanent service commenced, April, 1874; senior warder, Mudgee Gaol, November, 1887; Deputy-Governor, Berrima Gaol, January, 1893; gaoler at Forbes, 1st January, 1896; severely wounded while in the public service; retired, 1st January, 1897. Refused a pension. Granted a gratuity as a permanent officer for 2 years, and as a temporary officer for 19 years, "in accordance with the Board's rule." Mr. Jenkins claims that "the Board's rule" cannot override the Act, and claims he is entitled to be granted gratuity as a permanent officer.

Herbert, Peter (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

First appointment, warder in Parramatta Gaol, 1st March, 1865, as per Blue Book; the Public Service Board insist the date should be 24th August, 1866; became Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol, 1st June, 1890; Mr. Herbert gave remarkable evidence, questions 1568 to 1573; was to have been retired 30th April, 1897, but was retained in the Service till 8th August to deal with the prisoner Butler, and then retired; was refused any and all leave of absence; by remaining fifteen days longer in the Department, Mr. Herbert would have completed a full year of service, on which his pension would have been reckoned; by the methods adopted he was kept out of this. Mr. Herbert has been tendered a pension of £243 4s., but claims he is entitled to one of £285 12s. 2d. The matter is still under negotiation.

Smith, Frederick George Davidson (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Was twenty-four years in the Railway Service; paid nearly £100 into Pension Fund; retired on account of ill-health. Refused pension, gratuity, and refund of superannuation contributions.

Smith, Tasker Charles.

Was for fifteen years and six months a draftsman in Government Architect's office, and two years and nine months a clerk in the Justice Department. On account of a break of two months occurring between the two appointments, the Public Service Board granted a gratuity as for a temporary officer for two and a half years, and exclude the whole period of fifteen and a half years. Total gratuity received, under protest, £11 2s. 3d.

Greville, George Herbert (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Employed for seventeen years in the Department of Mines; retired 1st August, 1896; received a gratuity of £450; claims to be entitled to five months' leave on full pay, "or the pay without the absence."

Thorpe, Frederick Ashby.

Entered the Harbours and Rivers Department as a temporary officer, 20th June, 1878; permanent officer, Charitable Institutions Department, 1st January, 1893; resigned, 5th February, 1897; claims some £21 increase of pay, alleged to have been promised by Mr. Wilson, member of the Public Service Board.

Forster, Henry.

Overseer of that department, Darlinghurst Gaol, for more than twenty years; retired in February, 1897, on three months' leave of absence; was physically unfit to perform his duties. The Comptroller declined to recommend Mr. Forster for a retiring allowance. He did not apply to the Public Service Board, and so his case is, therefore, outside the scope of the Committee's inquiry.

Tindell, William Henry.

Has been a contract draftsman in connection with the Department of Lands from 1873 until the present time. Desires to retire and receive a gratuity, which the Public Service Board refuse, apparently as he is not a salaried officer.

Peell, George (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Entered Public Service 1st October, 1876, as messenger in the Department of Lands; after two or three years employed as temporary clerk; permanent officer, 1st July, 1887; total service, nineteen years and ten months. Retired 31st July, 1896. Received a gratuity (including refund of Superannuation Fund contribution) of £235 1s. 8d. Claims to have been illegally discharged, and that he is entitled to a pension under section 48 of the Civil Service Act; age at retirement, 67 years.

Atkinson, Frederick (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Employed in the Government Printing Office as assistant photo-lithographer from May, 1874, to 19th March, 1897; temporary officer, one year and three months; permanent officer, remainder of service; in January, 1897, his salary was reduced by £40 per annum; three months later was discharged at two days notice after twenty-three years service; suffers from blood-poisoning contracted from chemicals used in carrying out his work. Received a gratuity of £96, being at the rate of two weeks pay for each of the last twelve years of service; only claims to be entitled to gratuity as a permanent officer.

James

*Précis of Statutory Declarations.Harvey, James.

Entered Public Service 11th February, 1877; was retired July, 1896; applied to have his services retained until February, 1897, in order that he might complete compilation of parish maps upon which he was then engaged and of which there was "a large amount of urgent work in hand in an incomplete state"; claimed to be entitled to six months' leave of absence on full pay. The Public Service Board refused this request and claim and on 14th December, 1896, Mr. Harvey appealed and claimed also to be entitled to three months' leave of absence, due after ten years' service; Public Service Board refused to permit the appeal on the ground that "if the Board granted the leave others would also apply."

Love, Thomas.

Appointed Mining Registrar and Warden's Clerk, at Barmedman, November, 1886; retired by Gazette notice, March, 1896; claims that such compulsory retirement without notice after ten years' service was unjustifiable; claims he is entitled to a retiring allowance.

Wells, Henry Edward.

Warden's Bailiff at Mudgee for over twenty years; retired 27th February, 1897; claims that, being employed at a yearly salary, he was entitled to legal notice or compensation in lieu of notice.

Bryant, James.

Appointed Messenger at Police Court, Orange, 12th May, 1883; retired by the Public Service Board 1st February, 1897; is now 74 years of age, and unable, on account of age and several illnesses, to support himself and aged wife.

Stone, Henry.

Entered Railway Service in 1870; appointed Mail Guard 1882; retired by Public Service Board in 1896; received a gratuity of £77 9s. 6d; claims he is entitled as a permanent officer to a gratuity of one month's pay for each year of service, viz., to £368 6s. 8d.

Leng, Frank (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

For thirteen and a half years in Public Service, during which time he has been Crown Lands Agent at Wilcannia, Cootamundra, and Gunnedah; suspended (26th March, 1896) upon complaint of Chairman, Local Land Board. Public Service Board called for an explanation, which appears to have been deemed unsatisfactory; was called upon to resign; retired June, 1896; applied for refund of payments to Superannuation Fund, and salary from date of suspension to retirement; apparently both have been refused.

Russom, Edward Stephenson (contributor to Superannuation Fund).

Appointed Rabbit Inspector, Permanent Staff, 1st May, 1883; C.P. Inspector on Temporary Staff (paid by fees), 1st August, 1890; C.P. Inspector, Permanent Staff, 1st January, 1893; retired, 31st July, 1896; all Superannuation Fund deductions have been returned, and a gratuity paid of £132 2s. 1d. for thirteen and a quarter years unbroken service under Government; applied to Public Service Board to know how the gratuity had been calculated, and was refused the information.

Chairman submitted Draft Report, which was read 1^o as follows :—

DRAFT REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on 10th August, 1897, "to inquire into and report upon the question of the retiring allowances and gratuities granted or refused by the Public Service Board to persons retrenched or retired from the Public Service,"—have agreed to the following Report :—

Your Committee have held sittings, and have examined forty-five witnesses (whose names appear in attached list), being persons who have submitted their grievances for consideration; and have also received statutory declarations from other ex-Civil Servants, whose absence from Sydney rendered difficult their personal attendance before your Committee.

1. A large number of other retrenched State employees desired to submit a statement of their cases, and your Committee express regret that the time at their disposal did not admit of the examination of all those persons who desired to appear before them.

2. Your Committee have also examined the members of the Public Service Board and their Secretary; but, for want of time, were unable to make so complete an investigation of the actions of the Board as appeared desirable.

3. From the précis attached to this Report it will be seen that the aggrieved persons may be divided into the following classes, viz. :—

- (a) Public servants who have been refused any retiring allowance or gratuity, on the ground that they were neither permanent nor temporary officers, but were "casual" employees.
- (b) Public servants who have been classified by the Public Service Board as "temporary officers" contrary to the practice of the Departments in which they were employed.
- (c) Public servants of long standing who were retired shortly before attaining the age or length of service which would have entitled them to the enjoyment of the pensions, to provide which deductions had been compulsorily made from their salaries.
- (d) Public servants who have been denied the leave of absence authorised by law, the granting of which leave would have brought such public servants within the ages or lengths of service entitling them to pensions.
- (e) Public servants having miscellaneous causes for complaint.

4. Dealing with Class (a), your Committee draw attention to the fact that the Public Service Act of 1895 refers to and provides for but two classes of public servants, viz., permanent and temporary; and that in arbitrarily creating a third class, designated "casual employees," the Public Service Board have, your Committee believe, acted without legal authorisation, and certainly not in accord with the intention of Parliament. Your Committee cannot believe that when adopting the Public Service Act, Parliament intended intended that public servants, who had given the State services, the duration of which extended over very many years, should be classified as "casuals," and turned out upon the streets in their old age without notice or consideration.

5. Your Committee draw special attention to the following letters, setting forth that the Public Service Board had created this "casual employee" class, "to guide them in their recommendations to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, otherwise the expenditure would be altogether beyond his expectations, and the reasonable aspects of the case." That the Board's action had the endorsement of the Colonial Treasurer, is shown by the letter of the Under Secretary to the Treasury, under date the 16th March, 1897:—

Sir,

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 16th March, 1897.
Referring to your letter of the 22nd ultimo,—I am now directed by the Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer to forward herewith, for your information, copy of a communication from the Secretary, Public Service Board, dated 10th instant, relative to the claims of Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus to compensation owing to their retirement from the Government Printing Office.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK,

Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

E. M. Clark, Esq., M.P., Parliament House.

Sir,

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 10th March, 1897.

With reference to your B.C. communication of the 3rd instant, conveying a request from the Honorable the Premier to be furnished with the facts which are held to disqualify Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus, lately employed in the Government Printing Office, from receiving compensation, I am directed to state that the cases of gratuity being so numerous, the Public Service Board have had to lay down definite rules to guide them in their recommendations to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, otherwise the expenditure under this head would be altogether beyond his expectations and the reasonable aspects of the case, viewed in the light of the serious responsibilities of the Board in relation to the whole question.

The rules laid down are:—

1. Persons appointed by the Governor and Executive Council are considered as "permanent officers."
2. Persons appointed by a Minister, and whose appointments have not been confirmed by the Executive Council, are considered as "temporary officers."
3. Persons appointed by the Head of a Department, and therefore removable by the same authority, are considered as "casual employees," and, therefore, not entitled to compensation when their employment is brought to a close.

Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus come under the latter category, they having been appointed by the Government Printer, who, therefore, had the power to dispense with their services at any time.

I have, &c.,

J. W. HOLLIMAN,

Secretary.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

6. Your Committee draw attention to the fact that though the Public Service Board appear to have sought and obtained the opinion of the Honorable the Attorney-General respecting the legal status of persons employed in such Departments as had Regulations under any Act other than the Civil Service Act of 1884—vide the Board's minute to the Colonial Treasurer,—the Board do not seem to have sought, and certainly have not obtained from the Attorney-General any opinion confirmatory of their action in classifying old servants of the State as "casual employees" (vide Question 1832.) After refusing, for many months, to recommend that retiring allowances be granted to the public servants whom they had thus arbitrarily classified as "casuals," the Public Service Board appear to have entertained doubts respecting the legality of their action, and on the 21st April, 1897, addressed the following important minute to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer:—

The question of granting compensation on retirement in the Public Service is a matter to which the Board have given a great deal of anxious attention. Prior to the passing of the Public Service Act of 1895, no public servant was entitled to any consideration on his retirement except so far as he came within the operations of the Civil Service Act of 1884.

That Act provided for the formation of a Superannuation Fund, to which all permanent "officers" were compelled to subscribe, and the option to do so was also given to persons not designated as "officers," who came within the terms of section 8 of the Act. The Act further provided that from this fund a pension should be granted to persons with over fifteen years' service who might retire by reason of their having reached the age of 60 years, or through ill-health, or whose offices might be abolished. Where the service was less than fifteen years it was provided that a gratuity not exceeding one month's pay for each year of service should be granted. This consideration was limited entirely to subscribers to the fund, and other employees were not entitled to any consideration whatever; but, as a matter of fact, this rule has been departed from at different times, and the practice then seems to have been to grant persons, not subscribers to the fund, one month's pay for each year of service if they had been permanently employed, and a fortnight's pay if their service had been of a temporary character. The money so paid, however, was not a charge upon the Superannuation Fund.

The Public Service Act of 1895 introduced considerable modification of the benefits to which officers would be entitled on retirement during the first twelve months after the passing of the Act, and considerably improved the position of officers continuing to subscribe to the fund after the expiry of that period. A new principal was, however, introduced, which is found in section 11. It is therein provided that officers temporarily employed at the commencement of the Act whose services are dispensed with shall be granted by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Board, out of moneys provided by Parliament for the purpose, a gratuity at a rate not exceeding a fortnight's pay for each year of service prior to the commencement of the Act.

This principle of compensation to "temporary" officers, although, as already pointed out, from time to time tacitly recognised prior to the passing of the Public Service Act, was for the first time made law when that Act came into operation. The Board have had no trouble in dealing with the cases of persons who are permanently employed, and who are subscribers to the Fund; but they have experienced great difficulty in their endeavour to arrive at the intention of Parliament as expressed in the proviso to section 11 above quoted. Officers and others employed in the Public Service are divided into three classes—permanent officers, temporary officers, and persons casually employed.

The distinction between the two latter classes appears to the Board to be that "temporary" officers are those appointed by some member of the Executive Council, and "casual" employees are persons employed on the authority of the head of a Department or some other official. The distinction between temporary officers and casual employees is one, however, which cannot always be made, as many persons whose employment is simply from day to day have been taken on under the instructions of a Minister of the Crown. In their desire to carry out the intentions of Parliament, the Board have had to decide who are officers coming within the meaning of the proviso to section 11. It seems to them that the only persons who could come within the proviso are those who, if they were permanent officers, would come within the operations of the Public Service Act.

This opinion of the Board has been confirmed by the Attorney-General, who has decided that persons whose employment and dismissal do not come within the cognizance of the Board are not officers within the meaning of the Act. This places outside the operation of the Public Service Act, except for the purpose specifically reserved to the Board in section 55, all persons employed in the Department of the Inspector-General of Insane and the Department of Prisons, as well as such other Departments as had Regulations under any other Act than the Civil Service Act of 1884, which were in operation when the Board took office. This exclusion, although it considerably narrows the circle of officers who would be affected by the operations of the Public Service Act, still leaves a large number of officers to whom the term "temporary officer" could be applied, and the Board are seeking for some instruction or guidance which would enable them to come to a definite determination as to the persons to whom the beneficence of Parliament was intended to be applied. There are several thousand persons now in the employment of the State who were in their present employment on the passing of the Act, and who, by the terms of their engagement, are liable to be discharged from their employment practically without notice. If it is the intention that such persons should receive a gratuity on loss of office, the expenses of the Government will be very materially added to, as a fortnight's pay for each year of service is practically equivalent to an addition of 4 per cent. on the remuneration received by them prior to December, 1895.

The matter is so important, and the provisions of the Act so obscure, that the Board think it would be highly desirable that some legislative interpretation should be given to the proviso under section 11. At the present time there are a very large number of cases awaiting the decision and recommendation of the Board; but, in view of the very large sum of money at stake, the Board do not feel able to make the recommendation until they have had some authoritative decision, either by the Cabinet or by Parliament, as to the real intention of this portion of the Act.

It may not be out of place to point out that the provision in respect of the compensation to temporary officers was introduced in the Assembly by a private Member.

At Question 1795, Mr. Barling, Chairman of the Public Service Board, says:—"We are now (2nd November) awaiting a reply to that communication." Your Committee regret that no reply has been vouchsafed to this urgently important document, though upwards of six months have elapsed since it was addressed to the head of the Government.

7. Your Committee feel compelled to draw attention to the uncertainty and confusion of ideas which appear to exist respecting the question of classification of Government employees. In their letter of the 10th March, 1897, addressed to the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, the Board say they classify as permanent officers persons appointed by the Governor-in-Council; yet at Question 1828, Mr. Barling shows that men on wages had a right to make themselves permanent officers by notifying the Treasury of their desire to contribute to the Superannuation Fund. Amongst the retired public servants who have laid their grievances before your Committee, there are persons who, though coming under Mr. Barling's definition of a permanent officer, have been refused the retiring allowance authorised to such officers under the Act, and have only been granted the retiring allowance applicable to temporary officers.

8. The same unsatisfactory condition of affairs exists in relation to the public servants who have been appointed by Heads of Departments. The Board's letter of the 10th March, 1897, classifies these, by the Board's "definite rules," as "casual" employees; but at Question 1829, Mr. Barling says:—"We have not classified them; we have merely pointed out those whom we suppose to be casual men"; yet there is abundance of evidence to prove that not only did the Board classify them as "casuals," but, having done so, over and over again refused them any gratuity, on the ground that they were, as casuals, not entitled to any such consideration.

9. The doubts and confusion of ideas on the part of the Board is expressed in answers to Questions 1805, 1819, 1823, &c.; and the fact that the Board, as Mr. Barling says at Question 1823, "coined" the word "casuals," is, your Committee consider, presumptive proof that the Public Service Board have been more careful to meet the expectation of the Colonial Treasurer as to expenditure for gratuities (vide letter of 10th March, 1897) than to carry into effect the intentions of Parliament regarding liberal treatment of persons retired from the Public Service, as evidenced by the debates during the passage of the Bill.

10. Your Committee also draw attention to the unsatisfactory nature of the Board's "definite rules" of classification, inasmuch as "persons appointed by a Minister" are deemed "temporary officers," entitled to retiring gratuities, while "persons appointed by the head of a Department," by the authority, written or verbal, of a Minister (as in the case of Customs employees), are classified as casuals and denied consideration. In these cases it is admitted that though appointments were made by the Collector, such appointments were invariably made under the direct authority of the Minister; and your Committee disagree with the proposition that any distinction should be drawn between the two methods of appointment, both being made under and by Ministerial authority.

11. Referring to Class (b), public servants who, though regarded departmentally as "permanent officers," have been, by the Public Service Board, treated as "temporary officers," your Committee draw attention to the cases of persons employed in the Government Printing Office. These, it will be seen, were treated departmentally as members of the "permanent staff"; were returned as such in the lists published in accordance with section 16 of the Civil Service Act; were, as per Parliamentary Return, acknowledged to be members of the permanent staff, and were described as such in the Gazette notice authorising their retirement; and yet have been, by the Public Service Board, refused any gratuity but that applicable to temporary officers—i.e., have had their gratuities reduced by one-half, in order that "the expectations of the Colonial Treasurer may not be exceeded."

12. Your Committee do not consider that the arbitrary rule created by the Public Service Board, and applied to these and similar cases, correctly interprets the intentions or wishes of Parliament, or is in accordance with reason or equity.

13. Class (c), public servants of long standing, retired shortly before becoming entitled to the pension for which they had compulsorily contributed, include some of the most painful cases which have come before your Committee; and, to quote Mr. Barling, at question 1545, "there are a number of cases of that kind." It is difficult to believe that Parliament, when passing the Public Service Bill, contemplated that the law would be employed with the severity exhibited in these instances, and be used for cancelling long-existing pension contracts. Some of these cases of unexpected and unmerited hardship may be mentioned:—

Mr. Dalway Bell—Twenty-nine years and eight months service; would have qualified for a pension in four months and a few days.

Mr. H. C. R. Doyle—Twenty years in the service; would have qualified for a pension in five months.

Mr. Henry James Greville—Upwards of forty years service; would have qualified for a pension in eighteen months.

Mr. Charles Sydney Ormiston—Thirty-nine years and nine month service; would have qualified for a pension in a few months.

Mr. Peter Herbert's case is somewhat similar. After thirty-two years and five months service, the Public Service Board refused to allow him to remain fifteen days longer in the Service, when by so doing he would have been enabled to claim pension in respect of an additional year. And the Board also refused to accept the Blue Book as evidence of this gentleman's appointment, and insist on reducing his service by eighteen months, thus cutting off two years and six months of his actual service. Though doing this the Board deducted 4 per cent. pension contribution from the year's salary in respect of which he was refused a pension.

14. The public servants who complain of being denied the leave of absence authorised by law are numerous. Each of the retired officers mentioned in the preceding paragraph are examples. The evidence given by Mr. Barling respecting the question of leave of absence is singularly contradictory. Question 1856—"I understand you deny Mr. Bell's right to six months' leave of absence? Absolutely." Question 1860—"I suppose you admit in Bell's case the Governor might have granted him six months? Yes." Question 1861—"He did not lose any right to receive it at the hands of the Governor by the passing of the new Act? No—i.e., if he were kept in the Service."

In this case, Mr. Bell applied in July for leave of absence, and was promptly retired, while his application for leave was not answered—i.e., refused till the following October—long after he had been thrust out of the Service.

The case of Mr. G. L. Little is another of those where the leave authorised by law was refused, not by His Excellency the Governor, but by the Public Service Board, the members of which appear to have assumed the power of refusal in all cases without reference to the Governor, in whom the power is vested by statute. In this connection attention is directed to Mr. Barling's evidence, Questions 1856 to 1867.

15. The miscellaneous causes of complaint are both numerous and varied; but your Committee have been unable to inquire into them, the time at disposal being so limited that, though sitting usually thrice a week, it has been found impossible to examine the Public Service Board in reply to the grievances submitted. The nature of these cases will be readily seen by a reference to the accompanying précis.

16. Your Committee, while regretting the impossibility of completing the work of inquiry, draw attention to the fact that, so far as they have obtained the evidence of the Public Service Board, in no instance have the statements of retired public servants been contradicted on any material point involving duration and nature of service, emoluments, and the granting or refusing of pensions or gratuities. With the exception of evidence relating to the character of one or two of the witnesses, the evidence furnished by the Board has consisted chiefly of explanations intended to be exculpatory of the action taken by that body.

17. Your Committee have pleasure in drawing attention to the small number of the retired public servants whose characters militated against their receiving retiring allowances, though, in the opinion of the Public Service Board, some who did receive gratuities were scarcely deserving.

18. Your Committee draw attention to the unnecessary discourtesy shown to many public servants in the failure to notify them of their impending retirement, and leaving them to become acquainted with the fact through the medium of the public Press. Your Committee fail to recognise any necessity for such rigorous treatment; indeed, it is a question whether public servants, discharged without notice, are not legally entitled to compensation in lieu of notice, though this question does not appear to have been raised in any instance.

19. Your Committee respectfully recommend that action may be taken—

1. To comply with what they believe was the intention of Parliament, viz., the granting of retiring allowances to persons who have served the country for lengthy periods.
2. That persons who were Departmentally recognised as permanent officers may receive retiring allowances as such.
3. That the cases of old public servants retired shortly before reaching the pension age or period may be reconsidered, with a view to their receiving pensions in lieu of the gratuities already granted them.
4. That those retired public servants of fifteen years standing and upwards, who were denied, though entitled by custom to, the leave of absence authorised by law, may have their cases reconsidered, and redress granted them.

20. Your Committee are strongly of opinion that the interests of justice, not only as regards the Public Service Board and the retired public servants whose cases have been but partially inquired into, but others, whose complaints your Committee have been, for want of time, unable to hear, demand that your Committee should be reappointed early next Session, so that the work of inquiry may be properly concluded.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD—RETIRING ALLOWANCES AND GRATUITIES.

TUESDAY, 17 AUGUST, 1897.

Present:—

MR. GRIFFITH,		MR. HOGUE,
MR. JESSEP,		MR. LYNE,
MR. O'REILLY,		MR. PERRY,

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

David William Mead sworn and examined:—

1. Chairman.] Were you appointed a tide-waiter in the Department of Customs on the 2nd May, 1884? D. W. Mead.
Yes.
2. How long did you hold the appointment as tide-waiter? Until I was dismissed. 17 Aug., 1897.
3. I believe your position underwent some changes;—you acted in other capacities? I acted as locker.
4. I believe, in the first instance, you acted as tide-waiter about six years? About that.
5. In what capacity were you employed at the end of the six years? As acting locker. I had charge of the bond.
6. What bond? I had charge of several bonds before I went to Elliott's Bond. I opened Elliott's Bond at Balmain, and I was there about five years.
7. As acting locker did you discharge continuous duty? Yes.
8. Were you continuously paid? Yes, with the exception of one month out of three, during which I was absent on account of illness.
9. Were you paid by the month? Yes; at per day.
10. Were your services dispensed with? I was told there was no more work for me.
11. Were you acting locker up to that time? Yes.
12. What date was that? To the end of July that year. It was on the 4th August that I was told that there was no more work for me.
13. That meant that you retired from your employment? Yes.
14. Who made that statement to you? Mr. Bethune.
15. What position does he hold? He is the warehouse-keeper.
16. Did he tell you he was directed to make that statement to you by anyone? No.
17. Did he tell you he was conveying the orders of the Collector? The only thing I could do was to go back to the tide-list again. I went into the tide-surveyor's room, and I was there for two or three days, and I was told by Mr. Walford that there was no more work for me.
18. Who is Mr. Walford? The tide-surveyor.
19. Is he the officer in charge of the tide-waiters? Yes.
20. Then your dismissal was not, so far as you know, the act of the Collector of Customs? I do not know whose act it was.
21. So far as you know, Mr. Bethune acted on his own responsibility? I spoke to the Collector as well, and he told me there was no more work for me.

- D. W. Mead. 22. Was that subsequently? Yes.
- 17 Aug., 1897. 23. Did he say anything about the Public Service Board? No.
24. Did you apply for any gratuity? Yes.
25. To whom? To the Public Service Board.
26. I see from your papers that you wrote to the Collector of Customs on the 12th August, and on the 28th the Collector replied, asking you to offer an explanation on certain points? Yes.
27. It appears from the papers that you must have written on the 18th August, inasmuch as you received a reply on the 14th September stating that the Public Service Board considered you had no claim to a gratuity? That is so.
28. Some time subsequently, on the 18th September, you wrote to the Colonial Treasurer? Yes; I produce that letter.
29. Did you receive an acknowledgment of the letter, dated on the 1st October? Yes.
30. Then you had a further letter from the Colonial Treasurer, dated 12th October, stating it was not considered you had a claim? Yes.
31. Then you appear to have written on the 17th December, to the Public Service Board, asking for a reconsideration of their decision not to grant a gratuity? Yes.
32. And on the 30th December the Public Service Board replied that they could not decide otherwise than they had done? That is so.
33. Are you sure that during the whole of the time you were in the Service you were in the receipt of pay? With the exception of some time when I was away.
34. Why were you away? My wife was ill, and I could not leave her at night.
35. Were you away when you were acting locker? Only when I was ill for three months.
36. Did you receive any letter of appointment to your position? No.
37. Who placed you in charge of the bond? Mr. Bethune.
38. When you were one of the tide-waiters he appointed you to this position, and told you to discharge the duties? Yes.
39. As a tide-waiter you were only paid on the days on which you were actually engaged? Yes.
40. But when you were appointed acting locker you were paid all the week round? Yes.
41. Receiving a cheque at the end of the month? Yes.
42. And you know of no reason for a refusal to grant you any gratuity further than as disclosed by these letters, stating you were not deemed to be entitled to one? I know of nothing.
43. Mr. Hogue.] By whom were you appointed? By Sir George Dibbs; I was sent by him to the Collector.
44. Was your appointment in writing? I had a note to the Collector.
45. A note from the Colonial Treasurer to the Collector of Customs? Yes.
46. And, I presume, you were put on by the Collector of Customs? Yes.
47. I presume the letter you took from the Colonial Treasurer was not addressed to you, but to the Collector? Yes.
48. Therefore that letter did not contain your appointment? I do not know what it contained.
49. Did you receive any official notification in writing from the Collector of Customs of your appointment? No.
50. You were simply told to go on? Yes.
51. Verbally? Yes.
52. At that time were you told what remuneration you were to receive? No; it was understood I should receive the same remuneration as the others.
53. Were you told the amount? No; but it was generally understood it would be 10s. 6d. a day, or 15s. 6d. a night, and 1s. 6d. an hour overtime.
54. Were you told your services were temporary or permanent? No.
55. You were told nothing? No.
56. Was it indicated in any way that you would be likely to be required for any length of time? No.
57. Were you given to understand your services might be dispensed with at any moment? No.
58. You were put on unconditionally? Yes.
59. Then your appointment was not gazetted? No.
60. Chairman.] Do you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? No.
61. Were you ever asked to do so? No.
62. Mr. O'Reilly.] What age are you? Seventy years next April.
63. Mr. Perry.] I suppose there is a number of tide-waiters who come and go according to the amount of work there is for them? We have to be there every morning at 8.30 and we go off at 5.
64. That is when you have a shift? Every day.
65. Mr. Griffith.] Whether you are paid or not? Yes.
66. Mr. Perry.] If you have not a shift, you are not paid? No; but still we have to be there.
67. Mr. Griffith.] All day? Yes; we are supposed to be there. We might be wanted at any time to wait for a ship, or anything of that kind.
68. Mr. Perry.] Have you any knowledge of any other tide-waiter having his services dispensed with in the same way as yours were—that is, before the Public Service Board came into existence? The Board came into existence about that time—the end of July.
69. Do you know whether any tide-waiter has been given any retiring allowance at any time when he was retired? I think some have since I left.
70. Do you know of any? Mr. Beard, for one. He got his gratuity, I think, from the time he commenced as a tide-waiter.
71. So that what you complain of is, not only that you have not received any retiring allowance, but that you have been treated differently from someone else? No, I do not know that I have. I have always understood that we were to receive it.
72. But in addition to that, your complaint is that you have been treated differently from someone else? Yes.
73. And you give the name of Mr. Beard as one? Yes; and I think Mr. Bruton is another. I have not seen Mr. Beard myself, but I have always understood that he got his gratuity.
74. Mr. Jessep.] You do not know it as a fact? No.
75. On those occasions, when you "signed on" in the morning, and your services were not required, were you at liberty to take an appointment elsewhere? No; not anything else.
76. Mr. Lyne.] What is it you claim? A fortnight's pay for each year of service.

77. Mr. Griffith.] That is whilst you were in the bond, and whilst you were a tide-waiter? Yes; I con- D. W. Mead.
sidered myself a temporary officer as a tide-waiter.
78. Chairman.] But there is this difference: whilst you were a tide-waiter you were paid as work turned 17 Aug., 1897.
up, and whilst you were an acting locker you were paid regularly as a member of the staff? Yes.
79. Were you paid during the time you were away in consequence of your wife's illness? No.
80. Mr. Lyne.] Were you paid anything when you retired? No.
81. You received nothing? Nothing.
82. Mr. Jessep.] What was the nature of your duties as acting locker? I was in charge of Mr. Elliott's bond at Balmain for nearly five years.
83. Do you consider that a more responsible position than that of a tide-waiter? Yes; I suppose it is.
84. Mr. Perry.] You received goods into bond, and delivered them upon the production of a proper warrant? Yes.
85. Mr. Jessep.] Were there any complaints against you? None whatever.
86. Neither as tide-waiter nor locker? No.
87. Mr. Perry.] I suppose, whilst you were acting as locker, you were on the tide-list? Yes; I was a tide-waiter all the time.
88. Mr. Hogue.] How were you paid whilst acting locker? Monthly.
89. A daily wage? Yes, 10s. 6d. a day.
90. And the payments were made every month? Yes.
91. Mr. Jessep.] Were the hours worked the same? Yes.

Isabella Mason called in, sworn, and examined:—

92. Chairman.] I believe you are the widow of the late overseer of letter-carriers, William James Mason? I. Mason.
Yes. 17 Aug., 1897.
93. He was employed in the Public Service about twenty-seven years? Very nearly.
94. I believe he met with his death some time in July of last year? On the 4th July, 1896.
95. That arose, I believe, through an accident received in the discharge of his duties? Yes.
96. What was the nature of the accident? He was stamping and sorting in the General Post Office at the time. They are in the habit of throwing papers from one division to another. There was a copy of the Town and Country Journal done up for posting, and, as he was stamping and sorting, it was thrown from one division to the other, and it caught him in the eye.
97. Was that the cause of his disease? It was the beginning of his death. Cancer of the eye came from that blow.
98. Was your husband a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from the beginning of it.
99. Prior to his death had his retirement been arranged to take place? It was accepted; but it did not take effect until the 31st July, and he died on the 4th July.
100. Then, prior to his death, the Department arranged for his retirement? I should think so; but his name was not in the Gazette which came out in July.
101. He was not retired by a Gazette notice in July? Not retired; his name was not in it.
102. You understand, then, that it had been arranged that he was to retire on the 31st July, receiving a gratuity, but death took place before? Yes.
103. Did you make any application for the gratuity? I applied for any gratuity which might be due to him, to be given to me.
104. To whom did you apply? To the Public Service Board.
105. What reply did you receive? They considered that I was not in necessitous circumstances, on account of owning the house I lived in.
106. You owned the house you lived in? Yes.
107. Therefore the Board refused payment of any gratuity to you, because they considered you were not in necessitous circumstances? So it seemed.
108. Is the house you have referred to very valuable? No; it was bought for £460, in April, 1896, before my husband died.
109. Where is it situated? In Campbell-street, Surry Hills.
110. Is it subject to any mortgage? There was a debt upon it, but I cleared it off with a few pounds I got from his Lodge.
111. Having discharged that debt, had you any means besides the ownership of the house? None whatever.
112. How many children have you? Eight. Four of them are under 16, the others are able to earn their own bread.
113. Are they able to help themselves? Yes; I depend on my eldest son.
114. Is that the eldest of the four? Yes.
115. Are the four younger ones doing anything? One of the boys, who is 15 years of age, is Mr.
John Sands's office-boy.
116. Then the others are not earning anything? No; they are girls at school.
117. Then you have three young children to support, and you have no means of supporting them beyond what you receive from your eldest son and the boy who is 15 years of age? Yes.
118. Is your eldest son married? No; but he may be at any time.
119. Did you obtain probate of your husband's will? I have just got the receipt of it. The boys gave me their pocket-money, and a gentleman helped me a little, and I got the receipt about a fortnight ago.
120. Then, for over twelve months you have been unable to obtain the probate of your husband's will through want of money? Yes.
121. Have you the letter you speak of with you? Yes. [Produced.]
122. Mr. Hogue.] How long had your husband been in the Service? Twenty-seven years.
123. Do you know whether his appointment was notified in the Government Gazette? I should think it was.
124. What position did he occupy? When he died he was overseer of the letter-carriers.
125. Are you aware whether his appointment was notified in the Gazette? I certainly think it would be, as he held the position for so long. 126.

- I. Mason. 126. But you do not know of your own knowledge? No.
127. Did you ever hear him refer to it? I might have done, but I do not remember.
- 17 Aug., 1897. 128. How was he paid? He received £190 a year at the time of his death, but he had not received that for long.
129. I think you said that he died on the 4th July, 1896? Yes.
130. Prior to his death had he received any communication from the Public Service Board in reference to his position? No; he did not resign his position until five days before his death.
131. Do I understand you to say he resigned his position? Yes; five days before his death.
132. Mr. Perry.] Arrangements having been made for a retiring allowance? I do not know that there had been; he got no notification of it.
133. How long had he been ill? He was five weeks away from work.
134. And five days before his death he resigned from the Public Service? Yes.
135. For what reason? His medical man told him he had no hopes of him.
136. How did he come to resign his position? He did not expect to be able to perform his duties again.
137. Had he received any communication from the Department in reference to his illness? No.
138. I suppose he sent in a notification when he was unable to attend? Yes.
139. Was any pressure brought to bear upon him from the Department? No.
140. Did he resign voluntarily? Yes.
141. Mr. O'Reilly.] You say your husband died on the 4th July, 1896;—do you remember the date on which he got the blow in the eye? Yes; it must have been nearly seventeen years ago. The accident happened in 1881. I could get the date from the Oddfellows' Lodge.
142. And he was five weeks ill before he died? Of course there were other occasions on which he was away from work owing to the operations to his eye.
143. Did his eye always trouble him? Yes.
144. Do any of your children, besides the eldest son, do anything? I have one who is in the Permanent Artillery, but he does not get much. My eldest daughters support themselves.
145. Mr. Perry.] Have you any idea what arrangements have been made or suggested as to a retiring allowance? No.
146. How old was your husband at death? Fifty-five years.
147. Mr. Hogue.] I understand you make no legal claim against the Department? I have always understood that I had a claim.
148. But no legal claim? Not just at present.
149. Mr. Perry.] You would have had a claim if it had not been that you had some property;—was that the reason you gave? Yes.
150. Mr. Lyne.] I understand you to say you did not hear anything from the Department as to an arrangement for your husband's retirement until after his death? No; and then I received a letter to say that the Government were pleased to accept his resignation, and that it would take effect on the 31st July. Of course he was dead and buried then.
151. Did that letter say anything about a retiring allowance? No.
152. What reason, then, have you to suppose that there was some idea that he would receive a retiring allowance? I thought his length of service entitled him to it.
153. But have you heard anything from the Department in any way? No.
154. Mr. Perry.] You say he paid into the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from the beginning.
155. And the fact of his doing so led you to suppose you would get some benefit at the time of his death? Yes.
156. Mr. Lyne.] Have you any certificate from the doctor who attended your husband during his last illness? Yes. He was attended by Dr. Gill, but he did not attend him because of his eye; he attended him for internal cancer.
157. You say he died from cancer? Yes; the eye disease was one of long standing. Then the swelling in the feet came on.
158. It seems to me that you should, if you can do so, connect his death with the injury he received fifteen years before;—the only way to do that would be through the doctor or doctors who attended him? I may say that Dr. George Hankins performed the operations upon him.
159. Can you get any certificate from him? Yes, I should think so; he is to be found in Elizabethstreet, Sydney.
160. Mr. Jessop.] Did I understand you to say that no pressure had been brought to bear upon your husband to cause him to retire? Not that I am aware of.
161. You have no idea what prompted him to retire? I asked him myself to retire.
162. With the full knowledge that he was not likely to live? Yes.
163. Believing that, with his length of service and the fact that he had paid so much into the Superannuation Fund, some gratuity would be forthcoming? So I always understood.
164. Had any complaint ever been made against your husband in connection with his work? None that I am aware of. Of course, he was in the Post Office before I knew him.
165. Mr. Griffith.] I understand that the date fixed for his retirement was a date subsequent to the day on which he retired? Yes.
166. Mr. Hogue.] What did the doctor assign as the cause of his death? The last doctor who treated him said that it was some internal disease.
167. Then it was not connected with the eye? He did not know anything about his eye. My husband asked me not to tell him there was anything wrong with his eye.
168. Did he not die from dropsy? In the end it was dropsy of the feet. I do not suppose he died from that, but from cancer.
169. Mr. O'Reilly.] What was he attended for during the last five weeks? For some internal disease, the doctor said. Of course, he was very much swollen.
170. It was not for the eye? No; the doctor did not know about his eye.
171. You say the Board dated his retirement on the last day of July, 1896? Yes.
172. That gave you an additional month's pay? No.
173. He died on the 4th? Yes, and I got four days' pay—from the 1st to the 4th.
174. And he resigned five days before his death? Yes.

175. What do you mean by saying they dated his retirement on 31st July? It was to take effect from that date. I. Mason
176. Are you quite sure you did not receive the payment to which your husband was entitled up to the 31st July? Yes; I only got four days' pay for July. 17 Aug., 1897.
177. Mr. Hogue.] You say your husband contributed to the Superannuation Fund from the start of it in 1884 till his death? Yes.
178. And although he had done that, neither you nor he received anything in return? Not from that fund.
179. Nor any allowance whatever? No allowance whatever.

Matthew Emerald Robson called in, sworn, and examined:—

180. Chairman.] I believe you were a tide-waiter in the Customs Department? Yes. M. E. Robson.
181. What was the date of your appointment? 12th July, 1880. 17 Aug., 1897
182. What pay did you receive for the discharge of the duties of tide-waiter? At that time we were paid 10s. 6d. a day for day-work, according to results. We were paid 15s. for night-work, and sometimes 1s. 6d. an hour for overtime.
183. How long did you hold that position? Until I was appointed as Chinese inspector—about sixteen months. Then the Chinese Act came into force, and I was appointed one of two who were chosen to see to the administration of the Act.
184. Did you also act as acting locker? Yes. I may explain with regard to the Chinese inspectorship that we had seven days a week each to attend to it, and alternately at night-work. We took it week and week about. I got 10s. 6d. a day for the work, and 15s. a night for the night-work, and so did my brother officer.
185. You also acted as acting locker? Yes. I was three years Chinese inspector. When I was relieved from that I was for a short time—perhaps a few weeks—tide-waiter, on the understanding that I was wanted for something else.
186. With whom was that understanding? With Mr. Powell, the Collector of Customs. Then I was sent out as acting locker.
187. You were constantly engaged as acting locker, up to the 1st August, 1886? Yes, and then I was gazetted.
188. Were you gazetted as locker? Yes.
189. Of what bond? I went to the Argyle Bond. The lockers are frequently changed. I have been to all the bonds in the city.
190. I believe you held that position from 1886 to March 31, 1893? Yes.
191. You say you were gazetted as locker? Yes. From August, 1886, to 1890 I received £200 a year; 1891 and 1892, £240 a year. Then there were some percentage reductions, and in 1893 I received £236.
192. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? I did. It was kept off my salary every month.
193. Were you invited to contribute to it? No; it was compulsory.
194. Was that after you were gazetted? Yes.
195. About how much have you paid altogether? Something about £60. I have asked for the information. I know that at one time I got a statement that it was £57 17s. 6d.
196. I believe you were dismissed on the 31st March, 1893? Yes.
197. There was no Public Service Board in force then? No.
198. Who dismissed you? This is the notice I received [produced]. A letter signed John See, Colonial Treasurer.
199. Were you suspended at all? No; I was at my work, and the inspector came up with a man to relieve me, and handed me that letter. I had to pick up my bag and coat and walk away. I wrote to the Collector of Customs afterwards about it. I remained on the tide-list as a temporary officer. The Collector told me personally, and in writing, that I should receive something better when the tariff was altered—something permanent.
200. Prior to this premature dismissal, had you been suspended? No.
201. Were you ever cautioned? No; I was never incapable of doing my work.
202. Did the Collector ever say anything to you about your mode of work;—was any complaint ever lodged against you? No; I do not recollect the Collector ever saying anything to me, excepting on one occasion two months prior to this, when I received a notice to appear before the Civil Service Board, which was then in existence. I attended there; I did not know at the time what for. The Chairman read out something—I never had a copy of it—to the effect that there were some complaints about my intemperate habits. I appealed to the Board at the time, and asked whether I looked like a person incapable of doing my duty. The consequence was that the Board let the matter stand over. The next notice I got two months afterwards was the letter I have produced.
203. You have stated that no previous complaint had been made? Not to me. I did not know what I was called before the Board for.
204. Is it true you were ever of intemperate habits? I never was that intemperate but I could always do my work. I was never relieved of duty for intemperance. I am not a teetotaller, and I told Mr. Powell so. I was not like many who took liquor and said they were teetotallers. I produce the notice I received from the Civil Service Board. Prior to that the inspector had been in communication with me through the telephone to know whether I would take another position at Cobar. I said I would take time to consider it. I did not know when I went before the Board that they might not be going to offer me something else.
205. Then you had no idea what you were going before the Civil Service Board for? No.
206. When you got there you found that it was because of some complaint as to your intemperate habits? Yes. I defended myself before the Board, and they seemed so far satisfied that they did not take any action.
207. What is the date of that letter? February, 1893.
208. You went back to your duties? Yes.
209. And you discharged your duties for two months longer? Yes.
210. Then you were dismissed by the Governor-in-Council? The inspector brought another person to relieve me, and handed me a letter. 211.

- M. E. Robson.* 211. And you were not called upon to show cause? No.
212. Then you went on the tide-waiting list again? I did.
- 17 Aug., 1897. 213. And you remained in that position until 1896, when you were dismissed? Yes. On August 5, 1896, I was on duty on a visit down the harbour, and I was relieved. The Customs officer told me I was wanted on shore. That was at 11 o'clock a.m. When I saw the Tide Surveyor, Mr. Walford, he told me that the services of myself and ten others were dispensed with from the day before—August 4.
214. Who promised you that you would have some better position than that of tide-waiter? Mr. Powell himself.
215. And that promise was made after you had been dismissed by the Executive Council? Yes.
216. Did you meet with any accident before your dismissal? Yes.
217. What was the nature of it? I lived in a house in Woolloomooloo, and, a little after 8 o'clock, a couple of nights before I was dismissed, I went to bed early, not feeling well. A knock came to the door, and I put my head out of the window to see who it was. There were four respectably-dressed young men there—just out of their teens—and I asked what they wanted. They said they wanted to come in and have some music and enjoy themselves. I used to have friends visiting me, and they brought friends with them. I did not know these young men, but they may have been at my house with friends, for anything I know. I told them I was not well, that I was not going to get up, and that I did not want any company. They went away. In half-an-hour they returned, and knocked again. I put my head out of the window and spoke rather sharply, and told them to go away. Upon that a stone was thrown, which struck me on the head; another stone also struck me on the head, and a third struck me on the nose, and made a mark on it. I went to my landlord and told him about it, and he advised me to go to the police station. I went to the police station, covered with blood, and the police wished to take me to the hospital. I was rather dogged about it, and said, "No; I will not go." I went home. The next day I did wrong in going to work with my face disfigured, and I was not capable of working, although I went. On the second day I went again, and I found myself becoming ill. The fact is that I was in a semi-conscious state, and it was with difficulty I could do my work. I did it, however, and that was the day on which I received the notice.
218. Did you employ any medical man? No; but I had a nurse, who nursed me for a fortnight afterwards. I was laid up for a fortnight.
219. Then your complaint is that you were dismissed from your position as locker, without being called upon to show cause, as required by law? Yes.
220. You consider you are entitled to some gratuity? Yes.
221. Do you deny that there is any truth in the charge that your habits were of such a character as to interfere with the discharge of your duties? They never did. If so, I would have had someone relieving me at any time. I have relieved others myself when they were incapable, and I never was in the position of being relieved.
222. Mr. O'Reilly.] Were you ever cautioned by any superior officer with reference to intemperance? I may have been, and I may have cautioned others myself.
223. Then you think you were cautioned? I will not say I was not. I cannot call it to my mind; but it is possible that we might give advice to one another. I have done it myself to officers.
224. Mr. Perry.] I suppose a man wants a strong head for a billet of that kind? He does. I never was in such a state that I could not do my work, and I have taught a good many who are now in the Service.
225. Mr. Hoque.] In the earlier part of your evidence you stated that no complaint whatever was made against you, except during the time you were called before the Civil Service Board? No.
226. You have just now said, in answer to a question, that there might have been some complaints? Yes; in private conversation with brother officers.
227. Then if any complaints were made against you they were of a private nature? Yes, in a friendly way. For instance, some one might have said, "Take my advice, Robson, and do not take so much." I may have said the same to others.
228. But no official complaint was ever made by your superior officers? No.
229. Who was the officer immediately over you whilst you were engaged in the Customs Department as tide-waiter? Mr. Eames first, then Mr. Smyth, and Mr. Lionel Walford.
230. You have stated, in answer to the Chairman, that you were not called upon to show cause before you were dismissed? Yes.
231. Are you quite sure you were not called upon to show cause? Unless you take it that that letter calling me before the Civil Service Board was a letter to show cause.
232. I do not mean that? Then I never was called upon to show cause. The inspector came up with another officer and relieved me, and gave me this letter, and I had to pick up my coat and walk away.
233. Were you in a fit state to do your work then? I ought not to have been at work, because of the assault, but I did my work all the same.
234. Was this assault something which occurred between your appearance before the Civil Service Board and the receipt of that notice from the Governor-in-Council? Yes, two days prior to its receipt.
235. You had been assaulted between the date of your appearance before the Board and the date of the notification from the Governor-in-Council? Yes.
236. So that, as regards your condition at the time of your dismissal, you had offered no explanation whatever? No.
237. You had not been called upon for any explanation? No.
238. Then your statement briefly put is this: That at the time you were dismissed you were not, as you admit, in a fit state to discharge your public duty, and that that state of things had been brought about by an assault which had been committed upon you? Just so.
239. In respect of which assault, and in respect of the condition you were in, bodily and mentally, no inquiry had been made by your superior officers, and you had not been called upon to offer any explanation? No.
240. And as a matter of fact you had not given any? No. The fact is it was my own fault. I ought to have gone to the hospital, but I was dogged enough not to go.
241. Mr. Jessop.] The first dismissal took place when you were dismissed from your position as locker;—did this assault occur two days prior to that or two days prior to your final dismissal in 1893? Prior to my dismissal as permanent locker.
242. What year was that? March, 1893.

243. Then your final dismissal was not on account of any charge preferred against you of intemperate habits? No. M. E. Robson.

244. But on the ground of retrenchment? Yes.

245. Mr. O'Reilly.] You stated in answer to a question of mine that your superior officers may have suggested on one or two occasions that you might take too much? Yes, simply in a friendly manner.

246. Was that whilst you were on duty? Perhaps they might have done it whilst we were off duty—whilst we were having a friendly chat.

247. I want to find out if there were any bad marks against you prior to your dismissal? It is quite possible that a man might do a certain thing, and that his superior officer might not agree with the way in which he did it, and he might caution us about it. There may be complaints in that way. I suppose there is never a day passes but what there is some complaint of that kind, even with the best of officers.

248. But on the direct question of intemperance;—can you say you never were officially warned as to your habits? Not in writing.

249. Mr. Jessep.] Were you aware that those occasions referred to by you would be noted as records against you? I did not know that they would.

250. Then you may occasionally have given a friendly caution to your superior officer? I have done it to one in particular; but we were particular friends.

251. Considering your length of service, and the amount you have paid into the Superannuation Fund, what gratuity do you think you are entitled to? To a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service, to a month's pay for every year of permanent service, and to a refund of the superannuation money. I think it will amount to nearly £300.

252. Chairman.] Do you claim both the amount you have paid into the fund and the gratuities as well? I think, according to the Act, persons who are retired get a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service, and a month's pay for every year of permanent service, and a refund of the money they have paid into the fund. I have asked for the particulars of the amount I have paid in. I think, on a rough calculation, I am entitled to £270 or £300.

Herbert Cyrus Rowland Doyle called in, sworn, and examined:—

253. Chairman.] I believe you were employed in the General Post Office? Yes.

254. You were appointed on the 28th August, 1876? Yes.

255. Were you appointed by the Governor-in-Council and gazetted? Yes.

256. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.

257. Was that voluntary or obligatory? Compulsory. In fact, I did not wish to contribute from the start, but was forced to do so.

258. You have contributed to that fund compulsorily ever since it has been in existence? Yes.

259. What was your salary? £268 per annum.

260. Was it from that that the deduction was made? Yes.

261. I believe you were granted leave of absence some time last year? Yes, on the 11th May, 1896.

262. For how long? For eight weeks. That was the statutory accumulated leave.

263. Were you to receive full pay during that eight weeks? Yes.

264. That is under the law? Yes, under both laws; and the regulations confirmed them.

265. When would that eight weeks have expired? According to the departmental rule on 2nd September; according to the actual date—there is a holiday intervening, which is always added to the leave—the 1st of September.

266. Did anything happen to you during that period of absence? Yes; about a fortnight after I entered, by authority, upon that leave, I received a notice, dated the 22nd July, telling me I was to be retired from the 31st July.

267. That was a month before your leave had expired? Yes.

268. From whom did the notification come? It is signed by the Deputy Postmaster-General, per J.D.

269. You received a letter from the Postmaster-General, dated 22nd July, 1896, informing you that "His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, and upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, had approved of your retirement according to the provisions of the Public Service Act of 1895, such retirement to take effect from the 31st instant"? Yes.

270. You were on leave when you received that letter? Yes.

271. Up to what date have you been paid? To 31st July.

272. Did you make any representations in reply to that communication? I did.

273. I suppose there has been some correspondence in which you took up some attitude? Yes; I had already applied for six months' leave, to which I was entitled, from 27th August. I applied for that in May, and it was refused on the ground that the Public Service Board was coming to investigate the Department (minute of Deputy Postmaster-General, dated 7th August, 1896), and, as I understand, that possibly they might see fit to dispense with my services. It was on that ground that they refused me six months' leave of absence. But the permanent head of the Department said I was entitled, as a statutory right, to eight weeks' leave under both Acts; and he recommended it, and it was granted to me by the Minister.

274. Did you receive the leave of absence? Yes; I received the leave of absence, but I have not been paid for it.

275. To the best of your knowledge, did the Minister approve of your being paid salary up to the end of the leave which had been granted to you? Yes.

276. And it has not been paid to you? No.

277. Has it been refused to you? Yes, it has been refused to me, although I understand that Mr. Cook, the Postmaster-General, has minuted a paper to the effect that I should be paid. Correspondence has been going on, and I have had interviews with the Public Service Board, which have kept me from doing anything else. For nearly six months I was not able to get any but evasive information from the Department. I thought that when the Minister had minuted a paper in that way his word would, at least, have been binding.

278. You applied for six months' leave of absence on account of your twenty years' services? Yes; and they refused me that, and gave me two months' leave. The Minister and the permanent head of the Department

H. C. R. Department minuted the papers that they were to be brought forward for consideration as to the extended
Doyle. leave when I had completed the two months—that was on the 27th August—by which time I should have 17 Aug., 1897. been in the Service over twenty years.

279. And that would have given you a right to a pension? Yes; I think I have a just right to a pension in any case. There is some talk of the pension clauses being suspended for one year; but I hardly think Parliament intended to select us specially to rob us of a pension. Retired officers before 1896 got pensions—retired men after 1896 must get them.

WEDNESDAY, 18 AUGUST, 1897.

Present:—

MR. GRIFFITH,
MR. JESSEP,

MR. PERRY.

MR. HOGUE,
MR. TRAVERS JONES,

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Herbert Cyrus Rowland Doyle recalled and further examined:—

H. C. R. 280. Chairman.] When we closed your examination yesterday you were making a statement to the effect
Doyle. that to the best of your belief the Postmaster-General wrote a minute on your papers about December last 18 Aug., 1897. that he wished you to have your full pay up to the end of the eight weeks' leave which had been granted you? Yes; the words used were, "Let him have it." I only had a glimpse of the words; I do not know whether it was not a sub rosa glimpse.

281. Have you received that pay? No.

282. Have you received information that the amount is refused you? I have received information, but it is very evasive.

283. Any official information? Yes. I have been told quotations from what the Public Service Board have written. I have had no communication with the Board direct, except in a few personal interviews. All my written communications have been with the Postal Department.

284. What amount have you contributed to the Superannuation Fund? About £119.

285. If you had remained somewhat longer in the Service would you have been entitled to a pension? After the 23rd December—that is, provided the Act was suspended for twelve months.

286. Which Act? The unrepealed clauses of the 1884 Act.

287. You mean, I suppose, that the new Act suspends the operations of the pensions clauses of the old Act? Yes, for twelve months to the end of December, 1896; that is, twelve months after the passing of the Act. The Act was not dated, and the date is taken from the day the Governor gave his assent to it. Before that date officers all received their pensions. Any man contributing to the fund after that date is entitled to a pension. That is where the leave question comes in with me.

288. Was a sum of money paid to you by way of salary after you received the notice of retirement? Yes.

289. Was any deduction made from that for superannuation? Yes; the salary I received on the 1st August, which was the last I ever received, was similar to the previous amount. I received £21 8s. 10d., and the full salary was £22 6s. 8d.

290. Having been granted eight weeks' leave of absence, you claim that, having been dismissed or retired during the currency of your leave, you have not been legally dismissed? Certainly not, because I continued an officer after the date of my alleged retirement.

291. The view you take is that you remained an officer definitely during the continuance of your leave? Yes.

292. Assuming that you had been legally retired, what would you consider yourself entitled to by way of retiring allowance or gratuity? To a pension of about £90 a year.

293. You mean you are honorably entitled to it? I have a moral right to it. My view is that if I had received the leave to which I was entitled I should have passed the 23rd December, and been entitled to a pension in any case, whether the Act was suspended or not.

294. Was the granting of leave a question for the Postmaster-General or the Public Service Board? The law gave me the leave, and the Postmaster-General—the legal authority—fixed the date of it.

295. Did he refuse you more than eight weeks' leave? No; the permanent head refused to recommend more than eight weeks at that time.

296. Did you appeal against the decision of the permanent head? Yes; on the 6th July. When I started on my two months' leave I asked for the question of the six months' leave to be considered before its termination.

297. Did you get any reply to that? No; the reply I got was a retirement notice.

298. You consider you are entitled, by law, to the six months' leave? Yes, and also by custom.

299. And that six months' leave would have carried you to the time when you would have been entitled to a pension? Over the time.

300. That is where your claim to pension comes in? Yes.

301. You do not claim a gratuity? No, I claim a pension; and I think I ought to get it, having paid longer and more money into the fund than many who are now enjoying pensions.

302. Can you give us their names? I think there is a list in the Postal Department of over eighty of those who have been retired from the different departments. I can give you the names of two—Messrs. Lean and Murdoch, both of whom were under 60 years of age, and who retired from the Department a few years ago.

303. Is the list to which you refer printed? It is in the Blue-book.

304. Have you applied for a pension? Yes, both for leave-money and pension.

305. What replies have you received? I received one quotation from the Board to the effect that the Board are of opinion that the law does not permit them to grant salaries for leave of absence to retrenched officers. To that I replied that they have already paid Mr. David Howell, of the Customs Department, up to the middle of November. If they could do that in his case, why not in mine. Again, I asked them to alter the date of my retirement, to bring it to the termination of the leave, and they said the law would not not permit them to do it. But they have done it, because they have altered the date in the case of Mr. Muir, of the Post Office Stores Department, three months, although he was discharged at the same time as I was. That was done so that he would be able to get a pension, he being close on 60 years of age. At the same time, I do not believe he has got the pension yet.

H. C. R.
Doyle.
18 Aug., 1897.

306. You say that was done? Yes; I can produce the Government Gazette notice.

307. Were you the subject of any complaint as to the discharge of your duties? On the contrary, I can produce documentary evidence to show that I gave every satisfaction, and that the work was done better whilst I was performing it than it was done before.

308. By whom were those minutes penned? By the head of my branch, and the permanent head confirmed them.

309. They could be forthcoming if required? Yes.

310. Mr. Jessep.] You say there have been no charges of misconduct against you? No; there was a breach of discipline ten or eleven years ago; but it was simply a personal quarrel between two clerks—not a matter affecting the discharge of my duties.

311. Were you a permanent officer at that time? Yes.

312. Mr. Griffith.] To whom did you make application for the six months extended leave? To the permanent head. He recommends it to the Postmaster-General; if he approves of it, it is sent to the Public Service Board. For that reason I had to make the application in May to date from the 6th July, so as to give plenty of time, because Executive authority would have to be obtained.

313. Did the permanent head or the Minister approve of it, and send it on? They did not send it on, and the Board have complained about it. In fact, Mr. Barling stated to me that the Department was in error in not sending it on. I replied, "Surely, because the Department have bungled the matter it is no reason why I should suffer." He said I should not suffer, and that he supposed they would have to give me the money; but I have not got it. They afterwards found, I suppose, that by paying me even one day after the date of my retirement it would constitute a fresh term of office, but I maintain that the term of office has been extended by virtue of the leave already granted.

314. Chairman.] Is there anything else you wish to state? Of course, I am aware the Board have power to make the retirement. I may say, however, that I have passed through all the positions, fourteen, I think, in the branch. I was promoted to the last one, which was swept away. They gave the man who took my previous position a rise of salary. The one I was promoted to was swept away. I had acquired a right to a pension about five years before the Public Service Act was passed.

Dalway Bell sworn and examined:—

315. Chairman.] In what division of the Public Service were you engaged? First in the Post and Telegraph Department, then as Inspector of Distilleries, and latterly as landing-waiter at the Customs.

D. Bell.
18 Aug., 1897.

316. What was the total period of your service? Twenty-nine years and eight months.

317. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes, from the commencement.

318. Did you contribute until the date of your retirement? Yes.

319. Including the time you were acting as landing-waiter? Yes.

320. What is the total sum you have contributed? £196, without interest.

321. When were you retired? On the 1st August, 1896.

322. What notice did you receive? Twenty-four hours.

323. By whom was the notice given? The Under Secretary to the Treasury.

324. By letter? Yes.

325. Did the notice intimate any reason for your retirement? None whatever. It merely stated my services would not be required after the next day.

326. Did you hold your position from the Governor-in-Council? Yes.

327. Were you a properly gazetted permanent officer? Yes.

328. Prior to your dismissal had you been made the subject of any charge of inattention to duty? Never.

329. You were not asked to show any reason why you should not be called upon to retire? No.

330. Were you paid any salary after the receipt of the notice? I was paid up to the end of July.

331. Was that payment made after you received the notice? Yes.

332. Was any deduction made from that payment for superannuation? Yes.

333. As formerly? Yes. The very last month I was in the Service the superannuation was deducted.

334. And that deduction was made after you received notice of dismissal? Yes.

335. Were you out of the Service at the time this payment was made to you? Yes. I got my pay, I think, on the 31st July.

336. And you had given up your duties two days before? No, the same day.

337. Have you applied for any pension or gratuity? No. I applied to remain in the Service until I was 60, and then I could claim my pension.

338. How long would it have been necessary for you to remain in the Service in order that the pension right may have accrued? Four months and a few days.

339. Since your notice of retirement was given, you made application that you might be allowed to continue in the Service for the four months and a few days, so as to be entitled to come into your pension? Yes.

340. What answer did you receive to the application? Three or four months afterwards I got a reply saying that they could not keep me in the Service.

341. To whom was your application addressed? To the Civil Service Board, through the Collector of Customs.

342. And they kept you waiting for an answer until you had reached the pension age, and then told you they could not do anything for you? It was then seven weeks from my pension age. I may state that previously—20th July, 1896—I applied for six months' leave of absence, knowing I was entitled to it, having been twenty years in the Service. I got no information about that until the 21st October, when it was refused me, after my dismissal.

343. You were refused your leave? Yes, I was refused six months' leave, but I did not know it had been refused until the October after my retrenchment.

- D. Bell. 344. You did not get an answer until after your retrenchment? No.
345. When did you make the application? On the 20th of July.
- 18 Aug., 1897. 346. And you were retrenched the same month? Yes, at the end of the month.
347. Was that notice of retrenchment due to your having applied for leave? I cannot say that.
348. The answer to your application for leave did not reach you until three months after you had been put out of the Service? Yes. Along with the notice which I received to the effect that my leave would not be granted, there was a notice stating that there was a gratuity of £812 at the Treasury for me; but out of that £812 there was £193 13s. which I had paid into the Superannuation Fund.
349. Then they offered you that gratuity? Yes; I have received that.
350. And in taking that did you give a discharge of all claims? They made me do it, or they would not have given me the money. My letter says "gratuity." The question is, "Is the money which was returned to me from the Superannuation Fund part of the gratuity?" I consider it is not a gratuity.
351. Have you kept a copy of the receipt you gave? No; it is in the Treasury.
352. Is it a receipt in full of all claims against the Government? I do not think so. I objected at first to sign in full, and they said that unless I did so they would not give me the money. I saw the Under Secretary about it, and he said I would have to sign in full.
353. That is, giving a discharge in full? I expect so.
354. If you gave that undertaking, what claim do you think you have? As per 60th section of the Act, I think I have a claim for ten years and eight months, during which I was in the Service, from March, 1867, to November, 1877, which they have knocked off my service altogether.
355. Was there any reason given to you? No; in 1876 the House reduced the distillery staff, and I went out of office. I was employed temporarily, with the exception of four months.
356. Then the Board would not reckon the broken service? They did not; nor the ten years before that. I may explain that, in 1874, I was appointed by the Governor by Commission as a Customs officer. That commission was never revoked until I was retrenched from the Service. Therefore, I maintain I have been in the Service continually from 1867 to 1896.
357. If this commission had not been revoked, how is it you did not draw a salary during the period of the commission? During the time I was temporarily employed I was clearing and discharging vessels on the Clarence River. The object was to keep me on until something turned up, so that I could go back into the Service again.
358. Mr. Griffith.] What was the length of the break between being knocked off in 1877, when you were kept on temporarily, and being put on permanently? From September, 1876, to the 1st November, 1877.
359. During that year you had eight months' temporary work? Yes.
360. And on that ground they deprived you of your right to the previous ten years? Yes.
361. Were there any other intervals when you were off the staff? No; it was continuous work before that and since.
362. You have told us of two changes;—in the first instance you were in the Post Office, and then you were put in the Distilleries Department? Yes; there was no break in that. I was put from the Post Office, in 1873, to the Distilleries Department without any break.
363. What would have been the amount of your pension had they granted your request for six months' leave to carry you on to the pension age? That I cannot say. When the distilleries were done away with, in July, 1895—that is when the Distillery Department was closed—Mr. Powell, the Chairman of the Civil Service Board, offered me a pension of £210 per year, or the landing-waitership at £335. Knowing that my time would be up in December, 1896, I took the £335, little thinking anything of this sort was going to happen.
364. Then your pension would have been at least £210 per year? Yes.
365. Mr. Perry.] Have you any idea of the number of holidays you had during your service? I think I am within the mark when I say three months.
366. I suppose you had taken advantage of the holidays which were allowed you, thinking you were entitled to the six months you applied for? Certainly, and more. I am entitled to a month every year.
367. And had they granted you the six months' leave of absence, you would have been entitled to demand a pension? Yes.
368. And your cause of complaint is that you are not allowed to get the leave which would have entitled you to demand a pension? Yes, that is one complaint, and the other is knocking off the ten years' service.
369. Do you know of any officer who has been more favourably treated than you? I have not heard of one.
370. You have not heard of anyone under 60 years of age who has been granted a pension on being retired from the Service? No.
371. Mr. Hogue.] Where were you stationed when your services were discontinued? At Knox's Wharf, Sydney.
372. What duties were you discharging at the time? Those of landing-waiter.
373. How many landing-waiters were there in the Department at that time? About twenty.
374. Do you think the Service was overmanned in that particular respect? I do not think it was at the time I was retired.
375. Were you kept constantly employed? Yes.
376. How were you paid? A monthly salary.
377. Not at so much a day? No. I was on the permanent staff, and was paid monthly, at the rate of £335 per year.
378. Have you the Gazette notice containing your appointment? I have not the Gazette notice here, but I have the appointment and the commission from the Governor, appointing me to my position in 1874.

Dr. Isaac Waugh sworn and examined:—

- Dr. I. Waugh. 379. Chairman.] I believe you are a doctor of medicine? Bachelor of Medicine and Master of Surgery.
- 18 Aug., 1897. 380. You were appointed medical superintendent of the Macquarie-street and George-street Asylums, Parramatta, in 1892? Yes.
381. What salary was attached to the appointment? £450 per year, with allowances.
382. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes. 383.

383. When did you receive intimation in regard to your retirement? I only received notice, as far as I can remember, by seeing my name in the newspaper. Dr. I. Waugh.
18 Aug., 1897.
384. Did you not receive any other communication? I do not think so.
385. What did you do when you saw the notice in the newspaper? I waited until another officer came to take my place, which Dr. O'Connor did on the 1st July, 1896.
386. After the appearance in the newspaper of the notification of your retirement was any money paid to you by the Government as salary? I imagine I was paid up to the actual date I ceased to attend my duties, which was on the 1st July, 1896.
387. I suppose your salary was paid to you after you had read the notice in the newspaper of your retirement? Yes, it would be.
388. If you were retired on the 1st May I suppose there would be on that day a month's salary due to you? Yes.
389. And that would be paid to you on or after the 1st May? Yes.
390. Is it not a fact that a payment of salary was made to you after the notice of your retirement had appeared in the Press? I believe so, but I cannot be positive unless I see my cheque-book.
391. Was the amount paid to you the same as had been previously paid—that is, the salary less the superannuation charge? I know that a deduction was made.
392. Did you apply for any retiring allowance or compensation? Yes.
393. Did you receive any? I think I received a month's pay for each year of service as medical superintendent; also, refund of money paid into Civil Service Superannuation Fund.
394. I believe you received a letter from the Public Service Board informing you that authority for the payment of £220 8s. was forwarded to the Treasury on the 8th September. Did you draw that amount? Yes, I received £224 8s.—i.e., for salary £150, and £74 8s. as refund.
395. Do you know whether the receipt you gave was one freeing the Government from all demands? I cannot tell. I suppose it would be a receipt for the money received.
396. Did the amount you receive represent a month's pay for each year of service? Yes.
397. Mr. Hogue.] What claim do you make against the Government? One claim is this: I had given up a lucrative practice, and I was one of the official visitors of the Parramatta Asylum, for which I received so much a year. I had to give up those things to join the Service. I gave up my private practice and everything else in order to devote the whole of my time and attention to the management of the asylum.
398. I understand you to say you accepted the appointment in 1892? Yes.
399. And when were you retired? On the 1st May, 1896.
400. And what retiring allowance did you receive? A month's pay for each year of service.
401. Then what claim do you make? I was approached with the object of taking this appointment, and I gave up my private practice and everything else. Afterwards, without reason or cause assigned, I was told my services were no longer required.
402. Then you think you are entitled to a special compensation outside the provisions of the Civil Service Act? I consider it is a hardship for a man to give up a good private practice, and to be induced, as I may say, to go into the Service, and then to be told to leave without any reason whatever being assigned.
403. I presume you are aware that a claim of that kind could not be established under the Civil Service Act of 1884, or the Public Service Act of 1895? I expect not.
404. You do not consider you have any legal claim against the Government? I do not think I have.
405. Chairman.] Has anyone been appointed to discharge the duties you discharged? Yes, there is an alteration made in the management altogether.
406. Who is discharging your duties now? Dr. O'Connor, I think. Dr. Violette, I believe, took up the duties for a time. They were not actually medical superintendents, but visiting medical officers.
407. Is there a resident medical officer at the asylum now? No.
408. Were you resident? No.
409. Mr. Perry.] You said just now that someone was appointed to perform the duties you were performing? They perform the medical duties, but not those of superintendent.
410. What are the duties of superintendent? The general supervision of the place other than medical. He has the responsibility of seeing that everything is carried out as far as officers of the institution are concerned.
411. Have you any knowledge of what is being paid to those who are doing your work now? No, I may say that the duties have been divided recently.
412. Mr. Hogue.] I suppose the duties of medical superintendent at George-street Asylum require close attention? Yes.
413. Is not the place very much overcrowded? It has been overcrowded; but I do not know the number who are in it now.
414. Was it overcrowded during your term of office? Yes, I have often seen it very much overcrowded.
415. I presume that all tends to increase the unhealthiness of the asylum, and the death-rate as well? Yes, overcrowding undoubtedly tends to increase sickness.
416. Does it tend to increase the death-rate as well? I may state that the death-rate has not been high, taking into consideration the ages of the patients. Of course, the more overcrowded, the more unhealthy it will be, and the more calculated to increase the death-rate.
417. Have you, yourself, ever made any recommendation in regard to the place? Yes; I have on more than one occasion reported as to the overcrowding of the place. It was relieved a good deal for a time by the Rookwood Asylum, but it soon got filled up again.
418. And it was overcrowded at the time you were superintendent? Yes.

Neil Stewart sworn and examined:—

419. Chairman.] I believe you were a Visiting Justice to the Parramatta Goal? Yes.
420. And you were appointed by the Governor-in-Council on the 12th September, 1878? Yes.
421. What was the amount of salary attaching to the appointment? £100 per annum.
422. Up to what date did you receive that salary? Up to the 30th June, 1896.

N. Stewart.
18 Aug., 1897.

- N. Stewart. 423. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? I was not.
 18 Aug., 1897. 424. When you were retired in June of last year, was it by notice from the Public Service Board, or how? I saw it first in the newspapers.
 425. And was no communication addressed to you? Yes, afterwards
 426. Did you make any representations to anyone with reference to the matter? On several occasions I wrote officially to the Public Service Board and also to the Minister of Justice.
 427. What replies did you get? The replies I received were very unsatisfactory.
 428. What did the Ministerial Department say? They put it on to the Public Service Board.
 429. What did they do? They said I was not entitled to any compensation whatever.
 430. I suppose they recognised that they had dismissed you? Yes.
 431. Did they give you any reason for their refusal to pay you any compensation? No, excepting that I was not entitled to it.
 432. Were there any officers in the Service holding similar positions to yours? Yes; the Visiting Justice at Darlinghurst and Biloela. Captain Chatfield was retired at the same time as I was, and his name appeared in the same newspaper.
 433. Do you know whether he made any application for a gratuity? Yes, and he told me he got some compensation.
 434. Do you know the amount? No.
 435. Up to the present time, then, you have had no consideration in connection with the matter? No.
 436. Is anyone discharging your duties at the gaol now? Yes, the Police Magistrate at Parramatta; and as soon as I retired they appointed a Deputy Visiting Justice.
 437. Then there are two persons now who are discharging the duties you discharged? Yes. I do not know whether they are there at the same time, but I should think not.
 438. Mr. Hogue.] What did your duties consist of? They are prescribed under sections 13 and 14 of the Gaol Regulations.
 439. Chairman.] You produced a memorandum of your public service and of your retirement, and certain other statements connected therewith? Yes.
 440. Do you desire to put that in? Yes; and attached to it are my honorary appointments.
 441. Mr. Griffith.] How were you appointed? By the Governor-in-Council.
 442. And you heard of your dismissal from the newspaper paragraph? Yes. I may state that it is provided that a Visiting Justice may attend to his duties once a week, but I went there regularly twice a week for eighteen years.
 443. I suppose your retirement was notified in the Gazette? Yes.
 444. Mr. Perry.] You mentioned that the Justices at Darlinghurst and Biloela were appointed in the same way as you were? I suppose so.
 445. Have you any reason to suppose they were appointed in any other way? No.
 446. And you have reason to believe these gentlemen have received some retiring allowance? Only one—Captain Chatfield.
 447. And you complain you have not received any retiring allowance? That is so.
 448. Mr. Hogue.] What claim do you make against the Department? I think that under the 60th section of the Act I am entitled to a gratuity of one month's salary for every year of service.
 449. What age were you at the time of your retirement? Seventy-four.

THURSDAY, 19 AUGUST, 1897.

MR. GRIFFITH, | MR. LYNE,
 MR. HOGUE, | MR. PERRY,
 MR. TRAVERS JONES.

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

John Michael Sheahan sworn and examined:—

- J. M. Sheahan.
 19 Aug., 1897. 450. Chairman.] You were in the employment of the Government as Clerk of Petty Sessions and Mining Registrar at Tumberumba, Uralla, Emmaville, Armidale, Nowra, and Scone? Yes.
 451. When were you appointed? On the 5th September, 1876.
 452. Was your appointment gazetted? Yes.
 453. Was it regarded as a permanent appointment? Yes, an Executive appointment.
 454. Were you in receipt of a regular salary? Yes, but I had different salaries for different offices.
 455. Were you remunerated by fees? In some cases I was.
 456. Was that in connection with the Mining Department? Yes and the Small Debts Court first.
 457. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.
 458. Were you invited to do so, or was a deduction made from your salary? A deduction was made from my salary. I contributed to the fund up to January, 1896, when, under the present Public Service Act, we had the option of declining to contribute, and I declined in January, 1896.
 459. Did that declining on your part cut you off from benefits you might have received in respect of your past payments? No; the Act provides that any person who decided not to contribute would, when they were retired, get the amounts they contributed refunded with so much interest added.
 460. You were retired? I was.
 461. When? In June, 1896. I got notice on the 30th June that my services would be dispensed with on the 15th of the following month.
 462. You received a fortnight's notice? Yes, by letter.
 463. Was any reason given why you were retired? No.
 464. Had any complaints been previously made against you in connection with the discharge of your duties? Yes. During my term of office I have been under suspension twice.
 465. Recently, or long ago? In 1891, and the beginning of 1895.
 466. Were you suspended? Yes.
 467. Did you make an explanation, and were you reinstated? Yes.

J. M.
Sheahan.

19 Aug., 1897.

468. Was any penalty attached to you? On the latter occasion I was fined, I think, one-third of a month's salary. That was in 1895.
469. Between the beginning of 1895 and the 30th June, 1896, your conduct was not complained of? No.
470. You were dismissed without any reason being assigned? Yes.
471. Did you apply for any gratuity? Yes.
472. With what result? With the result that I was offered £1.
473. Was that offer made immediately or after some delay? After long delay; in fact, it was not made until I put the matter into the hands of Mr. Lewis Levy, solicitor, Pitt-street. I produce the letter I received from the Board, dated January 25, six or seven months after my notice of retirement. The letter states that the Public Service Board have approved of the payment to me of a gratuity of £1, and that the necessary authority has been forwarded to the Treasury for the payment of the gratuity mentioned.
474. That is after twenty years' service? Yes.
475. Then, as a matter of fact, you were offered a gratuity of 1s. for each year of service? Yes. I may state, however, that through the solicitor I was offered the amount I paid into the Superannuation Fund.
476. Had your solicitor threatened proceedings prior to that offer being made? He had been in communication with the Board. After they made the £1 offer they made the other offer.
477. Then subsequent to the receipt of the offer of a gratuity of 1s. for each year of service the Public Service Board offered a refund of the amount you had contributed to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.
478. With interest? No, without interest.
479. What was the amount? I think it was £120.
480. Did you accept that sum? I did.
481. Did you give an acquittance in full of all demands? I left it in the hands of the solicitor.
482. Has your solicitor ceased to negotiate with the Board in the matter? Indirectly he has and he has not. The thing is still pending. I received a bill from him, and I told him it was no use going any further, as we were going to have the matter brought before Parliament.
483. Did you threaten the action against the Board? The solicitor did for me.
484. Was that threat of action made prior to the receipt of the £120? Yes.
485. As a matter of fact, then, this sum was offered to you after you had, through your solicitor, threatened legal proceedings? Yes.
486. Mr. Hogue.] Was any reason assigned for retiring you from the Service? None whatever.
487. You received a letter from the Department notifying you of your retirement? Yes.
488. Then you were not one of those whose retirement was first notified in the newspapers? No. Of course I saw it notified in the Government Gazette first of all on the 15th or 16th of June, but I received no official notice until I received the letter from the Department on the 30th June.
489. At the time of your retirement what position were you occupying? Clerk of Petty Sessions at Scone, mining registrar, warden's clerk, and district registrar of births, deaths, and marriages.
490. Was some one sent up to fill your place when you retired? No; my office and the office of land agent were amalgamated.
491. Practically, then, the reason of your retirement was the amalgamation of those offices? That is what they did.
492. It appears, then, that the Board retrenched you from motives of economy in order to allow of amalgamation of the two offices? It would appear so. I have received no information to the contrary. I was called upon for no explanation.

Henry James Greville sworn and examined:—

493. Chairman.] I believe you were employed in the Public Service of the Colony for over forty years? For over forty years, but not consecutively. I had been in the Service over thirty-seven consecutive years when I was retired; but I had a three years' previous broken service.
494. In what Department were you employed? In the Supreme Court—Bankruptcy division.
495. When were you retired? On the 30th June, 1896.
496. By Gazette notice? Yes.
497. Did you receive a communication by letter? Yes, subsequently, dated 26th June, 1896. I think the Gazette notice appeared in the middle of the month. The first I knew of my retirement was a statement in the newspaper, which I saw about the middle of June.
498. And a few days before your actual retirement you received a communication from the Justice Department? Yes, to the effect that the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, approved of the decision of the Board.
499. Your appointment was from the Governor-in-Council? Yes. My first appointment to the Public Service was on the 8th January, 1853. That was in the Immigration Department. That continued till about June, 1856.
500. Prior to the issue of the Gazette notice, had the discharge of your official duties been the subject of inquiry or complaint? Not the slightest.
501. I believe you are a Commissioner for Affidavits? Yes; I hold that position now. The Chief Justice extended it to me after I left the Service.
502. Have you been a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes, from the beginning.
503. Can you state what sum you have contributed to the fund? I could not say exactly, because my salary has been increased from time to time on several occasions.
504. When you were retired, did you apply for a pension? After I was notified of my retirement I did. I wrote to the Premier. When Mr. Coghlan came to inspect my work he threw out the hint as to whether I would like to leave the Service. He said, "I suppose you would not object to leave the Service?" I replied, "It all depends upon what I should have to retire upon." I added, "Next year I shall be entitled to claim a pension." He replied, "We have nothing to do with that. You must apply to the Premier if you are not satisfied. He is the only person who can give you any redress if you are not satisfied." Subsequently, I did apply to the Premier.

H. J. Greville.
19 Aug., 1897.

H. J. Greville. 505. Did you get any reply to your application? Yes; as follows:—

19 Aug., 1897. With reference to your letter of the 22nd instant (June), the receipt of which was formally acknowledged on the 26th, I am directed by the Premier and Colonial Treasurer to inform you that you should appeal to the Public Service Board.

506. Did you appeal to the Public Service Board? Yes; and the reply I got on the 20th July, 1896, is as follows:—

With reference to your letter of the 1st instant, pointing out that in eighteen months you would reach the age of 60 years, when you would be entitled to a pension, and asking that some other means may be discovered of dealing with your case, I am directed by the Public Service Board to inform you that they are unable to alter their decision regarding your retirement.

507. Was any salary paid to you after the notice of retirement had appeared in the Press? I was paid up to the end of the month.

508. Was that a payment in full, or was it subject to the 4 per cent. deduction? Subject to the deduction.

509. So that, although you had had a deduction made from your salary towards a pension, you were refused a pension? Yes.

510. A pension having been refused you, did you make application for a gratuity? No.

511. Was a gratuity offered to you? The amount was credited to me in the Treasury, and I was notified that it was obtainable.

512. You were notified that there was a sum of money lying at the Treasury by way of gratuity? Yes.

513. What was that sum? The amount I received was £830 ls. 9d.

514. When you drew that amount what receipt did you give? Simply an ordinary voucher that, on the above date, I had received the sum mentioned.

515. You did not give a receipt in full of all demands? No.

516. Were you asked to do so? No.

517. Was any reason assigned for your retirement? None whatever.

518. In view of the fact that you have received the sum named, do you still maintain that you have a claim to a pension or to better treatment than you have received? Certainly I do. For instance, the amount I have received is about equal to three years and nine months' pension.

519. Was the amount you received supposed to be the amount you had paid into the fund, or the amount you had paid into the fund plus the interest—was it your actual contributions? That I cannot tell you. I cannot remember the various salaries I received, but I take it to be a refund of my contributions to the fund, and then the £830 gratuity should be the proportion allowed under the Civil Service Act after fifteen years of service.

520. We want to know whether this was a gratuity or a refund of your contributions, or both? I have mentioned that the £165 2s. was a refund of my contributions to the fund. The total sum I received was £995. The other was a gratuity, and that I presume was reckoned upon the whole period of service.

521. How much longer would you have had to remain in the Service to entitle you to a pension? About eighteen months—on the 27th December next I shall have completed my 60th year.

522. Mr. Hogue.] Do you make any claim against the Government? I maintain that the Government should give me a pension. They have given me now a sum equal to three years and nine months' pension. If I survive that period, let them give me a pension from that time, or an equitable amount as compensation in addition to the sum already received.

523. You consider you have a legal claim against the Government? I do.

524. Under what section of the Civil Service Act of 1884 do you base your legal claim against the Government? Sections 46 and 48.

525. Do you understand how those sections are affected by the Public Service Act of 1895? The Public Service Act of 1895 provides that it will be competent for the Board to remove any person within the next twelve months. And that all those persons who remain after the end of 1895 are entitled to all the benefits under the old Act. Under the Act of 1884, my pension or gratuity would have been reckoned on the average of the last three years of salary, whereas the Board have averaged it for the whole period.

526. I understand that the amounts you received on your retirement were £165 2s., refund of your superannuation payments, and £830 ls. 9d. gratuity? Yes.

527. Have you made any calculation as to the amount you would have been entitled to receive if you had been granted one month's salary for each year of your permanent service? No. My pension under the old Act would be two-thirds of my salary; and two-thirds of my salary at that time would have been £266 13s. 4d. per annum.

528. Did Mr. Coghlan come alone to examine your work? He came in the first instance.

529. You say he asked you if you were willing to retire from the Service? He said, "I suppose you would not object to retire."

530. Did he ask you your age? No.

531. How long was he in your room before making that suggestion? That was one of his preliminary observations.

532. Was that before he had made any examination of your work? Yes. Then he said, "I want you to show me your work; I want you to explain it." I had not gone very far before I saw he was getting very impatient. I could see he was paying no attention; he did not seem to place any value on anything I said. During conversation, I pointed out to him that, before I obtained assistance, I was frequently in my office till 6 or 7 o'clock at night. He remarked, "Oh, well, what are we paid for?" When he went away, he said he would come in again; but I never saw him again.

533. Did he pay a second visit to your office? He came in a second time, but it was only to ask about my assistant, who was not in. He did not make a second inspection. The other members of the Board, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Barling, came in about two or three weeks afterwards. Mr. Wilson took a seat on a stool, and appeared to be passing the time by turning over the leaves of my book. He did not ask me more than two questions. Mr. Barling now and again asked me a general question; they were not there more than a quarter of an hour.

534. Is it a fact that before Mr. Coghlan made any examination of your work he made the suggestion that you might be willing to retire from the Service? Yes.

535. And he proceeded to examine afterwards? Yes; the conclusion I arrived at was that his mind was made up as to what he was going to do.

536. Were there many other officers retrenched from your department? Only the Chief Clerk, ^{H. J. Greville.}
Mr. Aubrey Mowle.
537. Was your department overmanned? I do not think so; there appeared to be enough for everyone ^{19 Aug., 1897.} to do.
538. Were you asked to make any suggestion for economising the work of the department? No.
539. Did any member of the Board complain to you of the character of your work? No; I would refer you to the reports of the various Treasury Inspectors. During the six years I occupied that particular position, Accountant in Bankruptcy, my work was inspected quarterly.
540. Had any complaint whatever been made before the visit of the Board? I think that some things were said by the Registrar. We were not on the best of terms—that is to say, he challenged many things and questioned their importance; but I had an opportunity of replying to those charges and, I believe, refuted them.
541. Was he dissatisfied with the carrying out of your particular duties? It had reference more to the necessity for the appointment of an assistant. It had nothing to do with the character of my work as performed by me. On one occasion I had to apply for assistance, as I was detained every night until 6 or 7 o'clock, and he said the appointment of an assistant was unnecessary.
542. Are you aware whether he sent in any report regarding your work? Not as against my work.
543. Or in regard to your position? I am not aware. The Minister, upon due consideration, and after special inquiry, granted me an assistant. A subsequent Minister confirmed his appointment.
544. Was the granting of an assistant to you made on any application of yours? Yes.
545. Was it against the recommendation or wish of the Registrar? It was contrary to his wish.
546. You had not been on the best of terms with the Registrar? I often had occasion to refute statements he made.
547. May we say that your official relations were strained? He was always courteous with me, as I was with him. To see us you would never have supposed there was anything between us, but of course there was always an undercurrent of feeling. The inspection of the Public Service Board was a perfunctory performance altogether. Mr. Coghlan took as little interest in my work as would a perfect stranger; the other members of the Board did no more. They simply came because the the Act requires that they should as far as possible make an inspection; the inspection was a mere farce.

Present:—

MR. GRIFFITH,		MR. TRAVERS JONES,
MR. LYNE,		MR. PERRY,
MR. O'REILLY.

JAMES ALEXANDER HOGUE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Francis Oakes Byrnes sworn and examined:—

548. Were you recently retired from the Public Service? Yes.
549. What branch were you in? The Post and Telegraph Service. My last appointment was at a station at Murrurundi. ^{F. O. Byrnes.}
^{24 Aug., 1897.}
550. Mr. Lyne.] How many years were you in the Service? Thirty-three years and nine months.
551. What age were you when you went to Murrurundi? Nineteen years when I joined the Service.
552. Have you ever had any complaints made against you, or been found guilty of any misconduct? None whatever.
553. Since you left home, have you been engaged in any other work but that of the Government Service? No. The whole of my time has been devoted to the Service, with the exception of ten months' probation in 1861, also ten months' probation from the latter part 1861. I was appointed to the Sheriff's Department in 1862, and I was then transferred.
554. Have you been in the Government Service continuously since that time? Yes.
555. Has there been any break? No.
556. Have you paid into the Superannuation Fund? Yes. I paid into the 1864 fund, which became insolvent. I think it lasted until 1872, when it was broken up.
557. That was the first fund? Yes.
558. Had you the money you paid in refunded? There was a general refund all round, with, I think, 3 per cent. added.
559. Did you pay any further superannuation afterwards? Yes; I have paid into the 1884 fund since it was first initiated.
560. What were you classed as in the Post and Telegraph Service? I had charge of a post and telegraph station.
561. Were you a temporary or a permanent hand? Permanent. For some years I was telegraph master only, and had all the sections of lines to look after. Then they amalgamated the post and telegraph office, in 1888.
562. What other stations have you been at besides Murrurundi? Only Muswellbrook. I went there in 1874 from the chief office, and I remained there for three years.
563. What age are you? Fifty-four years next October.
564. When would you be entitled to a pension? After fifteen years of service, if suffering from infirmity of body and mind, which I do very badly.
565. What would your pension be? One-fourth of the salary I was receiving at the time, and one-sixtieth of the salary I received after fifteen years of service.
566. What pension did you consider you were entitled to when you were retired? About £170. I may be a little out in my calculation, but that is the amount as near as possible.

567.

F. O. Byrnes. 567. Did the Board give any reason for retiring you? None whatever. I got notice a week before. I left that I was to be retired. I produce a copy of my retirement as follows:—

24 Aug., 1897.

Postal and Electric Telegraph Department, General Post Office, Sydney, 22 July, 1896.

Mr. F. O. Byrnes, Post and Telegraph Master, Murrurundi,

I am directed by the Postmaster-General to inform you that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, and upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, has approved of your retirement from the Public Service, in accordance with the provisions of the Public Service Act of 1895, such retirement to take effect from the 31st instant.

S. H. LAMBTON,

Deputy Postmaster-General.

568-9. Had you any notice of your retirement before that? I find that I received notice direct from Secretary, Public Service Board, similar to Deputy Postmaster-General's, dated about 15th July, mislaid under excitement, hurrying to Sydney.

570. Did you apply at any time to be retired? No. I may state that about the year 1880 my eyes, as numerous medical certificates will show, were very bad, and, I believe, they proposed retirement then.

571. Was that in consequence of your eyes? Yes; I was nearly blind, and, I believe, they proposed to pay me a pension.

572. Do you know what amount of pension? The pension I would be entitled to at that time, which would be, I suppose, about £150.

573. Have you any doctors' certificates? Yes; I have certificates from Mr. Reginald Bowman, of Parramatta, and Dr. John Harris, of Newcastle; Mr. Rufus Bell, of Murrurundi; and Mr. Murray Oram, of Sydney. These certificates I obtained when I received my notice of retirement. I came to Sydney and got them.

574. In the first instance, did you make any protest to the Board? Yes.

575. Did they become aware of the fact that you held the medical certificates? Yes; I sent them in. I also offered to go before any Medical Board they might elect to be examined.

576. Was that in connection with the claim for pension? Yes. I claimed a pension when I knew I was to be retired, and I thought the Board intended giving me one.

577. What did they give you? £620 17s. They computed the whole of my service, so that when I was a boy it counted against me when I was a man. I accepted the amount under protest, as my letters will show. I had to accept the money to keep me going, but I did not accept it finally.

578. Mr. Griffith.] You did not sign any paper accepting it as final? No. I signed a paper bearing the words "Gratuity on retirement from the Public Service." The replies I received show that I applied for a pension.

579. Do you know of any case which has been dealt with differently from yours—I mean a parallel case? I have authority that Mr. J. B. Wakely's case was dealt with differently.

580. Chairman.] Do you know that of your own knowledge? No.

581. Mr. Lyne.] You state you thought they were going to retire you some years ago, in consequence of your bad eyesight? Yes.

582. Have you any other infirmity? The fingers of my hand are contracted owing to the telegraph work—camping out at night and doing heavy work. I have 500 or 600 miles of wire to look after, as well as the office work.

583. What is the nature of your complaint? I am suffering from a contraction of the tendons of both hands, caused, I presume, by splicing heavy wires.

584. Was that complaint used as a reason for your retirement? They did not say why they retired me. I do not know to this day why I was retired.

585. Chairman.] Your complaint was not urged as a reason? No.

586. Mr. Lyne.] If you were in the Service now, do you consider you would be capable of doing the work? No.

587. Could you work a telegraph instrument? No, because my wrist has gone. I may say I never was much of an operator. I was sent from the accountant's branch.

588. Have you been accustomed to any other work during your lifetime? No.

589. No work beyond that you did in the Government Service? That is so.

590. Are you now capable of turning your attention successfully to any other work? No.

591. Are you married? Yes.

592. What family have you? One daughter. She is a martyr to asthma; she is always laid up with it, and I repeatedly have a doctor in the house. My wife also suffers from bronchitis and asthma. I may state that the house we lived in at Murrurundi was on the brink of the Page River. I had to send my family away, as the water used to rise 4 feet up the wall. After I sent my family away the authorities did something to the house, and put a damp course all round. The doctors tell me I have chronic bronchitis, which I attribute to camping out.

593. Have you any means of earning a livelihood at the present time? My wife is carrying on a small draper's business at Parramatta North, but I am incapable of doing anything.

594. Practically, then, your wife looks after the business? Yes. I assist as much as I can, but I know nothing about a draper's shop.

595. Have you any documents to hand in? I hand in a copy of section 44 of the Civil Service Act of 1884, which was retained in the Act of 1895. Under that section I am entitled to be retired, even though I have not attained the age of 60 years. The section states:—

When any officer owing to infirmity of mind or body desires to retire from the Service, but has not attained the age of 60 years, if he produce medical evidence satisfactory to the Board that he is, by reason of such infirmity, incapable of discharging the duties of his office, and that such infirmity is likely to be permanent, the Government may permit such officer to retire upon the Superannuation allowance hereinafter provided: Provided that the Board may require him to be examined by the Government Medical Adviser.

596. Mr. Perry.] I believe you wrote a letter to the Public Service Board on the 16th July, 1896, in which you make use of the following words:—

Will you please at once inform me on what terms I retire after thirty-four years' honorable and faithful service, and now broken down suffering from severe infirmity of body, through the hardships I have gone through in connection with my duties.

Do you remember writing that? Yes.

597. Did you receive a reply to the effect that, not having reached the age of 60 years, you were not entitled entitled to a pension? I suppose I did. I produce a letter written to the Rev. W. Marshall, of Murrurundi, bearing on the same subject:—

Sir,

In reply to your letter, dated 27th July ultimo, wherein you request that a pension may be granted to Mr. F. O. Byrnes, late Post and Telegraph Master at Murrurundi, I am directed to acquaint you that as Mr. Byrnes has not reached the age of 60 years the Public Service Board have no power to grant a pension to him.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES LYNE,
Secretary.

Rev. W. Marshall, Murrurundi.

598-9. Mr. Lyne.] Was that letter in reply to one written to the Public Service Board by the Rev. W. Marshall, as follows:—

Gentlemen,

Murrurundi, 27 July, 1896.

I take the liberty of writing to you on behalf of Mr. F. O. Byrnes, Post and Telegraph Master here, who has lately been dismissed. He has been thirty-five years in the Service, and has been an active and devoted public servant. He suffers very much from ophthalmia, brought on some years ago by exposure to the sun when superintending repairs to the telegraph wires. He has a delicate wife, and his daughter suffers very much from asthma. If you would kindly grant him a pension in consideration of his long and valuable services it would be an act of justice and mercy.

I remain, &c.,

WILLIAM MARSHALL,

Late Incumbent of St. Paul's, Murrurundi.

? Yes. On the 4th of August, 1896, I wrote the following letter to the Board:—

Will you kindly allow me to approach you by letter. I am anxiously waiting the decision of the Public Service Board as to the term in which I have been retired, after thirty-four years' faithful public service. I forward four medical certificates to the Board pointing out the permanent infirmities under which I suffer, and which entitle me to a pension under the 44th clause of the Public Service Act of 1884, still in force. I have paid into the fund up to the last, which promised this provision in such cases after lengthy service. And as the future lot in life of myself and family depends upon the decision of the Board, you will relieve me and mine of the great anxiety and suspense under which we are now labouring if you will kindly interest yourself in having me furnished with the decision of the Board in my case, at your earliest possible convenience, for which I shall be grateful.

I received the following reply on the 10th August, 1896:—

With reference to your letter of the 4th instant, in which you request to be informed of the decision of the Public Service Board as to whether you are to receive a pension or a gratuity, and urge your claims to the former, I am directed to acquaint you that the law does not admit of the payment of a pension in your case.

I wrote another letter on the 12th August, 1896, as follows:—

Your letter of the 10th instant to hand, stating "that you are directed to acquaint me that the law does not admit of the payment of a pension in my case." Now, sir, if anyone is entitled to a pension under the Act of 1884, the clauses of which are still in force under the new Act of 1895, then I am. Having entered the Service before I was 19 years of age, in robust health, and not pushed forward by political influence, it is now proposed to cast me adrift after thirty-four years faithful public service, deprived of the proper use of my hands through contraction of the tendons, and with most defective eyesight, only partially saved under long and skilful medical treatment, and God only knows what I have and do now suffer from weakness of sight and chronic bronchitis, exclusive of my hands, and all these infirmities contracted in carrying out my public duties. Yet, in the face of four medical certificates from duly qualified eminent medical practitioners, you state that the law does not admit of a pension in my case. Part 5 of the new Act of 1895, as far as my memory serves, reads: if not otherwise entitled under sections 43 and 44 of the Civil Service Act of 1884, then a gratuity is given. I claim to be entitled to a pension under the 44th section, and complied with this section previous to my retirement, by producing medical certificates as to my infirmities being permanent, and can produce further proof if required, and now, as I have been compulsorily retired, it is only right and just that the compulsory contract entered into by the Government should be faithfully adhered to on its part, otherwise a cruel and grievous wrong will be done. Were it possible to properly regain the use of those members permanently injured in the Service, then I would be glad to start in the battle of life afresh, but as hope was held out, and faith placed in the representations of the compulsory Act of the Government, then, I say, what right-minded man or body of men can be found to repudiate this liability of the Act as contained in the 44th section? I have about fifty medical prescriptions for the eyes, if the Board would like to see them.

Please return me the four medical certificates, forwarded to the Board through the Deputy Postmaster-General, and you will greatly oblige.

I received the following reply on the 25th August:—

Acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant asking that your medical certificates be returned to you, I am directed by the Public Service Board to inform you that the certificates referred to were returned to the Deputy Postmaster-General on the 5th August instant.

I also wrote to the Premier on the 11th November, 1896, and received a reply acknowledging the receipt of my communication. I made a final appeal to the Public Service Board on the 7th December last, as follows:—

Will you please inform me on what date it will be convenient to the Board for me to attend and appeal in person against my retirement from the Public Service on a gratuity instead of a pension, to which I am justly entitled under the new Act.

I received the following reply on the 18th December:—

With reference to your letter of 7th instant, I am directed by the Public Service Board to inform you that as you are not now in the Public Service you have no right of appeal under the provisions of the Public Service Act of 1895. I am to add that the law does not permit of the payment of a pension in your case.

I again wrote to the Premier before he went to England, on 26th April, asking him to urge the matter again. He formally acknowledged the receipt of the letter.

600. Mr. Perry.] I believe you wrote again to the Board on the 26th April, as follows:—

On the 31st July last I was dismissed from the Public Service after thirty-four years of faithful and honorable service, at the instance of the delegates appointed by the Board to do this work for them, without any charge, hearing, or right of appeal, or even that fair play or British justice usually extended to the vilest ruffian or criminal, and, further, refused a well-earned pension to which I am justly and fairly entitled under the provisions of both the compulsory Act of 1884 and the Act of 1895, which provides for an official after fifteen years' service receiving a pension if he has any infirmities of body or mind. I produced most satisfactory medical certificates that I am suffering from permanent injuries and infirmities contracted and developed in the Service; yet in face of these the only excuse you can make for repudiating the provisions of the Act is "that I am not 60 years of age"; yet only recently the Board pensioned off a much younger man with many years less service, namely, J. B. Wakely, late Post and Telegraph Master at Raymond Terrace. Some eight or nine years back, when I was suffering from ophthalmia of the worst kind, contracted while out on the telegraph lines on duty, the Chief Postal Inspector, Mr. W. J. Davies, and Mr. Tucker, Chief Telegraph Inspector, visited my station, and they recommended my retirement on a pension then, but I was allowed to remain; yet after all the suffering and trials, I am now refused a pension on the grounds only that I did not come into existence a few years earlier, or, in other words, am not 60 years of age. My uncle, when Minister for Works, never treated you, Mr. Barling, with the injustice meted out to me and mine. I will not rest until I have vindicated this grievous wrong.

? Yes; but I did not get a reply.

601.

- F. O. Byrnes. 601. Do you know of your own knowledge that Mr. Wakely had less years of service than you? I know it to be a fact.
- 24 Aug., 1897. 602. Do you know that he is going to get a pension? I have been told so.
603. If Mr. Wakely was granted a pension of £68 10s., in accordance with the provisions of section 44 of the Civil Service Act, do you consider that you are equally entitled to one? More so, I should think, after such a long service and after suffering such infirmities.
604. Do you produce the papers in Wakely's case? Yes.
605. Mr. Lyne.] Did you take the ordinary leave of absence before your retirement? No. I should have been entitled, according to the Act, to six months' leave, the same as other officials get after twenty years of service. Mr. Lambton has just returned from England after six months' leave on full pay.
606. Mr. O'Reilly.] How much did you pay into the second Superannuation Fund? About £120. I contributed from the start.
607. You say it was proposed to retire you on account of your eyes in 1880? Yes.
608. Have your eyes troubled you ever since? Yes, they are constantly troubling me. I have to wash them in the morning before I can see.
609. When did you obtain your medical certificates? On my retirement—before I was actually retired.
610. Did they state that you were unfit for service? Yes. The Board have seen them. The certificates state that I am suffering from the tendons of my hands being drawn, and from ophthalmia, and from chronic bronchitis—three permanent ailments.
611. You do not complain of the Board retiring you? No.
612. What you complain of is that, subsequent to your retirement, they have not treated you fairly? Not as the Act provides.
613. What was the £620 gratuity based upon? Upon the whole of my service, so that my salary as a boy counts against my salary as a man. Had I got a pension it should have been based upon the salary I received during the last three years of my service.
614. Your contention is that in place of the £620 gratuity you should have received a pension something similar to Wakely's? Yes.
615. What amount? About £170 a year. I received £254 in actual salary, and I had a house worth £40 a year to live in, and small gratuities amounting to £6. That brings the amount up to £300 a year, and my pension should have been computed on £300 a year.
616. Do you produce an abstract of your services? Yes. [Appendix A.]
617. Mr. Griffith.] When you were retired were you fulfilling your duties satisfactorily? Yes, with the exception of operating.
618. Your infirmities were not such as to prevent you fulfilling your duties satisfactorily? I could do the clerical and post office work, but not the operating.
619. Mr. Perry.] I believe you were entitled to an operator in the office? Yes. Telegraph-masters, as a rule, do not operate. They attend to the clerical work and letters, which is quite sufficient.

Edward George Wilton sworn and examined:—

- E. G. Wilton. 620. Chairman.] Have you been recently retired from the Public Service? Yes; on the 31st December.
- 24 Aug., 1897. 621. What branch of the Service were you in? In the composing room of the Government Printing Office.
622. How long had you been employed there? Eighteen years, with the exception of a month or two.
623. Do you make any complaint of being retired? No.
624. Do you complain of the treatment you received in regard to a gratuity? Yes.
625. Were you a permanent hand? I have every reason to believe so. I entered the Service on the 28th January, 1879, and continued on the temporary staff until 1st June, 1883, when I was promoted to what was called the Permanent Salaried Staff. From that time until my retirement I was always looked upon as a permanent employee in the office. I enjoyed all the privileges of a permanent employee.
626. What gratuity did you receive when you retired? £81 2s. 5d.
627. Do you know what was the basis of computation? I have never been able to ascertain. I can only judge from calculation that the Commissioners paid no attention to the period of my temporary service, but gave me a fortnight's pay for each year of service upon the rate which they are now paying in the office, but not upon the average of the emoluments I received, as I understand they should have done under section 60 of the Public Service Act.
628. Did you represent to them that the gratuity you received was not what you had a right to expect? Yes, by letter.
629. Did you get a reply? Yes, to the effect that they could not alter their decision.
630. Does your name appear in a return produced by order of the Legislative Assembly, and laid on the Table of the House on 20th August, 1890? Yes.
631. That is a return in answer to certain questions put to the Colonial Treasurer by Mr. Schey? Yes.
632. In this return your name appears under the heading "Date of promotion to permanent staff"—June 1, 1883? Yes.
633. Therefore you take it that from June 1st, 1883, you were on the permanent staff? Yes.
634. Are you aware that in the Government Gazette, December 31st, 1896, there is a notification signed by Mr. G. H. Reid, Colonial Treasurer, stating that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, and upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, has been pleased to approve of the retirement of the following permanent officers of the Government Printing Office? Yes.
635. Are you aware that your name is amongst those who were retired? Yes.
636. Do you conclude from that that you were a permanent officer in the employ of the Department? Yes, unquestionably. It shows that the Department always considered me as a permanent officer.
637. Under what section of the Act do you hold that you are entitled to a higher gratuity than that which you have received? Section 60, subsection 2.
638. You claim, then, that you should have received a gratuity at the rate of one month's pay for every year of permanent service? There is this proviso which the Commissioners may take into consideration, namely, the term "not exceeding." It may mean that the Commissioners have the discretionary power to make it what they please; but it has always been the custom in the Government Printing Office, and in other Departments, to give a month's pay on retirement for each year of service.

639. Do you claim you are entitled to a month's salary for every year of permanent service? Yes.
640. And you claim a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service? Yes.
641. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? No.
642. Were there ever any complaints against you? Never. I was frequently called upon during my service to act as a proof-reader for several months together, and the salary of a proof-reader is always higher than that of a compositor. Other work I did was the composition of music—a branch of the service with which not one in a thousand compositors is acquainted, and which requires a knowledge of music as well as of musical type. I set up nearly the whole of the musical type used in the office.
643. What age were you at the date of your retirement? Seventy-three years.
644. Have you calculated what retiring allowance will come to you on the basis of a month's pay for every year of permanent service, and a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service? Between £220 and £230, and I only received £81 2s. 5d.

E. G. Wilton.
24 Aug., 1897.

Frederick Macdermott sworn and examined:—

645. Chairman.] Were you recently retired from the Public Service? Yes; on the 31st December.
646. In what branch were you employed? I have been through all the branches of the Government Printing Office.
647. How long had you been there? A little over twenty-one years.
648. What gratuity did you receive? About £78 8s.
649. Were you a permanent officer? I was a temporary officer for seven and a half years, and a permanent officer for twelve and a half years.
650. Have you seen a return printed by order of the Legislative Assembly, giving a list of permanent compositors in the Government Printing Office? Yes.
651. Was your name in that list? Yes. I may mention, however, that whoever compiled the list should have made it from the 1st of June, 1883, instead of the 1st of July, 1883. That was corrected afterwards.
652. Have you seen in the Government Gazette a notification, signed by Mr. G. H. Reid, Colonial Treasurer, to the effect that the Governor had, with the advice of the Executive Council, been pleased to approve of the retirement of certain permanent officers of the Government Printing Office, and that your name is amongst those so retired? Yes.
653. Do you produce a copy of the Gazette? Yes.
654. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Only for a year.
655. Was that the last year of service? Yes. There was some dispute about it when I commenced. Scarcely any of them joined, so I did not join, but I insured my life for a small amount instead.
656. Did you get the amount you contributed with the gratuity? Yes.
657. You do not complain of being retired? No; I was close on sixty-two years of age when I was retired.
658. Have any complaints been made as to the way in which you discharged your duties? No.
659. To what gratuity do you consider you are entitled? I claim an amount equal to a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service, and to a month's pay for every year of permanent service.
660. Have you calculated what the amount would be? I produce a copy of my earnings. On the 1st June, 1883, I received at the rate of £150 per annum; 1st June, 1885, £160; 22nd August, 1888, £170; 1st January, 1891, £180.
661. You have made no calculation as to what the amount would be? No.
662. Do you know what you earned during your period of temporary service? Yes; 1875, £20; 1876, £154 2s. 3d.; 1877, £155 11s. 9d.; 1878, £141 9s. 3d.; 1879, £149 8s. 6d.; 1880, £155 18s. 9d.; 1881, £153; 1882, £150 1s. 6d.; 1883, £63 2s. 6d.
663. Do you know anything of the case of Mr. Samuel Hegarty? Yes; he was appointed on the permanent staff when I was.
664. Is it a fact that he contributed to the Superannuation Fund? Yes. He did not pay to the fund till three years after it started, and then he paid a lump sum. I produce a form which has to be filled in by compositors, and which is headed "Daily Check—Permanent Staff." I filled a similar form every evening.
665. Mr. Perry.] If you were paid what you consider you are entitled to—a fortnight's pay for seven and a half years of service, and a month's pay for twelve and a half years of service—it would amount to over £200? Yes.
666. Your complaint is that you have been paid £78 instead of £200? Yes. I may mention that the permanent staff always pay twopence stamp duty when they received their salaries, but supernumerary or temporary hands pay nothing.
667. So that there can be no doubt about your being a permanent hand for twelve and a half years? No.
668. Chairman.] Did you, in conjunction with Mr. Wilton and Mr. Frederick Shettle, make a communication to the Board in reference to your case? Yes.
669. Is this a copy of it (produced)? Yes.
670. Do you wish to put it in as evidence? Yes.

F.
Macdermott.
24 Aug., 1897.

Gentlemen,—

(Copy.)

6, Westmoreland-street, Forest Lodge, 1 March, 1897.

The gratuities which you have awarded to us on our retirement from the Government Printing Office are so much less than we have always believed we were entitled to receive that we are sorely disappointed, and can only suppose that a mistake has occurred through misunderstanding of our status in the Department.

With regard to this, we desire to point out that in the lists published in accordance with section 16 of the "Civil Service Act of 1884," and in a Return relative to the Government Printing Office laid upon the Table of the Legislative Assembly on the 5th August, 1890, our names always appeared in the list of permanent salaried compositors, to which class we were promoted from the temporary staff on the 1st June, 1883, and thenceforward always enjoyed all the privileges of permanent employees. Furthermore, our retirement was gazetted on the 31st December, 1896, as that of permanent officers.

True, we were not contributors to the Superannuation Account, but that, we submit, is not a reason why any distinction should be made in the matter of gratuities between us and those who were such contributors; and in this opinion we are strengthened by the terms of subsection 2 of section 60 of the "Public Service Act of 1895."

The matter being, to us, of the greatest importance, we beg respectfully to solicit a reconsideration of our case, and hoping this appeal will receive your favourable consideration,

The Public Service Board, Sydney.

We remain, &c.,
EDWD. G. WILTON,
FREDK. MACDERMOTT,
FREDK. SHETTLE.

THURSDAY,

THURSDAY, 26 AUGUST, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE,

MR. O'REILLY,

MR. PERRY.

JOHN CASH NEILD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Joseph Matthews sworn and examined:—

- J. Matthews. 671-2. Chairman.] Were you in the employ of the Customs Department? Yes.
 26 Aug., 1897. 673. For how long? Twenty years.
 674. What duties did you discharge? In the first instance I was a tide-waiter for nine years.
 675. Were you paid for the days and nights employed? Yes.
 676. Were you employed regularly—every day? We were compelled to be there every day and sign the book, and we were compelled to be about the premises until 5 o'clock in the evening.
 677. Then you were pretty frequently employed? There was hardly a day when I was not employed.
 678. That went on for about nine years? Yes.
 679. Did you get any fresh employment after that? I became night-watchman for over twelve months at the Custom-house. I was appointed by the Executive as a permanent officer.
 680. About what date? 1885.
 681. How long did you discharge those duties? Twelve months.
 682. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund at that time? No.
 683. Were you appointed to a fresh position at the end of the twelve months? Yes; I was promoted to the position of locker. I have a letter from Mr. Spring, who was Minister for Lands at that time, which may explain matters. It is dated June 18, 1886.
 684. I believe that soon after the receipt of that letter you were appointed locker? According to the instructions given in that letter, I wrote to Mr. Powell, and he told me to go and see him. I went and saw him, and ten minutes afterwards I was appointed locker by him.
 685. Did you get any fresh appointment from the Governor-in-Council? None whatever.
 686. You were merely promoted? Yes.
 687. How long were you locker? About ten years—until the day I left in 1896.
 688. Were you dismissed then? I was retrenched.
 689. Did you receive a letter with regard to the retrenchment? No; Mr. Bethune was the head of our department, and in the morning when I received my pay he said, "You will not be wanted any more."
 690. Was that all the intimation you received? Yes.
 691. During the ten years you were locker, were you paid a regular salary? 10s. 6d. per day.
 692. Were you paid at the end of every month? Yes; in illness or holidays, I was paid all the same, and I did not lose a day in the ten years.
 693. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? No.
 694. When you were retired, did you apply for any gratuity? I did. I went to the Collector, and he told me to write him a letter. I wrote a letter, explaining how long I had been there, and left it with him.
 695. What answer did you receive? I produce it. It is signed by Mr. Powell, Collector of Customs, and is dated 6th October, 1896, and is as follows:—
 In reply to your letter of the 4th August, applying for a gratuity in consideration of your services in the Customs Department having been dispensed with by the Public Service Board, I am directed by the Board to inform you that as the character of your employment was of a casual nature, employed from day to day, they cannot recommend the payment of any gratuity in your case.
 696. Did you make any application to the Public Service Board after that? I did. I wrote to the Secretary of the Public Service Board on the 26th September, asking for a reconsideration of my application for a gratuity. On the 3rd October, 1896, I received a letter from the Public Service Board stating that, having already considered my case, they were unable to reopen it.
 697. Has there been any further correspondence? Yes. I wrote to the Board again on the 20th February last, applying for compensation on account of my services, and the Board replied that having fully considered the matter they were unable to accede to my request. Subsequently I received a memorandum from Mr. Bethune, from the Customs Department, dated 17th July, 1897, stating that my case was reconsidered by the Public Service Board, but that they were still of opinion that they could not legally grant me a gratuity.
 698. Mr. Hogue.] To what do you think you are entitled? I have only applied for compensation as a temporary employee, so that I should only get a fortnight's pay for each year of service.
 699. Have you received any gratuity whatever? None whatever.
 700. Mr. O'Reilly.] You were never appointed by the Executive? I was in the first instance appointed by the Executive as a temporary tide-waiter. I was appointed by the Colonial Treasurer and Executive twenty years ago.
 701. Were you in ill-health in 1886—I mean when you were transferred from your first position to that of locker? Yes.
 702. What was the nature of that ill-health? I contracted a severe cold when engaged as night watchman. I was getting old, and other infirmities came upon me, and I had a sort of incipient rheumatism, but completed ten years after to the satisfaction of all concerned.
 703. Were there any complaints against you whilst you were in the Service? None whatever.

Herbert Croft sworn and examined:—

- H. Croft. 704. Chairman.] You were a member of the Public Service, employed in the Department of Lands? Yes.
 26 Aug., 1897. 705. For how many years? Thirty-one.
 706. Did you occupy the same position the whole time? No.
 707. What positions have you held? My first employment was in October, 1865, as a deed contractor. My next position was as a temporary clerk, on the 26th April, 1866. My next position was as a permanent clerk, at a salary of £146, on the 1st November, 1867. 708.

708. I suppose that was an appointment by the Governor-in-Council? Yes.
709. Gazetted? Yes. That permanency continued until 31st May, 1875, with increase of salary of £200 per annum and £250 per annum. Then I was appointed Crown Lands Agent at Corowa, on 8th June, 1875, at £300 per annum. H. Croft.
26 Aug., 1897.
710. Where were you stationed? At Corowa, on the Murray. I held that appointment from 8th June, 1875, to 15th July, 1878, and was then transferred to the head office on 15th July, 1878. I have been employed there continuously ever since. I wish to impress upon you the fact that my services have been continuous throughout.
711. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? I was up to a certain date, years ago, under the old Act, and after my return from Corowa I was not asked to contribute. I have not been a contributor since 1878.
712. You have not been a contributor under the 1884 Act? No.
713. Have you been retired from the service? Yes; on the 31st July of last year.
714. What notice did you receive? I got an intimation from the Department, stating that, on the 31st July, it was necessary to discontinue my services.
715. Was that intimation by letter? Yes; dated 20th July, 1896.
716. Do you remember by whom it was signed? I presume by the Under Secretary.
717. Was any reason given for your retirement? On the score of age. I was 65 years of age.
718. Have you preferred a claim for a retiring allowance? Yes.
719. What is the nature of it? When it was intimated that my services would be dispensed with, and that a gratuity was to be allowed me, I made application for it, and found that the amount was not equal to what I expected. I withheld drawing it for some considerable time, until my family required a little money. Then I had to take it, and I took it under respectful protest, believing I had a further claim. I think the payment of gratuity was rated as for a temporary clerk.
720. Under what section of the Act were you entitled to the gratuity? I think I was entitled to a month's pay for every year of service.
721. Under what Act? The 1884 Act.
722. Are you referring to a clause of the 1884 Act which has not been repealed? Yes. The only intimation I got of my permanent appointment having been cancelled was the following letter:—
- It is recommended to His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council that Mr. J. H. Louche, of this Department, be appointed Land Agent at Corowa, at a salary of £300 per annum, being the amount voted for the office, vice Mr. Herbert Croft, to be transferred to the Conditional Sales Branch of this Department.
- That was signed by Mr. J. S. Farnell in 1878. I consider that did not cancel my permanent appointment, which was made by His Excellency the Governor. I looked upon it as a transfer from one office to another. Nevertheless, I have never been able to get at the proper elucidation of it, and consequently I have been accepting a temporary salary ever since, but generally protesting against it all the time since 1878.
723. That is a very long protest? It is; but at the same time you cannot always get satisfaction.
724. You maintain that a transfer is not a fresh appointment? Yes.
725. Was that communication in the Gazette? No; it is a copy of an official letter.
726. What answer was given to that memorandum? Mr. Louche took my place.
727. But that is a memorandum drawn up for the advice of the Executive;—what did they do? They acted upon it, and appointed Mr. Louche, vice myself.
728. Then there must be some record in the books of the Executive Council as to this appointment? Yes.
729. Is there no entry in the books of the Lands Office? None that I am aware of. That is the only intimation I received of the cancellation of my appointment. I know what the rule of the Service is—that when a person's appointment is cancelled it is recommended to the Governor that it be cancelled.
730. Then it amounts to this: That ever since 1878 you have been treated as a temporary officer, and on your retirement last year by the Public Service Board you were paid a gratuity as a temporary officer only? Yes. I have asked them how they arrived at their basis, and they will not tell me.
731. You could not get any satisfaction from the Board as to why they offered you a gratuity of a certain amount? No.
732. What was that amount? £252 16s.
733. Do you know whether that sum represents a fortnight's pay for every year of service? I could scarcely arrive at a calculation; but I think it does. I produce a little paragraph from a newspaper, dated 28th September, 1887, showing the names of fifty-two gentlemen who were transferred from the temporary to the permanent staff of the Department of Lands. If I had been a temporary hand at that time, my name would have been included, so that I have always inferred that they considered me still a permanent hand. What I contend is that my permanent appointment was never cancelled. If the Government can satisfy me that it has been cancelled, well and good.
734. Mr. O'Reilly.] Were the fifty-two gentlemen to whom you refer the whole of the temporary hands in the Department at that time? I believe so.
735. Are you sure? I would not be certain.
736. You were appointed a permanent clerk in 1867? Yes.
737. The Chairman asked you whether that appointment was gazetted, and you said you presumed so;—are you sure it was gazetted? I could almost say it was for certain.
738. You have no doubt you were on the permanent staff? Not the slightest.
739. You were appointed Crown Lands Agent at Corowa in 1875, and were transferred to the head office in 1878? Yes.
740. What reason was given for the transfer? There was a report from Mr. Pinhey and Mr. Charles Oliver, two inspectors, to the effect that they did not consider me an officer capable of carrying out the duties. It was upon that, of course, that I was retained in Sydney. I had an opportunity of seeing that report. I went into it, and believing there were statements in it which were exaggerated, I asked as a particular favour to be examined before a special Board, as I believed I was in a position to refute part of the statements made. I may state that I have been in the Department ever since, and if I had performed my work in an unsatisfactory manner, surely cases would have cropped up. But there has not been a single condemnatory case against me.
741. You state that the general charge against you was that of incapacity? Yes.

- H. Croft.
26 Aug., 1897.
742. Was there any specific charge against you? There were one or two charges which were cleared up afterwards upon my explanation of them. For instance, Mr. Thompson, the Chief Inspector of Accounts, wrote a letter in reference to my transaction of business whilst at Corowa. It was so severe that I took the liberty of interviewing him personally. I told him he had done me a great injustice, and asked him to communicate with certain gentlemen at Corowa to verify my statement. He acted upon that, and a week afterwards I asked him if he had received any communication from the people to whom I had referred him. He said he had, and he read it to me, and I remarked, "I think that is satisfactory." He remarked, "Yes, it is quite right."
743. You say you have been protesting since 1878? Yes.
744. Have you kept a copy of the letters? I believe I have.
745. How many times did you protest? Four or five times by letter, and many times verbally. Only a few weeks before I left the office I interviewed Mr. Capper, and he said, "You have not contributed to the fund." I replied "No." He asked, "Would you be willing to do so, provided your position as a permanent clerk was established?" I said, "With the greatest pleasure, conditionally on being recouped the loss of service." I may state that, having been graded as a temporary clerk, I have lost better positions, to which I would have had a right. Eight months before I left the office, I asked for six months' leave of absence, and was refused, and I asked the Board why. They replied, "Simply because you are not on service." I replied, "I was on service at the time I made the application."
746. Do the old Civil Service Board consider you as having at any time been a permanent officer? When I found the position I was in I asked to be heard before a Select Committee, as I possessed documentary evidence to show how I had done my work up-country. I may state that during the time I was away (about three years and one month) I sent away nearly (single-handed and under great difficulties, because it was a new office) £500,000.
747. When you found you were not contributing to the Service Fund, did it not strike you that you were not considered a permanent officer? Yes.
748. Did you take any steps to establish your position? I frequently made application for the particulars of my transfer.
749. Chairman.] When the fifty-two temporary officers were placed on the permanent list, did you make any move? I did. I made application to this effect: "Having observed by the Gazette notice that so many officers have been transferred, I should like to know why I, being considered a temporary hand, was not included in the list."
750. To whom did you address that? To the Under Secretary.
751. Did you get any reply? No.
752. Had you been recognised as a permanent officer, you would have been entitled to six months' leave on full pay? Certainly.
753. You did not get that? No.
754. Did you get any leave on full or on half pay? I have had the usual two or three weeks' leave, but not the stipulated leave to which I was entitled.
755. When you were on the leave to which you refer, were you on full pay? Always. Even after I was considered, from 1878, as a temporary clerk, I made application to our Chief Commissioner, Mr. Moriarty, for a month's leave of absence, and it was given to me without any hesitation. I have also had two months' leave in one year (year 1895) since this, also on full pay. If I had been a temporary clerk they would have refused it, as I would not have been entitled to it. That was after I came down from Corowa.
756. I suppose Mr. Moriarty's recommendation went to the Under Secretary? Yes.
757. Would it go to the Minister? Yes.
758. Who was Minister then? Mr. Farnell, I think.
759. In that case the Minister must have treated you not as a temporary officer? I think so.
760. You think so, because such a leave would not have been granted to a temporary officer? I am pretty certain of that.
761. Not by custom? No.
762. Do you think they may have made a special exception in your case? No. I may state that I was not ordered down from Corowa. I may state that I came down to go to the hospital to undergo a slight operation. I came down on sick leave.
763. Then you were not brought down specially by way of transfer, but you came down on sick leave, and having come down you were retained in the office in Sydney? Yes, I was retained, not in consequence of being sick, but by the Department.
764. Mr. O'Reilly.] Were you ill at the time these officers reported adversely? Yes, I had been ill. I was suffering from piles, but that did not render me incapable of performing my duties.
765. Did your duties take you out of the office much? Very seldom.
766. Mr. Perry.] You say that the Public Service Board have made you an allowance? Yes.
767. Have you any reason to believe that in that allowance you received anything as a permanent officer? Not at all.
768. Not for any portion of your service? No, because £252 16s. for thirty-one years of service would not be an equivalent.
769. Then they have not treated you as a permanent officer at any time? They must have treated me as being a permanent officer for a short time—from the date of my permanent appointment until removal by the transfer.
770. I want to know whether they have treated you as a permanent officer at any time and given you the allowance for that time? That is what I have been trying to arrive at myself. I have asked that, and they have not satisfied me.
771. Chairman.] Is there any statement you would like to make? I may mention that when the Commissioners came to the office, they sent for my ledger, as a specimen of the work, and how it was performed. I was told only yesterday not to forget to mention that. I asked, "Why?" The answer was, "It will be a feather in your cap." When the Commissioners came to our room, there were thirteen of us there; and Mr. Capper introduced me to Mr. Barling. He said, "Is that your book?" I replied, "Yes, that is one of them"; and he remarked, "Thank you." It only took them fifteen minutes to examine thirteen officers.
772. Mr. O'Reilly.] How much do you think you are entitled to? About double as much again as I have got—£500.

773. Chairman.] Then really your statement to the Committee resolves itself into this: Whether you were or were not, subsequent to 1887, a permanent or temporary officer? Yes. H. Croft.
774. You were treated as a temporary officer, but you have no knowledge of any Executive action disputing your rights as a permanent employee of the Public Service? That is so. 26 Aug., 1897.

Edward Quinn sworn and examined:—

775. Chairman.] Were you for many years in the employ of the Postal Department? Yes, for thirty-five years; and I was in the Government Service for three years before that. E. Quinn.
776. What was your first position in the Government Service? I was engaged in London to come out here to join the police. 26 Aug., 1897.
777. Were you in the London Police Force? Yes; and I was engaged there for three years' service here.
778. Did you resign from the Force? I served for three years and then left.
779. Were you then appointed to a position in the General Post Office? Yes.
780. How soon after was that? It was some time after.
781. What was the nature of the duties you had to discharge in the General Post Office? Those of a letter-carrier.
782. I believe you were appointed in 1861? Yes.
783. By whom were you appointed? By the then Colonial Treasurer, the late Mr. Weekes.
784. Were you paid an annual salary? Yes; £132 a year.
785. For how long did you hold your position as letter-carrier? For thirty-five years.
786. When were you retired? Twelve months ago—in 1896.
787. By whom? By the Public Service Board.
788. Did you receive a written notification of retirement? I did.
789. By whom was it signed? By the Postmaster-General.
790. What age were you when you were retired? Seventy years.
791. Were you delivering letters right up to the age of 70 years? I was.
792. What salary were you receiving at the time of your retirement? £170. It had been increased gradually.
793. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? No.
794. Were you ever asked to do so? No; it was optional.
795. Why? I could have contributed if I had thought proper, being a permanent employee.
796. Did you receive any gratuity? I did.
797. What was it? A fortnight's pay for every year of service.
798. Were you satisfied with that? I was not.
799. Why? Because, as a permanent officer, I was entitled to a month's pay for every year of service.
800. Did you state that view of the case to the Public Service Board? I did in writing. All my documents are there.
801. Did they not send you any replies? No replies whatever. The only reply I got from the Secretary of the Board was that I could be cut off with 1s.
802. Did he write to you to that effect? No; he told me verbally.
803. He told you the Public Service Board could dismiss you without any gratuity at all if they pleased? He said they could cut me off with 1s.
804. When you received this fortnight's gratuity for every year of service, did you give any receipt? I did; for the amount I received.
805. Did you give a receipt in full of all demands? No, not to my knowledge.
806. Why were you retired? On the score of age. I have as clean a sheet at the Post Office as Mr. Lambton.
807. Mr. O'Reilly.] What gratuity did you receive? £196 13s.
808. What was the name of the Secretary who said the Board had power to cut you off with 1s.? It was the one who was acting for Mr. Lyne; I think he is there now.
809. Are you sure it was the Secretary? He was acting for the Secretary at that time.

Frederick Shettle, 14, Macquarie-street, Sydney, sworn, and examined:—

810. Chairman.] Were you employed in the Public Service? I was a compositor in the Government Printing Office. F. Shettle.
811. Mr. Hogue.] Were you a permanent or a temporary hand? I was always under the impression that I was a permanent hand from the 1st June, 1883. 26 Aug., 1897.
812. How long had you been in the Printing Office? Since the 5th February, 1877.
813. How were you paid? In the first instance fortnightly, and since 1883 monthly.
814. Were you on piece-work? No; I was paid a fixed salary.
815. A return was some time ago laid upon the Table of the Legislative Assembly, containing the names of the hands employed in the Government Printing Office. I see from that list that you were first employed on the 5th February, 1877, and the date of your promotion to the permanent staff is set down as the 1st June, 1883? Yes.
816. Have you seen that return? Yes.
817. When do you say you were retired? On the 29th December, 1896.
818. What notification did you receive of your retirement? A circular.
819. Are you aware that in the Government Gazette of the 1st December, 1896, there was a notification signed G. H. Reid, Colonial Treasurer, wherein His Excellency the Governor, upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, is said to be pleased to approve of the retirement of the following permanent officers of the Government Printing Office? Yes.
820. A number of names are mentioned, one of them being Frederick Shettle;—does that refer to you? Yes.
821. That being the case, you regard yourself as a permanent hand? I do.
822. What retiring allowance did you receive? £72 19s. 3d.
823. What was the basis of the computation? I could not say.

- F. Shettle.
26 Aug., 1897.
824. Do you know whether you received a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service, or a month's pay for every year of permanent service? I am sure I did not receive a month's pay.
825. Did you receive any allowance for your period of temporary service? No.
826. Are you satisfied with the amount you received? Certainly not.
827. What do you consider you are entitled to? To about £140, on the basis of a month's pay for every year of permanent service.
828. And anything for temporary service? I understood the Commissioners would not allow anything for temporary service.
829. But do you consider yourself entitled to it? I thought I was entitled to it.
830. What age were you when you were retired? Forty-eight years.
831. Were you suffering from any infirmity? Yes; I was in a position in which I had to do some heavy work, and I strained myself. I was on leave for about eleven months. I did not permanently recover the use of my leg. I am still suffering from it.
832. Were you injured permanently whilst engaged in your duties? Yes.
833. Was there ever any complaint as to the way in which you carried out your duties? None that I am aware of.
834. Do you make any complaint of having been retired from the office? Only in regard to the matter of compensation.
835. Chairman.] Have you any other grounds for assuming you were a permanent officer beyond the Gazette notice of your retirement? When I was placed on the permanent staff, I was told by the then Superintendent, Mr. Charles Potter, that I was permanently employed.
836. Is there any memorandum in the Department showing that? I presume so.
837. Could the Government Printer put persons on the permanent staff without the authority of the Executive? I am not aware, but I always understood that he recommended those who were to be placed on the permanent staff to the Treasurer, and that the Treasurer confirmed his recommendation.
838. How many classes of employees are there in the Printing Office? There used to be three staffs in the composing department, known as "supernumerary, the permanent supernumerary, and permanent."
839. Was your employment continuous? Yes.
840. You did not take your chance of a job, but came regularly every day? Yes.
841. How were you paid? Monthly, from the 1st June, 1883.
842. Was it a yearly salary? Yes; £150 and £160 per annum.
843. Do you know whether your salary appeared upon the Parliamentary Estimates, or whether it came out of a lump sum? It came out of a lump sum.
844. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? No.
845. Were you ever asked to do so? Yes.
846. Did you decline? I did.
847. Mr. O'Reilly.] The gratuity you thought yourself entitled to was about £140, and they gave you £72 19s. 3d.? That is so.
848. Therefore, it appears to be clear that they calculated it upon a fortnight's pay for every year of service? Yes.
849. Mr. Hogue.] Is it a fact that you had to sign what is called a daily check? Yes.
850. I believe that daily check bears the heading "Permanent Staff"? Yes.
851. Is this the form [produced]? Yes; I put the form in as an appendix to my evidence. [See Appendix B.]
852. Chairman.] When you were retired, did you receive any notification of any reason for it? No.
853. You have not done any work at the Printing Office since? Not at the Government Printing Office.

THURSDAY, 7 OCTOBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE, | MR. PERRY,
MR. WADDELL.

JOHN CASH NEILD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

John Rush sworn and examined:—

- J. Rush.
7 Oct., 1897.
854. Chairman.] I believe you were a letter-carrier in the Post Office? Yes, for over twenty-one years.
855. Were you retired? Yes, last July twelve months, by the Public Service Board.
856. Did you receive a letter from the Board advising you of your retirement? No; I received no intimation of it until I saw it in the newspapers.
857. Prior to that, had there been any complaint against you? None that I know of.
858. You were not made the subject of any inquiry or fault-finding? No.
859. What was your age on retirement? I believe I was bordering on 61. I do not think I was 61, although I suppose I was entered on the books as 61. I know there are older men in the Service than I am, and men more incompetent to do the work.
860. Were you appointed by the Postmaster-General or by the Governor-in-Council? By the Postmaster-General, Mr. J. F. Burns.
861. Was your appointment advertised in the Government Gazette? I do not think appointments were gazetted at that time.
862. When you retired, did you receive a pension? I received a pension of £51 6s. a year.
863. Is that the full pension to which you were entitled? My pension, I believe, should be about £58. I have paid into the Superannuation Fund for eleven years, and they have made an abatement of ten years.
864. They made the abatement, I suppose, on account of your only having paid for eleven years? Yes.
865. Prior to that you were in the police force? Yes, for ten years and four months. During that time I paid 3 per cent. to the Superannuation Fund off my salary, and when I was retired I made an application to the Board that that service should be considered in dealing with my pension; but they never answered it.
866. Then you have received pension only in respect of twenty-one years' service in the Postal Department? That is all.
- 867.

867. Have you received any advantage whatever from the payments you made to the Police Superannuation Fund? Not a farthing. J. Rush.
7 Oct., 1897.
868. How did you come to leave the police force? I resigned. I was stationed at Botany for nine years. I may say that the Hon. George Lord, who was a particular friend of mine, resided there at the time. Although the district was a very quiet one, my superior officers found fault with me. There was a system in the force under which, if you had not a certain number of cases in a month, you were considered a useless man. My superior officer is dead and gone now; but he often told the men on parade, when they were going out at 9 or 10 o'clock at night, that they were receiving their money under false pretences when they had not a certain number of cases per month. I got disgusted and told the late Mr. Lord of it. He mentioned the matter to Mr. J. F. Burns, who got me appointed in the Post Office.
869. Then your reason for leaving the police force was that you objected to arrest innocent citizens in order to make a good police record? Yes; it was not to my interest to leave after ten years of service. I had been in the Irish Constabulary prior to that, and I considered it was not my duty to stand behind a post until I saw an outrage committed, and then put in an appearance. I always considered that prevention was better than cure. But that is not the system adopted in the police force of this city, I am sorry to say.
870. Was it, and is it, a regulation in connection with the Police Superannuation Fund that if a member of the force resigns he loses his claim to that fund? I cannot say about that. I brought that under the notice of Mr. Lord. I said "There is one thing I want you to understand—if I leave now, after ten years of service, I shall have to go into the Post Office at a reduced salary." I had been drawing £10 10s. a month in the police force, and I went into the Post Office for £9 a month. I do not know whether you remember Mr. Richard Driver, twenty-five years ago, asking a question in the House, to which Captain McLerie replied that there was no such thing existing as men having a red mark placed against their names if they did not have a certain number of cases per month. Nevertheless it was true. I asked Mr. Lord if he thought I would get the ten years' service in the police force added to my twenty-one years' service in the Post Office, and he replied, "most decidedly."
871. What time elapsed between your leaving the force and being appointed to the Post Office? I went in my police uniform to the Post Office to report myself. I had not my resignation at the time.
872. Did you start work then? I started a couple of days after, when I got my resignation from the police.
873. As soon as you received the notification of your resignation you went straight to the Post Office and commenced work there? Yes. I did not lose a day's pay.

Charles Edward Bell sworn and examined:—

874. Chairman.] Have you been in the Public Service for some length of time? Yes; I joined the lithographic department of the Government Printing Office in June, 1880. C. E. Bell.
7 Oct., 1897.
875. How long did you remain in that position? Until July, 1896.
876. How did you come to leave? I obtained leave from Mr. Potter on account of certain business I had to transact at Newcastle, and I overstepped the time.
877. What was the length of your leave? I had half a day on the Saturday and the Monday, and I overstepped it seven or eight days on account of illness.
878. What was the nature of your illness? I was taken ill at Newcastle. I stayed at Watts' Hotel on the Saturday, and then went to stay with Mr. George Edwards, at Wickham, where I was very seriously ill for four or five days.
879. Did you make any communication to Mr. Potter about your illness? I did not know what I was doing or saying whilst I was in bed, and they did not even know where to telegraph to. When I came to my senses, Mr. Edwards received a letter from my brother asking if I was in Newcastle.
880. Did you become insensible at Newcastle? I absolutely could not have told anyone where I lived.
881. How did Mr. Edwards come to know you were there? I met him accidentally on my arrival, and I told him I was seriously ill. I had been bleeding at the nose for two or three days before.
882. Then Mr. Edwards removed you to his house? Yes; I was delirious.
883. On coming to yourself you received a telegram from your brother asking whether you were in Newcastle? Yes.
884. What happened after that? Directly I could get up I came to Sydney and went to the office.
885. How long was it after you became master of your actions that you communicated with the Government Printer? I took the train and came to Sydney at once.
886. Were you sufficiently well to travel? I could hardly walk to the train. I went to the office and reported myself. When I got there, I was informed that I had been reported to the Treasury as being away beyond my leave, and it was out of their hands to say anything to me about it until I received a communication from the Treasury.
887. What communication did you receive? I received a communication from Mr. Kirkpatrick asking me to give him an explanation as to why I was away.
888. Did you give him that explanation? I did.
889. Was it accepted? It was not considered sufficient. I got another letter informing me that they had referred the matter to the Public Service Board. About a fortnight afterwards I received an intimation from them asking me for an explanation, which I sent them. I then received another letter asking me to go and see them at their office, which I did. I saw Mr. Barling, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Houston. Mr. Edwards had written explaining my severe illness whilst I was at his house. I referred Mr. Wilson to that letter, and he said, "Can you get an affidavit?" I replied, "Mr. Edwards considers that his letter is as good as an affidavit, as he is a J.P." He then said, "Call in on Monday, and I will see what can be done," or something to that effect. I called in on the Monday, and they told me that they had made up their minds to ask me to resign.
890. Did you resign? I was asked to resign, and I resigned.
891. Do I understand that Mr. Edwards refused to give an affidavit? He told me personally that his letter was as good as an affidavit. Mr. Wilson, as soon as he saw it, said, "This is as good as an affidavit."
892. You were asked to resign, and you did resign? Yes; I had to resign.

- C. E. Bell.
7 Oct., 1897.
893. When you resigned, did you not part with whatever rights you might possess? I do not think so. I paid £120 into the Superannuation Fund.
894. Mr. Hogue.] Do you consider you have a legal claim against the Government? I think it is only a just claim. £120 was deducted from my salary and paid into the Superannuation Fund whether I liked it or not, and I get nothing after sixteen years of service. I was never complained of before either by Mr. Potter or Mr. Griffiths. I was discharged from my position, and was not even returned the money I paid into the fund.
895. Then you consider you have more of a moral than a legal claim on the Government? I have a moral claim. If I had not resigned, and they had dismissed me, I should have no claim at all. I have been told by lawyers that I have a legal claim to what I paid in.
896. Chairman.] Was anything said by Mr. Wilson when he asked you to resign about your right to a pension or gratuity? No.
897. Since your resignation, have you made any application to them? Yes.
898. With what result? They told me that they would not reopen my case.
899. Have you any correspondence on the subject? Yes.
900. Mr. Hogue.] Did they make any inquiry from you as to the cause of your illness? Yes; I told them the cause of it. I was under Dr. Harper for years. I suppose I paid him nearly half my salary for nearly five years.
901. Did they allege intoxication against you? No; not that I know of.
902. Chairman.] I see from your correspondence that you have a letter from the Public Service Board on the 7th September, 1896, stating that unless you furnished certain affidavits you would be dealt with as provided by the Act? Yes.
903. You wrote them on the following day giving certain explanations why you had not been able to obtain affidavits;—then you had a letter on the 12th September asking you to call at the office? Yes.
904. You called and saw them. Then on the 24th September you asked to be informed as to what decision the Board had come to. On the 29th September the Secretary wrote to you that the Board must await the return to Sydney of Messrs. Barling and Houston. On the 30th October you received a letter from the Treasury stating that His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, upon the recommendation of the Board, had been pleased to elect that you be called upon to resign your position in the Service. On the 7th November you wrote a letter asking to be informed whether you would be refunded the sum of money deducted from your salary under the Superannuation Act, viz., £120; also whether you would be allowed the usual retiring allowance of one month's salary for every year of service, your claim amounting in all to something like £500? Yes.
905. On the 17th you received a letter from Mr. Kirkpatrick stating that you must tender your resignation unconditionally? Yes.
906. Thereupon you forwarded your resignation? Yes.
907. On the 18th September a letter was written from the Treasury stating that His Excellency had been pleased to accept your resignation? Yes.
908. Mr. Waddell.] Had you a doctor whilst at Newcastle? Only a chemist, and he sent in a statement as to what he treated me for.
909. Chairman.] Subsequent to the acceptance of your resignation you made further representations in writing with a view to obtaining some consideration in respect of the amount you had paid into the Superannuation Fund, and the answer you finally received was that they declined to reopen the case? Yes.
910. Do you consider that you have a legal or a moral claim? I consider that I have a legal claim.
911. Notwithstanding your resignation? Yes. I know of men who have resigned and who received their money. A man outside told me a short time ago that he resigned and got his money.
912. Can you give us the name of any person who has resigned from the Service and received any consideration afterwards? No.*

William Arthur Manton sworn and examined:—

- W. A. Manton.
7 Oct., 1897.
913. Chairman.] Were you in the Public Service? Yes; first of all in the Telegraph Department.
914. When were you first appointed? In 1874.
915. By the Governor-in-Council? No, temporarily.
916. Did you hold any subsequent position? Yes; from there I went to the Lands Office as a temporary clerk in 1875.
917. Was there any break in your service? No; I went from one Department to the other.
918. Have you held any other position? Yes; I was appointed temporary conditional purchase inspector. I held that position up to 1890. I was paid by fee in lieu of salary and a travelling allowance. In 1890 I still held the position of temporary conditional purchase inspector, but paid by salary and travelling allowance. I held that position up to the time I was retired.
919. Were all these temporary positions? Yes.
920. How were you notified of your retirement? About six days before the retirement took place I received a letter saying I had been recommended for retirement by the Public Service Board. The letter came from the Department of Lands.
921. Had the Board previously made any inquiry into your operations? None at all.
922. Was your discharge of duty made the subject of any inquiry or complaint? None at all.
923. Was any reason given for your retirement? No.
924. Did you apply for any retiring allowance? I did.
925. What reply did you receive? After I was retired they gave me two months more work in order that I might clear up some instructions I had on hand. They told me they would not give me any gratuity as I was still working. When the two months were up I came to Sydney and they told me my gratuity would be £61 18s. 1d.
926. How was that calculated? Only on the last five years of my service. 927.

* NOTE (on revision):—The name of the gentleman referred to (as having received such consideration) is Mr. Pope; and he, I believe, was to be examined by the Committee immediately after me.

927. Was any reason given why they calculated for five years only? Yes; they said that previous to that I had been paid by fee, and that, therefore, there was a break in my service. Consequently eighteen years of previous service was simply ignored.

928. Then, although you have been continuously employed during the whole of twenty-three years, they would not reckon more than the last five years, because for seven years you had received fees and a travelling allowance, and they deemed that there had been a break of service? Yes, and before that I was in the Head Office on salary.

929. And you went on salary again afterwards? Yes.

930. Did you accept the £61 18s. 1d.? Yes; under protest. It led to correspondence between the Board and myself.

931. And there the matter ended? It is not ended yet. I tried to persuade them to get the opinion of the Attorney-General, but they would not consent. They said the gratuity was quite within the power of the Board, and they would not send for the opinion of the Attorney-General. On the 13th of last month I wrote and asked for an interview, and I saw Mr. Barling. I pointed out that I thought they had been making some mistake about my service. He said, "Under section 60 we have to compute the gratuity on your salary." I pointed out that section 11 was the section with which they had to deal with in connection with my service, and that section 60 had nothing to do with my case. That seemed to startle him a little, and he said, "I will get the opinion of the Attorney-General," and that is what I have been wanting them to do for the last twelve months.

932. Have you had his opinion? No, the papers are at present in the office of the Crown Solicitor.

933. Mr. Perry.] In 1883 you received fees;—were you asked to receive fees, or did you apply? I do not think I made any application. I think I was offered the appointment of temporary conditional purchase inspector.

934. Was there any change in the method of dealing with the inspectors generally in regard to paying them? No; all the other inspectors at that time were paid by salary.

935. The only reason, so far as you are aware, that the Board have for refusing to give you that to which you think you are justly entitled is, that there was this break, as it were,—not an actual break in the service, but a break in the method of payment? Yes, a break in the method of payment.

936. Chairman.] From the date on which you entered the Public Service to the date of your retirement was there any break in the continuation of your service beyond the leave or the holidays which you may have received? None at all.

Edwin Rupert Pope sworn and examined:—

937. Chairman.] Were you employed in the Public Service? Yes, and as clerk and schoolmaster at Berrima.

938. What was the date of your appointment? October, 1888.

939. Was that appointment made by the Governor-in-Council and gazetted in the Government Gazette in the first instance? It was temporary in the first instance.

940. On the 17th June, 1889, you received another appointment? Yes, as storekeeper and schoolmaster at Goulburn Gaol. That was a temporary appointment.

941. You held that position until 28th of February, 1897? I held that position until the 1st of July, 1890, and then I was appointed by the Governor-in-Council and gazetted. I held that position until the 28th of February, 1897, and I resigned voluntarily.

942. For what reasons? On account of the reductions in salary.

943. During the period you had held this position did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes, except while I was a temporary officer; from 1st July, 1890, until some time in February or March, 1896, I contributed to the Superannuation Fund, when I discontinued, because of the information received from the Board that unless we discontinued there were certain conditions attached to it.

944. Prior to resigning, did you make any condition about receiving a gratuity? I could not make a condition.

945. Did you seek to make any stipulation? I was under the impression from the Act that we were entitled to certain things. One was a return of the superannuation money; the other was an allowance of one month's pay for every year of permanent service, and a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service.

946. But that was in the case of persons who were compulsorily retired? That was what the Act said in the first instance; but a memorandum was sent round by the Board to the different Departments stating that the word "retirement" was to include voluntary resignation. You could easily get a copy of the memo.

947. Could you tell me the date of it? About March or June, 1896.

948. In June, 1896, the Public Service Board sent to the Departments a memorandum stating that the word "retirement," under section 62 of the Act of 1875, was to include voluntary resignation? Yes.

949. Was this memo. sent round to be initialled? It was read to the different officers of the Department. There was a memo. at the bottom of it, or attached to it, stating that it was to be read to them.

950. Then, relying upon this circular by the Board, you resigned in the full expectation that you would be entitled to a gratuity? Yes.

951. Did you apply for it? Yes.

952. Did you get it? No; I got a reply from the Board to say that what I had paid into the Superannuation Fund was allowed me, but from some opinion received I was not entitled to the other.

953. Did you accept the superannuation money in full of all demands? No.

954. Mr. Perry.] When did you cease to contribute to the Superannuation Fund? I could not say exactly. I think it was March, 1896.

955. Was your application for retiring allowance made by you before or after resignation? It was included in the resignation. I applied both for a retiring allowance of a month's pay for each year of service and the amount I paid into the Superannuation Fund.

956. They simply gave you the bald opinion that you were not entitled to a gratuity? That is so. They said that from an opinion received by the Board I was not entitled to it.

957. They did not give you the opinion? No.

E. R. Pope.
7 Oct., 1897.

Byron Belmore Thomas sworn and examined:—

- B. B. Thomas. 958. Chairman.] You were in the employment of the Government? Yes, in the Customs Department.
 959. When were you appointed? August, 1892.
 7 Oct., 1897. 960. To what duty? I was a tide-waiter then.
 961. That is an intermittent kind of service? Yes.
 962. Who appointed you? Mr. John See. I may say I was only nine months in that intermittent service.
 963. During the time you held that position you were remunerated by salary? 10s. 6d. a day—that was when I worked.
 964. At the end of that time you were appointed to some other position? Yes; in June, 1893, I was appointed to act as clerk in the Warehouse-keeper's room.
 965. Who appointed you to that position? Mr. Powell sent for me and put me in that position.
 966. You were not appointed by the Governor-in-Council? No; I was only a temporary officer.
 967. How long did you hold that position? Until my retirement—in July of last year.
 968. How were you paid? Monthly, at the rate of 10s. 6d. a day—13 guineas and £14 3s. 6d. every month.
 969. How did you come to be retired? I do not know. I have never received any notice to this day that my services were dispensed with.
 970. How did you come to go? I presented myself for a week continuously after the 31st July—after the Gazette came out—and I was told every morning there was nothing for me to do.
 971. What Gazette do you refer to? To the Public Service Gazette, grading the Department.
 972. Did it grade you? No. It never said I was to take notice that my services were dispensed with, and I never received any notice.
 973. Then who told you there was nothing for you to do? Mr. Bethune, the Warehouse-keeper. I pointed that out to Mr. Reid in a letter I wrote to him. I got a reply to say that the Government could not take any notice of the matter. I produce a copy of the letter I wrote to Mr. Reid and the reply.
 974. In March, 1893, you passed satisfactorily the Civil Service examination? Yes; at the head of the list.
 975. Then in letters dated August, 1896, you applied for a gratuity? Yes.
 976. And on the 28th September they wrote you that they were unable to recommend the payment of any? Yes.
 977. On the 29th September you wrote again, and on the 6th October you received a letter from the Secretary of the Board saying:
 I am directed by the Public Service Board to inform you that service as a tide-waiter is not such as qualifies for a retiring allowance under the provisions of the Public Service Act of 1895.
 ? Yes. They said it was a casual labourer's position.
 978. On the 12th of October you made a further communication to them; on the 2nd December you received another letter from the Board, stating that they do not regard you as being entitled to any gratuity;—then your solicitor, Mr. Arnott, on the 7th of December, wrote to the Board that you had been constantly employed as a clerk in the drawback room at the Customs House, and he submitted that you came within the provisions of section 60 of the Public Service Act, and as such were entitled to a gratuity of a fortnight's pay for each year of service? Yes.
 979. The Secretary of the Board replied on the 16th December, stating:
 I am directed to inform you that the Public Service Board are not prepared to state the reasons for their decision in this matter.
 ? Yes.
 980. Mr. Arnott wrote again that he had made a mistake in saying you were employed in the drawback room—it should have been the Warehouse-keeper's room? Yes.
 981. Then, on the 12th October, 1896, you addressed a letter to the Premier, and received a reply, dated the 3rd of December, that the decision of the Public Service Board in your case cannot be disturbed? Yes.
 982. Have you since that date taken any further steps? I have applied several times to be reinstated in any position they like to give me, and they have always written back to say my name had been put on the list; but it is such a long time ago that I should have starved had it not been that I was able to make a living for myself. They said a tide-waiter was a casual labourer.
 983. When did they say that? When people made application for a gratuity.
 984. But it is not mentioned in any of the correspondence? Not in my correspondence.
 985. Has the work you were doing still to be done? Yes.
 986. And someone else has been appointed to do it? Yes.
 987. At what rate of salary? £200.
 988. When you were in the Service the work was discharged, I believe, by Mr. Harker, at £265, and yourself at £160 6s. 6d. per annum, making a total of two officers whose salaries amounted to £425 6s. 6d.; since you were retired the work has been rearranged, and is now discharged by Mr. Trouton at £200 a year, Mr. Woods at £150, and Mr. Hill at £100, making a total of three officers whose salaries are £450 per annum? Yes.
 989. Is it not a fact that, in consequence of the abolition of duties, the work of the Department has materially decreased? At the time these men came in there was not a quarter of the work to do which I had to do. I worked there from 6 o'clock in the morning to 11 o'clock at night when the Land and Income Tax Bill came on. I became ill in consequence of it. I came back to work against the doctor's orders, and as my reward for the attention given to my work, got turned out. Mr. Bethune reported me as being the best clerk in the room.
 990. I believe Mr. Harker was retrenched as well as yourself? Yes; he has gone to Western Australia, and has got a billet in the Custom House there at £250 per annum.
 991. Were Messrs. Trouton, Woods, and Hill temporarily employed in the Service? With the exception of Mr. Hill, each got double the salary they were getting. Mr. Trouton was getting £100, and now he gets £200. Mr. Woods was getting £75, and now he gets £150. In each instance they doubled their salaries. They were employed in the Service as probationers.
 992. How long had they been in the Service? Mr. Trouton was in the Service about the same time as myself. Mr. Woods had been a messenger there.
 993. I believed you passed the necessary examination with honours? Yes. 994.

994. Did Mr. Harker pass? He was one of the old cadets, and worked his way up.
995. Did Mr. Trouton pass an examination? No; I do not think he did. He tried four times, and I think he gave it up as a bad job.
996. Do you know whether he is still there? Yes. He has been sent to act as Sub-Collector at Eden.
997. What is the salary there? £200 per annum, and 15s. a day allowances.
998. Has Mr. Woods passed any examination? No.
999. And Mr. Hill? He passed the junior examination with honors. I consider I am entitled to a gratuity. I was forced out of the Department to make way for men who had embezzled money from monetary institutions here. The position I ought to have had in the Land Tax Department is now filled by a liberated criminal or a man who embezzled money out of one of the monetary institutions here. There is a man there who embezzled some hundreds of pounds, and he is now drawing at least £200 a year from the Department, with overtime.
1000. Mr. Perry.] Have you any objections to give the name? I will ask my solicitor whether it is advisable. Another man there has served five years in gaol. Another has been a co-respondent in divorce suit, and another is a wife-beater. These men could get positions, but I with a wife and two children was turned into the street.
1001. Do you know this as a fact? I do. I will substantiate it any time if called upon.

B. B. Thomas.

TUESDAY, 12 OCTOBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. GRIFFITH,		MR. O'REILLY,
MR. PERRY,		MR. JESSEP.

JOHN CASH NEILD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Byron Belmore Thomas recalled and further examined:—

1002. Chairman.] Are you disposed to give the information with reference to persons employed by the Taxation Department to whom you referred in your evidence last week? I consulted my solicitor, and he advised that at the present stage I had better not mention names. I will, however, see my solicitor again, and ask him to communicate with the Committee. I desire to hand in the certificates I obtained from Mr. Bethune, the Warehouse-keeper. It is a testimonial he gave me when I was leaving the Department. I present certificates with reference to my character and ability from Mr. Bethune, Mr. Shoppee, Mr. L. T. C. Gwyn, Capt. Tyler, Mr. John Smith, and Mr. George Wall. There is another thing to which I wish to call attention with reference to the appointment which was made in my place in the Customs. If the book which the man Trouton kept before he was appointed to my position were produced, it would be found that he was some 10,000 gallons of rum short in the Clarence Bond. Some rum had been short-shipped and put back into the bond, but at the same time there had been no debit given to the Colonial Sugar Company for it. It really only showed 40,000 gallons of rum in bond when there were 60,000 gallons there.
1003. You mean to say that rum which was short-shipped was replaced in the bond, and was not properly entered? It was not entered in the books as short-shipped. It made the stock in the bond show 20,000 gallons less than was really in it.
1004. Then Trouton, who was appointed in your place, kept his book for the Clarence Bond so carelessly that his returns showed the quantity of rum in the bond to be 20,000 gallons less than the actual quantity? Yes.
1005. Mr. O'Reilly.] Did Trouton follow you or did you follow him? He took my place, and if the books were sent for it would be found that they were in a disgraceful condition. When the rum was found to be short-shipped, Trouton was taken from his position, and placed in the Land Tax Department. He wrote such a bad hand that they kicked him out, together with Mr. Reid's brother-in-law, and now they are both in good positions.
1006. Mr. Perry.] Did you enter the Service as a tide-waiter? Yes.
1007. How long did you serve as a tide-waiter? Nine months.
1008. From that position you went to the Warehouse-keeper's room? Yes.
1009. How long were you there? Three years and a few months.
1010. During that time did you perform the duties of a tide-waiter? No; I acted as clerk and book-keeper.
1011. Was there any complaint against you? No.
1012. Were you taken from your duties as a tide-waiter, and put into the Warehouse-keeper's room on account of any qualifications of your own? I had passed the examinations, and was entitled to a permanent position.
1013. What examinations? There are two provided for by the regulations which Sir George Dibbs laid down for the promotion of temporary officers.
1014. Was there any complaint as to the way you performed your duties? No.
1015. Was any reason given for your retirement? I never receive any notice except from the Warehouse-keeper, and, of course, I could not accept any notice from him. He never engaged me.
1016. I think you have stated that your health broke down when you were in the warehouseman's room? Yes; I was working from 6 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock at night for eight months. I caught a cold, and was laid up with inflammation of the lungs, and bronchitis, and congestion.
1017. Who performed your duties when you were away? Very few of them were performed. I had to come back to them the day I got out of bed, and on that day I worked until 11 p.m.
1018. When you got back had you to make up the arrears of work? The greater part of them.
1019. When the Public Service Board came into your office did they examine you as to your competency? Two questions were asked me by Mr. Wilson. He asked me if I was on the permanent staff, and I said, "No." First of all he looked at some despatch notes I was writing. He asked, "What is your salary?" I said, "10s. 6d. a day." He said, "Thank you; that will do." He then went away.
1020. Was that the whole of the examination? It was.
1021. Your office was filled by Mr. Trouton? Yes.

B. B. Thomas.

12 Oct., 1897.

1022.

- B. B. Thomas.
12 Oct., 1897.
1022. Is that the gentleman whom you say was so incompetent that he could not keep an ordinary stock-book in the warehouse? Yes.
1023. Has the work you were performing been increased or decreased? Decreased by at least 75 per cent.
1024. Since when? About 31st July the work began to decrease.
1025. Since they put the other man in your place? Yes. Of course, after the first batch of Land and Income Tax duties were got off the work began to be less. There was a second batch on the 30th June. They went off on a sliding scale. There are eight men in the room now, and I am prepared to state that with one man to be picked by myself, and a boy, I would do the whole of the work.
1026. I think you have stated that Mr. Trouton could not have been put there if there had not been influence? That is so. Captain Trouton was constantly about the place, and in the company of Mr. Powell, who was then Collector of Customs, and had previously been agent for the A.S.N. Co., whose manager Captain Trouton was.
1027. What other men were put there? A man of the name of Woods was brought in. He was one of the men who were taken out of the Land Tax Department for not being able to write a good hand. He did not suit Mr. Canty for handwriting. A batch of them were put out, and he and Trouton were amongst them. He was brought in at twice the salary he was formerly receiving. He was getting £75, and when he went upstairs he got £100, and subsequently £150.
1028. Where was Mr. Bromby? He went on the tide-list along with Mr. Anderson's son.
1029. What Anderson? The Member for Waterloo. He was getting 10s. 6d. a day on the tide-list, and they were suddenly sent to the Registrar-General's Office, where they are now.
1030. When were they on the tide-list? First of all, Anderson was a messenger in the Department, and Bromby was a probationer. They were appointed probationers in the Land and Income Tax Department at £100 a year. They were there three or four weeks, and then Mr. Canty cleared them out, because they could not write a decent hand.
1031. Chairman.] Who is Mr. Canty? He is a trigonometrical computer. He was retrenched from the Mines Department, and was entitled to a pension. He came there and was drawing 10s. 6d. a day besides the pension.
1032. Mr. Perry.] Did they refuse to grant you an allowance? Yes.
1033. I understand you to say that that refusal was based on the fact that you were still on the tide-list? Yes.
1034. Although you had not done any tide-waiting for the last three years or more? Yes; I never acted on ship duty. I was on clerical work the whole time.
1035. Mr. O'Reilly.] Can you give evidence as to corruption and influence having been brought to bear, which, according to your written statement, "has resulted in the Department being filled with incompetent persons, from one of the Commissioners down, also with liberated criminals and defaulters from monetary institutions, whilst good men, with wives and families dependent upon them, have been left to battle out their existence with no hope of getting employment, with no reason given for their discharge, no reference to say in what manner they have discharged their duties, and no compensation to give them a start in business, or to enable them to go to a country where the curse of a freetrade Government is unknown"? I think I will be prepared to do that if they will grant an inquiry into the grading of the Customs Department.
1036. Have you any statement as to the cases of corruption and influence? I have already given two instances of influence having been brought to bear. There must have been corruption when I passed the examination for temporary work in the Land Tax Department, and they would not give me any, and yet I was never carpeted during the whole of the time I was in the Service.
1037. You can bring evidence to show that liberated criminals and defaulters from monetary institutions have been employed? Yes. They were the men I consulted my solicitor about.
1038. But you are not prepared to give the names of those people? I said I would see my solicitor again, and would get him to communicate with the Committee about the matter.
1039. Still, you fully realise that you are absolutely privileged to give any truthful evidence, without malice, before the Committee? I understand that. I have undertaken, however, to do nothing without the consent of Mr. Arnott, my solicitor.
1040. Mr. Perry.] If your solicitor were here you would have no hesitation? None whatever.

Samuel Baumann sworn and examined:—

- S. Baumann.
12 Oct., 1897.
1041. Chairman.] Were you employed in the Public Service? Yes.
1042. In what Department? The General Post Office.
1043. What was your first appointment? As a probationer in the Telegraph Department, on the 16th June, 1879.
1044. How long did you hold that position? Actually for one year and two months. I was only being paid as a probationer, but I was performing the duties of clerks who were receiving higher salaries.
1045. You were a telegraph probationer at 2s. 6d. per week? Yes; for six months. Then I performed the duties of check clerk at the same salary, and other clerks were receiving £75 to £100 a year for the same work. Then I was appointed postal assistant at Young, and also a telegraph probationer at a salary of £110 10s. per annum—or £104 and 2s. 6d. per week.
1046. How long did you hold that position? Nearly two and a half years.
1047. To what position were you appointed subsequently? As probationer at the Head Office at £100 a year, and then to the staff at £100.
1048. You have been retired? Yes.
1049. What position did you hold, and what salary were you receiving, at the time of your retirement? £209 a year. I was then a clerk in the dead-letter office.
1050. Were you appointed to any of these positions by the Governor-in-Council and gazetted? Yes; when I was appointed to the staff.
1051. What date was that? The 15th January, 1883.
1052. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from its initiation until the time of my retirement.

1053. Have you filled occasional positions in addition to those you have indicated? Yes; I was in the account branch when I first came from the country, and I was subsequently appointed to the inland mail branch. S. Baumann.
12 Oct., 1897.
1054. What were the vacancies to which you were temporarily appointed? They were not temporary. I was removed from one portion of the building to another as my services were required.
1055. I believe you discharged duties in the inland mail branch upon the retirement of Mr. Hamilton Jacob, who was drawing £290 a year, and you received a salary of £172 a year? Yes.
1056. Then you were appointed to discharge work in the correspondence branch when Mr. Rigg was absent through ill-health? Yes. Messrs. G. F. Robinson (B.A.) and R. S. Cannon (formerly proprietor of the Lyceum School) were appointed to do the work in Rigg's absence. It got into arrears, and Mr. Dalgarno, the Secretary, came into the inland mail branch and asked me if I could do correspondence. I said I had never done any before, but would try. He asked me to go over there temporarily for two or three weeks. While I was there these two were removed from the branch, and I was kept on for two and a half years.
1057. In the document you have handed to me you say: "I have been longer in the Service than any clerk on the £200 grade, and even longer than many officials in receipt of higher salaries who were not doing work of more importance"? Exactly; this is a fact.
1058. Are you in the Service at the present time? No; I was retired on 31st July, 1896.
1059. What salary were you receiving at that time? £209 per annum, less 4 per cent. superannuation deduction.
1060. Was any money paid to you after you had retired? Yes; I was granted a gratuity.
1061. From that final payment was the 4 per cent. deducted? No; it was simply the amount agreed upon by the Public Service Board. They paid a month's salary for each year of service and a refund of the superannuation money. I accepted it, and there was no chance of appealing against it.
1062. Then what complaint have you to make against the action of the Board? I maintain that when I was retired I had fulfilled the terms of the 1884 Act by being over fifteen years in the Service; therefore I was entitled to a pension, for which they had deducted 4 per cent. from my salary.
1063. But would not that pension only be payable in the event of your being infirm? No; on retirement.
1064. Is it section 46 of the Act which you say has not been complied with in your case? Yes; and section 48.
1065. Has the office you were filling been abolished? They certainly dispensed with my services, and they have not filled the position, so far as I am aware.
1066. What was the exact designation of your position? My designation was "clerk," pure and simple.
1067. You had not any specific position, but you did work all over the Department? Yes; I did work as anyone else might do it in a warehouse. If his services are required in one department they would take him there.
1068. You say your position has not been filled up? Not that I am aware.
1069. But surely some one else is doing the duties? I suppose they are divided amongst those who are left in the branch.
1070. Are we to understand that the Department employs one clerk less? I believe they employ several less in that branch, because others were retired as well as myself.
1071. And were they treated in the same manner as you? Yes; but their cases are not similar to mine. They were only on the temporary staff, and never subscribed to the fund, whilst I did.
1072. Can you give us their names? I am not sure about the facts, and I would rather not mention the names.
1073. Have you made any communication to the Board representing that in your case the provisions of sections 46 and 48 of the Civil Service Act had not been complied with? No; because I understood that test cases were to be heard, and I would await the result. I did not think it would debar me from making my claim if I did not write to them, because if it is law, I could make the claim any time I like. I know they reduced the staff of the branch, so that you could say that my position was abolished.
1074. Mr. Perry.] You claim that you are entitled to a pension? Yes.
1075. And they said that you have been paid your retiring allowance, and would not consider your claim to a pension? I never applied for it.
1076. Then how do you expect to get it? I am applying for it now.
1077. Do you know of any case where they have treated men differently from you? Yes; in previous cases where they have retired men of over fifteen years in the Service, they have paid pensions. I can mention three or four in the Post Office.
1078. Are you referring to the Public Service Board? No; but that Act was in force when I was retired, and why should I not have the same advantage as they?
1079. Mr. Griffith.] When you signed the certificate for the money they gave you, did you sign an acknowledgment in respect of all claims? I expect I did, otherwise I would not have got it.
1080. Mr. Perry.] Did you accept that amount without any demur? As a matter of fact, I did not draw it myself. I assigned someone to draw it for me.
1081. You were quite satisfied at the time? I thought it was the correct thing. It was only subsequently that I found out I had made an error.

Mrs. Bessie Connolly sworn and examined:—

1082. Chairman.] You are the wife of Mr. Hugh Connolly, who was for many years in the Postal Department? Yes. Mrs. B.
Connolly.
12 Oct., 1897.
1083. Where is your husband now? In Western Australia.
1084. You wrote to me last August with reference to the Committee considering your husband's case? Yes.
1085. Have you since that date communicated with your husband? Yes.
1086. Have you received any documents from him? Only the one document, which I have sent in.
1087. The one you sent in is a notification from the Deputy Postmaster-General, dated the 22nd July, 1896, informing your husband that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, and upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, had approved of his retirement from the Public Service? Yes. 1088.

- Mrs. B. Connolly.
12 Oct., 1897.
1088. Such retirement to take place (from effect) from 31st July, 1896? Yes.
1089. Can you tell the Committee when your husband was appointed to the Public Service? In 1874.
1090. What was his position? Letter-carrier.
1091. Do you know what salary he had received? When he left the Post-Office, I think, he had £13 a month.
1092. Do you know whether he contributed to the Superannuation Fund? He did not.
1093. Upon his retirement did he receive any pension? He received a payment of £114 as a lump sum.
1094. Do you know how that was made up? No.
1095. What claim does your husband consider he has with reference to his discharge from the Public Service? He thought he was to get a month's pay for each year of service.
1096. Then he did not get a month's pay? No; he did not get even a fortnight's pay.
1097. You understand that your husband regarded his position as that of a permanent member of the Service, and as such entitled to a month's pay for each year of service? Yes.
1098. Instead of which he received a much smaller sum? A much smaller sum than he expected.
1099. You had in a notice addressed to Mr. Connolly, dated 22nd July, 1896, advising that he has been retired by His Excellency the Governor? Yes; it came to the Edgecliffe Post-office, where he was working. [Appendix D.]
1100. Is there anything else you wish to say? Nothing, except that I think he was as well able to do his work when he left the office as he was when he entered.
1101. What age was he? Fifty years.
1102. Was he suffering from any illness? No; his health was good, and he is in Western Australia now.
1103. What is he doing there? He is in the Public Works Department, in Perth.
1104. Had there been any charges against him? I never heard of any, unless it might have been the misdelivery of a letter.

George Lynn Little sworn and examined:—

- G. L. Little.
12 Oct., 1897.
1105. Chairman.] Were you employed in the Public Service? Yes.
1106. In what capacity? As clerk in the Post and Telegraph Department.
1107. Were you appointed on the temporary staff, or by the Governor-in-Council? By the Governor-in-Council, in March, 1873.
1108. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; up to the date of my retirement.
1109. How long did you hold the position of clerk in the Post and Telegraph Department? Nearly twenty-five years.
1110. Was that the only position you occupied? Yes.
1111. When were you retired? 31st July, 1896.
1112. Why? Through the grading of the Public Service Board.
1113. Was your office abolished, or was someone else appointed to do your duties? It is abolished as an office, but there are four other gentlemen who took up the duties.
1114. Do you mean to say it now takes four people to do the work you did? Yes; the duties have been cut up, and there are four different gentlemen who perform them.
1115. Had the office any designation? First clerk in the despatch branch of the mail department.
1116. Is there any one in the Service who holds the same position as regards title? No.
1117. What salary were you drawing at the time of your retirement? £340 per annum.
1118. Did you receive a notice retiring you? Yes; on the 23rd July, 1896.
1119. What was the nature of the notice? I was retired by the Governor-in-Council, upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, by notice dated 22nd July, 1896, and signed by Mr. Lambton.
1120. Did you receive any pension upon your retirement? No.
1121. Did you apply for one? Yes.
1122. What answer did you get? That a pension could not be legally granted to me.
1123. You applied for a superannuation allowance in accordance with section 46 of the old Act? Yes; which has been confirmed by the Act of 1895.
1124. What answer did you receive? That they could not legally grant me a pension, and that Parliament had provided another method of compensation.
1125. Did you receive any allowance upon your retirement? About six months afterwards I received from the Treasury, under protest—as far as I could protest—a notice that there was a gratuity for me. I said that I would take it under protest; but I would prefer to leave the superannuation money there. I was told that I could not draw one without the other.
1126. What did you draw? £592.
1127. How was that made up? £143 16s. 1d. contributed to the Superannuation Fund, and the balance was what they called a gratuity.
1128. How was the gratuity reckoned? One month's salary for each year of service.
1129. You hold that you are entitled to a pension under the 46th and 48th sections of the Act of 1884? Yes.
1130. You made application for that unsuccessfully? Yes.
1131. Did you make a further application for leave of absence? Yes; on the 11th June, the 7th July, and the 17th July.
1132. You applied for six months' leave of absence on full pay, or twelve months' on half-pay? Yes.
1133. And you made that application under regulation 20 of the Public Service Act? Yes.
1134. That is a regulation which grants certain leave of absence upon full or half pay, as the case may be, after twenty years' service? Yes.
1135. Your application was refused? Yes.
1136. You made this application for leave before the issue of the notice retiring you? Yes.
1137. And the day after the date of the notice retiring you, you received a reply to your application for leave, stating that the Public Service Board had just decided that they were unable to approve of leave of absence to retrenched officers? Yes.
1138. So that, in your opinion, the Board did not deal with your leave of absence until they had secured your retirement? Yes.

1139. And they refused the leave of absence you had applied for a fortnight previously? Yes. G. L. Little.
 1140. Your application for leave of absence was made prior to your having any knowledge that you were retrenched? Yes. On the 11th June and on the 7th July I made the following application for leave of absence under the regulation to which I have referred :— 12 Oct., 1897.

I beg to apply for six months' leave of absence, in accordance with Regulation 20 of the Public Service Act of 1895.

Instead of getting a reply to that, you received notice that you were retired? Yes.

1141. And the day after you received notice of retirement you received a reply to your application for leave? Yes; in fact, I think I received them both on the same day.

1142. It, therefore, would appear that your application for leave had not been dealt with until after you had been got rid of? That is certainly my opinion.

1143. You have written various letters, pressing that you are entitled to the leave or to pay in extra allowance in place of leave? Yes.

1144. And in every instance you have been met with refusal? Yes.

1145. You therefore have two complaints—one is that you consider yourself entitled to a pension, in consequence of the abolition of your office? Yes.

1146. You also consider yourself entitled to pay in lieu of the legal pay which was provided for in the regulations issued under the Act? Yes.

1147. That is your whole complaint? Yes; I may say that by that leave of absence I should have been brought under the 62nd section of the Act of 1895, and there would have been no question of pension whatever then.

1148. You produce a letter signed by Mr. Lambton, Deputy Postmaster-General, and dated the 18th February, stating that you were retired from the Service in connection with the grading of the Department by the Public Service Board? Yes.

1149. Mr. Perry.] Did you have any holidays during the time of your service? Only the usual three weeks. I think there is even some of that accruing to me.

1150. Did you allow your holidays to accumulate? Yes.

1151. You say that under regulation 20, you were entitled to six months' or twelve months' leave of absence? Undoubtedly.

1152. Would you not require to show some reason for having it? It has been a matter of custom. I have recommended it to my own hands—even to sorters who had not undergone twenty years of service.

1153. Then it was the custom of the Department? Most decidedly, and it has been carried out since. I can mention another clerk whose salary was cut down to one-fourth, and who immediately applied for six months' leave of absence, and he is now on pension.

1154. Your complaint is that you have been treated differently to others in this respect? Decidedly; I have simply been sharpened out of my pension.

1155. Had this usual leave of absence been granted to you, you could have demanded a pension? There can be no question about it. That is why I requested an alteration of the date of my retirement from July, 1896, to January, 1897.

1156. You consider, then, that the Board have sharpened you out of your pension by withholding the leave of absence? Yes.

1157. Mr. Jessop.] You say you wrote to the Public Service Board on the 7th July, asking for leave of absence, and that you received no answer to that communication until after you received notice of your retirement? I think I received them both on the same day.

1158. Had you, prior to writing to the Board on the 7th July, received any intimation from them that your particular case would come under their scrutiny? No.

1159. Then you have reason to believe that you were not treated as you ought to have been? Decidedly.

1160. During the occupancy of your position, were any charges made against you at any time? None that I am aware of.

Herbert Edward Ryan sworn and examined :—

1161. Chairman.] Were you employed in the Public Service? Yes; in the Customs Department, as a temporary clerk. H. E. Ryan.

1162. When were you first appointed? On the 21st March, 1892. I held that position until February, 1896. 12 Oct., 1897.

1163. Did you then receive a notification, discontinuing your services? No; I was sent to the Land and Income Tax Department by the then Collector of Customs.

1164. What work did you discharge there? Clerical work.

1165. How long were you there? Until 29th July, 1896.

1166. Did you then get a notice retiring you? Yes, at a quarter to 1 o'clock, and I was paid up to that date only. I was told at 1 o'clock that I was not required.

1167. Did you receive any retiring allowance, gratuity, or pension? No.

1168. Did you apply for any? Yes, several times.

1169. To whom did you address your communications? To the Public Service Board. I received one reply, after waiting about nine months, to the effect that I was not eligible for any gratuity. They afterwards told me verbally that I was a tide-waiter in the Customs Department.

1170. Did you ever do tide-waiter's work? No.

1171. You say you were employed as a clerk;—what were your hours? From 9 o'clock until half-past 4, but as a rule I was there until a quarter to 6. I did continuous clerical work from the time of entering the Service to leaving, and was remunerated at the rate of 10s. 6d. a day.

1172. Were you entered in the books as a tide-waiter? I know my pay-sheet was made out on the tide-waiters' list.

1173. But were you a tide-waiter? No.

1174. Did you at any time discharge tide-waiter's duties? No; I was a clerk. My work consisted of keeping the cash-books, the comparative statements, the making out and checking of returns, and the banking of the public revenue, for which I had to sign morning and evening.

1175. Did you take the funds to the bank? Yes.

- H. E. Ryan. 1176. You complain that you were for many years employed on the temporary staff, and you consider that under the Act you were entitled to a retiring allowance, which has been refused? Yes; I may mention that I wrote to the Acting Premier, who sent a reply for me to call upon him. I called. He asked me to put everything in connection with the case before him. I applied to the Board to furnish me with the papers, and they told me they were lost.
1177. Have you a letter to that effect? No; I have not it in writing.
1178. I suppose there are persons who can depose to the nature of the duties you discharged at the Custom House? Yes, the Collector of Customs; I have a testimonial from him.
1179. Mr. Perry.] During the time you were in the Custom House, were any complaints made as to the manner in which you performed your duties? No.
1180. Chairman.] You had not any trouble with the officers of the Taxation Department? I do not know about that. It appears that I was given away in some shape or form, although I am not aware of anything.
1181. Mr. Perry.] Would the loss of any papers placed in your charge be considered a reason for your retirement? No papers were ever placed in my charge.
1182. Was there anything against you in either Department? Certainly not in the Customs Department, and I do not know of anything in the Land Tax Department.
1183. Then you were refused a retiring allowance because your name was on the tide-list? Yes.
1184. Mr. Jessop.] Were you appointed as a temporary clerk? Yes.
1185. Were you ever appointed as a permanent officer? No.
1186. You believe you are entitled to some remuneration? Yes.
1187. Your dismissal was very abrupt? Yes.
1188. Did they not give you a reason? No. There were eight or ten who were treated in the same way, and who had £1 ls. deducted from their pay.
1189. Whilst you were in the Customs Department your duties were absolutely clerical? Yes, and they were very responsible duties too, including the banking of Customs revenue, which went to over £9,000,000 whilst I was there. I have carried as much £16,000 or £17,000 to the bank per day, half of it being in cash.
1190. Did they provide you with a cab to take it? Yes.
1191. Did they send anyone to protect you? Yes; one of the messengers.

Michael McNamee sworn and examined:—

- M. McNamee. 1192. Chairman.] What was your first public employment? I was a porter on the railway for ten and a half years.
1193. Did you resign? No; I got an appointment in the Post Office as letter-carrier. I was transferred.
1194. How long were you in the Post Office? Twenty-three years.
1195. Were you retired? Yes; on the 31st July, 1896.
1196. Had you any notice retiring you? Yes; from the Post Office.
1197. In whose name was it given? The Secretary's.
1198. Was it similar to the one produced? Yes; exactly the same.
1199. This is a notification in which a letter-carrier is informed that His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, has approved of his retirement from the Public Service in accordance with the provisions of the Public Service of 1895;—was the notice you received couched in the same words? Yes.
1200. So that you were retired or dismissed by His Excellency the Governor-in-Council? Yes.
1201. You are quite sure of that? Yes.
1202. Did you receive any pension? No.
1203. Did you receive a gratuity? They offered me £36.
1204. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.
1205. Have you had any money back from it? No.
1206. Then they offered you £40 for thirty-three and a quarter years or thirty-three and a half years of continuous service? Yes.
1207. Have you applied for pension? Yes; and they said I was not entitled to it.
1208. What was your age on retirement? Sixty-one years.
1209. Have you a letter showing that you were refused a pension? Yes.
1210. You have certain correspondence, which you will forward? Yes.
1211. Was there any allegation by the Public Service Board that your term of service had been broken? I asked the Secretary, and he said that that was his opinion.
1212. That you had been offered this small sum because the Board considered your service had been broken? Yes.
1213. In a letter you sent to me you state that, over some election excitement in 1889, when you were supporting the candidature of the late Hon. John Sutherland, you were suspended? Yes.
1214. I suppose you got off your head, and got something into your feet? Yes.
1215. And you were suspended? Yes.
1216. Who suspended you? The then Postmaster-General, Mr. D. O'Connor.
1217. How long were you suspended? Nearly three months. At the end of three months they reinstated me at a reduced salary.
1218. Did you get a letter stating that you were reinstated? No; I got a verbal message from the telegraph master at Redfern, stating that he had had a telegram to say that I was to go to the General Post Office.
1219. Whom did you see when you got there? Mr. Day. He put me on to work at once at a reduced salary. I was reduced from £140 to £120.
1220. You did not get any notification that you had a fresh appointment? No.
1221. Did Mr. Day tell you your suspension was removed? No.
1222. Did anyone tell you it was removed? I cannot say that.
1223. When a letter-carrier is suspended, and he is set to work again, does he not receive some intimation about his suspension? Not always.

1224. Did you commence at the middle of the month, or when? On the 9th of the month.
 1225. And you got pay for the broken month? Yes.
 1226. You did not get pay for the full month? No.
 1227. Mr. Day is the only person who could give definite information about this? Yes.
 1228. And he is no longer in the Service? No.
 1229. Who else could tell us anything about it? Mr. Dalgarno.
 1230. Then your case resolves itself into this: You consider, in the first place, you are entitled to a pension? Yes.
 1231. Supposing you are not entitled to a pension, you are at least entitled to a month's pay for each year of service? Yes.
 1232. Do you reckon that you are entitled to pay for the whole of the thirty-three years you were in the Service, including the Railway Service, or for the twenty-three years during which you were in the Postal Department? I contend that the whole of the service was continuous.
 1233. Did you remove from one Department to another at your own suggestion? Mr. Sutherland was Secretary for Works, and had charge of the railways, and he got me the appointment in the Post Office.
 1234. I suppose the change was to better your position? Yes.
 1235. Mr. Perry.] If there had been anything else intended but a suspension, I suppose you would have had a notice of dismissal? Yes; Mr. Lambton called upon me to resign, but I did not. I was neither dismissed, nor did I resign.
 1236. Mr. Jessep.] When did the suspension commence? In April, 1889.
 1237. Up to that date you had served twenty-five years in the Service continuously? Yes.
 1238. You consider the £40 paid to you quite inadequate? Yes.
 1239. Did you apply for a refund of your superannuation money? No; I applied for a pension.
 1240. How long were you contributing to the fund? I only joined it in 1895.
 1241. I understand you to say that prior to the suspension you were called upon to resign? Yes.
 1242. Did you send back any communication declining to do so? Yes.
 1243. Did you receive a further intimation stating that you were suspended? No.
 1244. As a matter of fact, you were not aware whether you were suspended for any definite time? No.
 1245. At the end of three months you received a verbal message from the postmaster at Redfern, stating that he had received a telegram requesting you to call at the Post Office? Yes.
 1246. And when you were called you were reinstated? Yes.
 1247. And you considered your suspension was removed? Yes.
 1248. Was there any charge laid against you after the suspension was removed? No.

M. McNamee.
 12 Oct., 1897.

WEDNESDAY, 13 OCTOBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. GRIFFITH,		MR. JESSEP,
MR. HOGUE,		MR. PERRY.
JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

William Palgrave Simpson sworn and examined:—

1249. Chairman.] You have expressed a desire to be examined by this Committee? Yes.
 1250. You were in the employ of the Government for a length of time, I think? For thirty years seven months.
 1251. In what Department? In the Post Office.
 1252. What was the nature of your duties there? I was in the Money Order Office for twenty-seven years; then I was transferred to the Oxford-street Post Office; and from there I was transferred to the George-street West Post Office.
 1253. In these latter positions, were you in charge of the office? Yes, in each case.
 1254. You held your position from the Governor-in-Council, I presume? Yes.
 1255. From the beginning? Yes.
 1256. Then you were a member of the permanent staff? Yes.
 1257. And a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.
 1258. Since the passing of the Civil Service Act of 1884? Yes.
 1259. You have been retired? Yes.
 1260. On what date? I resigned on the 19th September, 1896.
 1261. Was it a voluntary resignation? No.
 1262. Under what circumstances did you resign? I was reported for neglect of duty and for intemperance.
 1263. By whom were you called upon to resign? By the Public Service Board.
 1264. Did the notice come from the Governor-in-Council, or from the Public Service Board only? First I had a notice from the Post Office, and then I had a notice from the Public Service Board.
 1265. And they called upon you to resign? Yes.
 1266. Not the Governor-in-Council? No.
 1267. Was there any inquiry held into the complaint made against you prior to your being called upon to resign? I was asked for an explanation.
 1268. You furnished an explanation? Yes.
 1269. Was that deemed to be unsatisfactory? After making my explanation I had further evidence, and I asked them in November last if they would open up my case, and they declined to do so.
 1270. Your application was addressed to the Public Service Board? I wrote both to the Post Office and to the Public Service Board.
 1271. You asked them to reopen the case after you had resigned? Yes.
 1272. What was the nature of the fresh evidence you wished to submit? When the inspector came to the office he found my cash short, and I have found out since—at least, I have every reason to believe—that I was robbed, inasmuch as when I was relieved.
 1273. Would it not facilitate matters if you produced the correspondence;—have you brought it with you? No.

W. P.
 Simpson.
 13 Oct., 1897.

W. P.
Simpson.
13 Oct., 1897.

1274. Do you not think it would be well to attend on another occasion, and to be armed with the correspondence? Yes. I would have brought the correspondence on this occasion, but I only received the notice to attend at 11 o'clock this morning, and I had to catch the 12 o'clock boat from Drummoyne. I had no time to-day to do anything.

1275. What is the nature of the case you desire to bring before the Committee? I thought that after my long years' service I was entitled to a gratuity.

1276. Is there any section in the Act which you think would entitle you to a gratuity? I could not say.

1277. Mr. Hogue.] You do not think you have a legal claim on the Government? No.

1278. You think you have a moral claim on the Government? Yes; in consideration of the long period I was in the Public Service.

Joseph Warwick Elliott sworn and examined:—

J. W. Elliott.
13 Oct., 1897.

1279. Chairman.] You were in the employ of the Customs Department, I think? Yes.

1280. For how many years? From the 1st April, 1886.

1281. What position did you hold? At first I was a messenger.

1282. Were you temporarily employed, or were you appointed by the Governor-in-Council? I was appointed by the Minister as a messenger, and from that position I was promoted to the tide-list, according to the usual practice of the Department.

1283. How were you paid as messenger—weekly, monthly, or daily? I was paid £40 a year.

1284. When you were appointed to the tide-waiters' list, how were you paid? By results.

1285. Ten shillings and sixpence a day, was is not? Yes, when employed.

1286. Did that bring out a better return to you than the messenger's position? Yes, it averaged about £10 a month.

1287. How long did you hold that position? I was a messenger for three years and a tide-waiter for seven years.

1288. Then were you retired? I was retired on the 4th August, 1896.

1289. You were retired by the Public Service Board? Yes.

1290. From whom did you receive the notice? From Mr. Walford, our tide surveyor. I received no written notice. It was only a verbal message I received.

1291. Did you cease then to continue your attendance? Yes.

1292. Did you apply for a gratuity? Yes; to the Public Service Board.

1293. With what result? They said that they could not consider my case as a tide-waiter—that we were not entitled to a legal claim on the Government. I put in an application then claiming an allowance on account of my three years' service as a messenger from 1886 to 1889. It was referred to the Premier, and I attended a deputation with four or five other retired officers, and I received a document from the Hon. G. H. Reid, but it did not deal with my case. He ignored it entirely. He said the Public Service Board had all to do with the matter.

1294. Do you consider that you were a temporary officer entitled to a retiring allowance at the rate of a fortnight's pay for each year of service? Yes.

1295. You also consider yourself entitled, I suppose, to some gratuity in respect of your previous three years' service as a messenger? Yes.

1296. Did you claim that as a temporary or as a permanent officer? As a permanent officer, because it was a Ministerial appointment. The other was a Ministerial appointment from the messenger staff to the tide-list.

1297. It was supposed to be a promotion? Yes; they promote you to the rank of tide-waiter, and from there they used to recruit the landing-waiters and lockers. It was my misfortune to be so many years on the tide-list without being put on the permanent staff, because I was senior to many there enjoying a salary of £225 and £250 a year.

1298. Mr. Perry.] In dispensing with the services of tide-waiters, was any system adopted;—had any of those who were retained been a less number of years than you in the Service? Yes; some had been appointed only three weeks to the tide-list. Others were appointed a fortnight after we left to fill our places. There were ten of us there on the 4th. I had a ship which I was working at the time called the "Myfield." At a quarter to 5 o'clock that night, I was told that I was wanted at the Custom House next morning at a quarter to 9 o'clock, and when I attended there next morning at that hour, I was told that my services were dispensed with—that the Public Service Board had decided to dispense with ten of us; but immediately after that they appointed two from the messenger staff, and two of the other officers who had been sub-collectors up country left their gratuity at the Treasury, and got appointed to the tide-list. But I was senior to many in the Department at the present time.

1299. Have you any reason to believe that other retrenched officers of the same grade as yourself have received any gratuity or retiring allowance? Not that I know of.

1300. You have not been treated differently from anyone else in that respect? That I could not say. Since I left the Department I have been working outside; I have not bothered my head about it; I put it down that there was no redress. I applied two or three times to the Public Service Board, and not getting a satisfactory answer, I thought it was just as well to let the matter drop. I applied for a re-appointment in the Service, and they told me that they would give me the first suitable vacancy. I got the usual letter which is sent in reply to all applications.

1301. Had the men of less years' service than yourself who were retained any special qualification? None whatever. There were many of them that I instructed myself. I was senior to many of them. I was senior to fifteen at the least of those who were retained. I was about one of the oldest officers on that tide-list.

1302. No complaints at all about you? Not that I am aware of.

TUESDAY, 19 OCTOBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. TRAVERS JONES,

MR. O'REILLY.

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Phillip Brophy sworn and examined:—

1303. Chairman.] Were you in the employment of the Customs Department? Yes.
1304. In what capacity? I entered as a tide-waiter in 1867.
1305. Were you a tide-waiter during the whole period of your connection with the Department? No; 19 Oct., 1897
1306. How long did you hold that position? Until I was retired.
1307. When were you retired? On the 31st July, 1896.
1308. Then, for some fourteen years, you were acting locker at the Grafton Bond? Not altogether at the Grafton Bond. For the last few years I was at Dalton's Bond, in Pitt-street.
1309. How long were you there? Thirteen years.
1310. Then you were only at the Grafton Bond about twelve months? A little more. I was transferred first to Dibbs' Bond.
1311. How long were you there? About eight months. I then went to Dalton's, in Pitt-street, and I was there for thirteen years.
1312. How were you paid for your services? At the rate of £267 10s. a year.
1313. Was that a yearly payment, or was it reckoned on the daily-payment system? A yearly payment.
1314. You are quite sure you were not paid by the day? No, I was a gazetted officer.
1315. When were you gazetted? On the 1st June, 1883.
1316. You then became a permanent officer? Yes.
1317. From 1867 to 1881 you were remunerated, I suppose, by a daily payment? Yes; of 10s. 6d. a day—sometimes 15s.
1318. Was that when you did night duty? No; it was the pay for many years.
1319. What sort of notice did you receive terminating your services? I got a notice from the Under Secretary, Mr. Kirkpatrick. I got a notice afterwards from the same gentleman saying it was approved of by the Executive Council.
1320. Then you applied for a retiring allowance or pension? Yes.
1321. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from the first day of its existence.
1322. How much did you pay in? About £110.
1323. Did you get a retiring allowance? No; the Public Service Board told me that my pension would be on consideration of my age.
1324. Did you retire on account of age? No; I sent in a certificate showing I was over 60 years of age when I was retired. They then sent me notice to say my service was not continuous.
1325. When did you get your retiring notice? On the 30th July, 1896.
1326. Have you drawn any allowance? No.
1327. From the memorandum you have handed to me it seems that the Public Service Board offered you a retiring allowance based on your service from September, 1881—that is, from the time when you first undertook clerical duty? Yes; when I took charge of the Grafton Bond. I went to the Secretary and asked him what gratuity I was entitled to, and he told me £398—only from the time I commenced to do the duty of a permanent officer. All my other years—fourteen years two months and twenty-five days—were entirely ignored.
1328. During the time you were tide-waiter were you employed every day or only partially? Not every day, but from time to time. Sometimes I would be employed three months together—perhaps eight months. Sometimes I would be off for a fortnight or three weeks; then I would go on again. It depended on the shipping and the season of the year.
1329. Mr. Travers Jones.] And you were only paid at the time you worked, at per day? That is all.
1330. Chairman.] I suppose you refused to accept what was offered to you, because you considered you were entitled to a larger retiring allowance? Yes.
1331. And that is where the matter stands now? Yes. I have not accepted it.
1332. Mr. Travers Jones.] Whilst you were a tide-waiter were you continuously in the service of the Government, or were you doing other work as well? I never lost a day.
1333. You have stated that there were certain days when you were at work, and that then you knocked off until some other work arose;—were you paid continuously all the time you were acting as tide-waiter, or only when you were actually working? Only when I was actually working.
1334. When you were not working for the Government did you work for anyone else? No; I was not allowed by the regulations to do so.
1335. But you were kept in the Service during that time? Yes.
1336. Mr. O'Reilly.] You entered the Service in 1867, and were gazetted in 1883? Yes.
1337. Were you not a temporary hand from 1867 to 1883? Yes.
1338. And your contention is that temporary hands are entitled, under the Act, to a retiring allowance for the years they serve? Yes.
1339. You admit that the £398 is a fair remuneration from 1883 to the time when you were retired? Yes.
1340. You say the change was made in 1881? Yes.
1341. But you were still a temporary hand till 1883? Yes.
1342. Mr. Travers Jones.] What was the change in 1881? I was sent to take charge of the Grafton Bond when it was established by Mr. Watson.
1343. Were you acting as tide-waiter then? No; as locker. I acted as locker and landing-waiter before that for months together. I was for about nine months a clerk in the long room.
1344. You ceased to be a tide-waiter in 1881, and became a locker? Yes.
1345. And in 1883 you were gazetted and put into the bond as locker? Yes; I was in the bond from 1881, but I was not gazetted until 1883.
1346. Mr. O'Reilly.] What age were you when you were retired? 60 years and 14 days.
1347. You do not complain of their retiring you, but you complain that they have not given you full allowance for the number of years you were in the Service? Yes.

Borthwick Macdonald Wight sworn and examined:—

- B. M. Wight.
19 Oct., 1897.
1348. Chairman.] You were in the employ of the Customs Department? Yes.
1349. In a letter you sent me you stated you were appointed as acting locker in 1892? Yes.
1350. Was that your first appointment? Yes.
1351. You held that position about nine months, and were then transferred to the ad valorem branch of the Customs Department? Yes.
1352. You were retired from the Service on the 2nd July, 1896? Yes.
1353. During the time you were in the service of the Department, how were you ranked as an officer of it? We all filled in the same pay-sheet as tide-waiters.
1354. Did you ever act as tide-waiter? Not up to 1892; only from 1892 to the time I left for the ad valorem department.
1355. Were you in the Customs before 1892? No. From 1892 to January, 1896, I was in the ad valorem department as acting locker.
1356. Then, after the 2nd January, 1896, you still continued in the Customs? Yes, as a tide-waiter.
1357. From 1892 to 1896, when you were acting as locker? We were designated as officers of Customs in signing papers passing through our hands.
1358. How were you remunerated? At 10s. 6d. per day.
1359. Was that during the time you were acting as locker? Yes.
1360. When did you cease to act as tide-waiter? In March, 1896.
1361. Then you ceased your connection with the Customs Department altogether? Yes.
1362. Did you do that voluntarily? No; the ad valorem department was broken up by virtue of the Act. Several officers were retrenched, because there was no further work for them. I was recommended to take a tide-waiter's position until the Income Tax Department was opened. I was then, on the recommendation of Mr. Powell, sent to the Income Tax Department.
1363. You are not now in the employment of the Government? No; I remained in the Income Tax Department until the 17th December, 1896.
1364. Have you received any retiring allowance or gratuity for your services in the Customs? None whatever.
1365. Have you applied for any? Yes.
1366. What reply did you receive? That it could not be entertained. Further than that, I had an interview, in company with Mr. Lyne, the then Secretary of the Public Service Board, with Mr. James Powell. Mr. Powell sympathised with us in our position. He said he did not hold with the manner in which we were treated; but he had no alternative but to follow out the instructions he had received from the Attorney-General. He set up that there were three kinds of people employed in the Service—temporary, permanent, and casual; and, seeing that we were not permanent, he set out that we were casual officers. I tried to remonstrate with Mr. Powell. I took the Act, and I referred to the way in which Mr. Justice Stephens argued the Act when the case of Adams v. the Government was on. Mr. Justice Stephens said that, although he was in favour of the Government on that occasion, he read the Act as a layman, and that all those employed by the Government came within the four corners of the Act. I put it to Mr. Powell:—"Was I employed by the Government or by you, Mr. Powell, as Collector, of Customs." He said I was certainly employed by the Government, inasmuch as I received my pay from the Treasury. Such being the case, I said, "If Mr. Justice Stephen is correct that all those 'employed' under the Act come within the Act, and the said Act has only made provision for temporary and permanent officers, I fail to understand, with all due respect to the Attorney-General, how you can import the word 'casual' into the Act."
1367. Your whole grievance is this: That you do not consider that the Public Service Act has been justly applied in your case, and you consider that you were within the temporary employ of the Government, and as such entitled to the retiring allowance applicable to persons in the employ of the Government? Yes; I say I was a temporary officer, inasmuch as I received payment, although by day, without break. I was paid for all public holidays. I was away a fortnight from sickness, during the whole of which time I was paid.
1368. Mr. Travers Jones.] Whether you were working or not? Yes.
1369. Chairman.] As a matter of fact, for three years and eight months you were continuously employed and continuously paid? Yes.
1370. Mr. O'Reilly.] What age are you? Fifty.
1371. Enjoying good health? Yes; so much so that I have gone back to my old business as a commercial traveller.
1372. Mr. Travers Jones.] You were dismissed from the Customs Department? Yes.
1373. You got no notice of retirement? None whatever.

Charles John Horsley sworn and examined:—

- C. J. Horsley.
19 Oct., 1897.
1374. Chairman.] Were you in the Government Service? Yes.
1375. When were you first appointed? On the 1st September, 1882.
1376. In what Department? In the Lands Department—as a Crown Lands Agent.
1377. To what part of the Colony were you sent? To Brewarrina.
1378. Were you remunerated by salary? By annual salary.
1379. Was your appointment made by the Governor-in-Council and gazetted? Yes.
1380. How long did you occupy that position? I remained at Brewarrina for two years, and was then transferred to Mudgee, where, later, the office was amalgamated with that of the Clerk of Petty Sessions.
1381. Still in the same capacity? Yes, up to a certain point.
1382. When did you cease to become a Crown Lands Agent? When I retired from the Service in 1891, owing to a matter of irregularity.
1383. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from the date of its commencing to my leaving.
1384. How did you come to leave? There were irregularities. The duties were heavy, and I was suspended, and I sent in my resignation and came on to Sydney.
1385. Your resignation was accepted? Yes. 1886.

C. J.
Horsley.

19 Oct., 1897.

1386. What was the nature of the trouble for which you were suspended? For retaining moneys which should have been sent on to the Treasury.
1387. I suppose that matter was cleared up by your resignation? Yes. I fought the case out, and there was not a penny-piece owing to the Government.
1388. Then you were unjustly suspended? No. There were irregularities, but there was no loss of money.
1389. There was no financial irregularity? None at all.
1390. But still you resigned? Yes; and I thought I was compelled to resign my position as Clerk of Petty Sessions, as I was informed that being a Lands officer that office was only given to me on sufferance.
1391. Have you been in the Service since 1891? I have.
1392. After your resignation had been accepted you joined the Service again? On the 30th November, 1891—nine months later—I entered the Attorney-General's Department temporarily to take up the duties of a clerk who was ill. I was in the Ministerial branch.
1393. How long did you stay there? I remained there until the end of February or March following—1892. I went from there to the Crown Solicitor's in 1892. I think it was on the 1st March I went there.
1394. How long did you stay there? I was put on certain temporary duty there until the 1st September, 1892. I was then appointed by the Governor and Executive Council as Clerk of the Conciliation and Arbitration Board.
1395. How long did you hold that? Until Parliament refused to grant the supply for the year 1895, and the office was abolished.
1396. What month? December, 1894.
1397. Have you been in the Service since? Yes; I went back to the Attorney-General's Ministerial department.
1398. Did you go straight back? Yes, on the 1st January, 1895.
1399. How long did you stay there? I worked there until the following November, when the Attorney-General appointed me assistant clerk on his staff by Executive appointment, the appointment to date from the 1st July, 1895.
1400. When did you cease to hold this permanent position? 31st May, 1896.
1401. How were you retired then? The Public Service Board looked through the office, and some time in May they graded the officers. I was not among the officers graded.*
1402. That means that you dropped out? Yes. On the 27th of the month I received a letter from the Secretary to the Attorney-General informing me that the Board considered it in the interests of the Public Service to retire me.
1403. Was any reason given? No; the letter I received, dated the 27th May, was from Mr. Pollock, Secretary to the Attorney-General, and it stated that the Public Service Board had deemed it necessary to recommend my retirement. The letter added:—
- And the Attorney-General fully recognises your past services, and regrets that the Public Service Board find it necessary in the public interests to dispense with your services.
1404. Did you get any other letter after that? No. I left the Attorney-General's Department. I had an interview with the Attorney-General, Mr. Want, and I was led to understand that I was to obtain a similar position in the Service to that I held, with no loss of salary; but that has not yet been brought about.
1405. Have you had an appointment? I have been asked to take temporary service.
1406. In what Department? I went on the 9th June to the Land Taxation Department.
1407. Have you applied for any gratuity? Yes. On the 3rd November, 1896, I wrote to the Public Service Board asking them to recommend me for a gratuity in terms of section 60 of the Act 59 Victoria No. 25. The answer I received was that they could not recommend it, because I was not finally retired. I may state that I have not that letter with me. It is with Mr. Consett Stephen, of the firm of Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, solicitors, and I will endeavour to obtain it from them.
1408. Have you made any other application since then? Yes; I had an offer to go to West Australia, and on the 11th of last month I wrote to the Board asking them to reconsider my case. On the 16th September I received a letter from the Secretary to the Board stating that:
- The matter has been fully considered, and they (the Board) do not see their way to reopen it.
1409. I understand that they would not give you a retiring allowance because you were not out of the Service, and now they will not do anything for you because they will not reopen your case? Yes.
1410. At present you are in the employment of the Taxation Department? Yes; as a temporary hand. The Chief Commissioner told me some little time ago that they were rearranging the staff and that I was not amongst the first fifty recommended, and I may not be amongst the others.
1411. The copies of the letters you produce dated 27th May, 1896; 3rd November, 1896; 11th September, 1897; 16th September, 1897; 18th September, 1897; and 24th September, 1897, are to all intents and purposes true copies of the letters they represent? Yes.
1412. Will you let us have the other letter? Yes, if Mr. Stephen can furnish it; but he has told me he cannot find it.
1413. You produce copies of testimonials from Mr. Want, the Attorney-General, Mr. Edmund Barton, late Attorney-General, Mr. Clegg, Clerk of Awards, Council of Conciliation and Arbitration, and from Mr. W. W. Stephen, late Secretary to the Attorney-General, testifying to your good conduct and excellent public service? Yes; and also to my ability.

* NOTE (on revision):—Two gentlemen, taken from the Postal Department, were appointed by the Public Service Board to take my place, so that my retrenchment was not on the score of economy. Their aggregate salaries were larger than mine, and they lacked experience. The clerk above me also received an increase in his salary of £50.

THURSDAY, 21 OCTOBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE, | MR. O'REILLY,
MR. WADDELL.

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Herbert Edward Ryan recalled and further examined:—

E. H. Ryan. 1414. Chairman.] I understand you wish to correct or revise some portion of your evidence? Yes.
1 Oct., 1897. 1415. What is the nature of the correction you wish to make? You asked me a question:—

Did you have any trouble with the officers in the Taxation Department?

My answer was:—

I do not know about that. It appears I was given away in some shape or form.

That is rather ambiguous. When Mr. Barling came to the Taxation Department he looked at the work of all other officers, and passed me by. I made the remark at the time that it seemed very peculiar. He took very great care in inspecting the work of the others—numbering about 100. Upon that ground, I say I was given away by Mr. Canty, who was in the room, who was very antagonistic to me from the first day I went into the Department.

1416. What is it you wish to correct? The answer seemed rather ambiguous, and not to convey very much—merely that I was given away.

1417. In what way were you given away? It seems peculiar that Mr. Barling should not have inspected my work, and that he should have inspected the work of the other officers. He worked with Mr. Canty all the time, and passed me by. I remarked at the time, in bush phraseology, "My cake is dough."

1418. Mr. O'Reilly.] You remember the visit of the Public Service Board? Yes.

1419. What was the length of the visit? About an hour.

1420. Less than a minute for each of the 100 men? Yes; but there was more than one Commissioner there.

1421. You seem to attach some importance to the fact that Mr. Barling overlooked your work? He passed me by and went to the next man.

1422. Do you regard that as any proof of animus on the part of Mr. Barling? Not on the part of Mr. Barling, but on the part of Mr. Canty, who had charge of the room.

1423. Do you think that Mr. Canty prompted Mr. Barling to ignore you? I am confident of it; otherwise it was Mr. Barling's duty to inspect my work.

1424. Were you discharged as a bad worker at the instigation of Mr. Canty? Apparently so, because a fortnight afterwards I got my notice, signed by Mr. Lockyer, who was then one of the Deputy Commissioners, that my services were dispensed with. Mr. Jessep asked me the other day a question with reference to the banking of the public revenue. I might say that on a Saturday the Cashier of Customs used to call me to count the money as usual. I had to sign for it, and he always accompanied me to the bank with the money.

Charles Isaac Peachey sworn and examined:—

C. I. Peachey. 1425. Chairman.] You were in the employ of the Government? Yes; and I am there still.

1426. As a permanent or temporary hand? Temporary hand.

21 Oct., 1897. 1427. When were you first appointed? 12th February, 1883.

1428. I understand you are going to give evidence in relation to your claim for a pension or retiring allowance? As representing some who are not employed there, and some who are—as a representative of the general body who were dispensed with on 12th January last.

1429. Do I understand that either yourself or any of your friends, or those whom you represent, consider yourselves entitled to gratuities or retiring allowances, in view of the fact that you are still employed? No; in view of the fact that we were dispensed with on 12th January last.

1430. When were you taken on again? Some of us in April of this year. Some of us have been taken on since, and some not at all.

1431. Previous to the dismissals or retirements to which you refer, were you employed from day to day, or week to week, or occasionally? Our wages were at per hour.

1432. Were you engaged without break, or did you work when sent for? For several years without break.

1433. What years were they? From 1883 to 1886.

1434. From 1886 to 1889 you worked occasionally? No; in the latter part of it only we worked occasionally.

1435. Do I understand that you consider yourself entitled to a retiring allowance or a gratuity? As far as I am concerned, I consider at the time I was dispensed with that I was entitled to something.

1436. Do you consider so to-day? Being at work I could not receive it at present; but in the event of being dispensed with again I should consider myself entitled to receive it.

1437. Mr. Hogue.] In view of the situation in which you find yourself, do you desire to give evidence? Seeing that I cannot give evidence for absent individuals, I decline to say anything.

Charles Sydney Ormiston sworn and examined:—

C. S. Ormiston. 1438. Chairman.] You were in the Government Service, on the staff of the Government Printing Office? Yes.

21 Oct., 1897. 1439. When were you first appointed? 1st October, 1856.

1440. Were you appointed by the Governor-in-Council as a permanent officer? I was appointed as an apprentice.

1441. Tell us whether apprentices are appointed by the Governor-in-Council? I should think they were appointed generally by the Colonial Treasurer.

1442. Were you at any time a member of the permanent Service—appointed by the Governor-in-Council? Yes; in 1873.

1443.

C. S.
Ormiston.

21 Oct., 1897.

1443. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from the time of its commencement until my retirement. I was retired on the 1st July, 1896.
1444. Did you receive a notice retiring you? Yes.
1445. Was any reason given? None whatever.
1446. Was your position abolished? No.
1447. There is someone discharging the duties you discharged at the present time? Yes; by the assistant publisher.
1448. What was your position designated? Receiver and sale clerk.
1449. Is there a receiver and sale clerk now? Mr. Kirkby is in my place now. I do not know whether he has ever got the appointment through the Colonial Treasurer.
1450. Does his position bear the same title that you held? Yes; he has morally taken my place, and does the work of publisher and sale clerk.
1451. Is he a receiver and pay clerk. I think he is. The Gazette will only prove that.
1452. You do not know positively? I could not say positively. I do not think there has been anything definitely done.
1453. You applied for a pension? Yes.
1454. Did you receive one? No. I wrote asking them to give me a pension instead of the gratuity, and they declined to do so.
1455. On the 6th August, 1896, you wrote asking to be reinstated? Yes; until the Public Service Act which suspended the Civil Service Act for a year as regards pensions would go out of existence, and then I would come under the Act of 1884.
1456. On the 5th September, 1896, you received a letter refusing your application for temporary employment, and stating that in the event of suitable vacancies occurring your claims for re-employment would be considered? Yes.
1457. On the 12th August you received a letter stating that your application for reinstatement as sales clerk in the Government Printing Office, or for a pension under the provisions under the Civil Service Act of 1884, cannot be acceded to? Yes.
1458. Then, you were refused employment and a pension? Yes.
1459. Although you had contributed to one? Yes; £12 a year for many years.
1460. Have you been offered any gratuity? Yes; I have received it.
1461. What was the amount? £719 2s. 8d.; that includes the refund of money I paid into the Pension Fund.
1462. Did you take it? Yes; unconditionally.
1463. What sort of a receipt did you give? No receipt, except on the voucher. That is not an acknowledgment. I merely gave a receipt for the money.
1464. You did not give a receipt in full of all demands? No.
1465. Having received £719 2s. 8d., do you think you are entitled to a pension? Yes.
1466. How is it you came to accept a gratuity when you had apparently a legal right to a pension? Simply because I was forced to take it. I have been forty years in the Service, and they only gave me a fortnight's pay for each of the first twenty years, when they ought to have given me a month's pay.
1467. How was your gratuity calculated? On the number of years I was in the office.
1468. They gave you a fortnight's pay for each year of service prior to your being gazetted, and for the period since your gazettal they gave you a month's pay? Yes.
1469. You consider yourself entitled to a pension? Yes.
1470. Mr. Hoque.] And a gratuity as well? No; the gratuity stands back. It can either be refunded or deducted from the amount I will receive as a pension. It could be managed in that way. Others have got their pensions.
1471. When were you appointed a permanent hand? In 1873; not a permanent hand; I was appointed as sale clerk.
1472. Were you gazetted? Yes.
1473. The Civil Service Act, under which you contributed, came into force in 1885? Yes.
1474. Since then, to the 1st July, 1896, you contributed to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.
1475. Do you consider yourself entitled to a pension under the Act? Yes.
1476. Or to a gratuity amounting to a month's pay for each year of service? I do not say anything about the gratuity; I was entitled to a pension.
1477. It is a pension you want? Yes. There are others who are under age who have got it. I am only 53 years of age. Mr. Fairweather has got it, and he was a boy under me. Mr. Bloomfield got it, and Mr. Martin and others got it. Why should I be made an exception of?
1478. Your complaint is that instead of getting a pension you only got a gratuity? Yes. I can refund the money for that matter; and I would rather do it.
1479. Mr. O'Reilly.] You were 13 years of age when you went into the Service? Yes; Mr. Richards saw I could write a good hand, and he put me to do clerical work, and because I have been put there Mr. Griffiths and others have gone right over me. I am a journeyman compositor, and have gone right through the trade. I asked Mr. Barling why he sent me out, and not others. He said, "We cannot send everyone out at once." He said there was no fault to find with me. I may state that I have never taken my annual and final six months' leave. If I had done so it would have carried me over the Public Service Act, and entitled me to a pension.

William Adams sworn and examined:—

1480. Chairman.] You were in the employ of the Customs Department? Yes.
1481. As tide-waiter? Yes.
1482. When were you appointed? 12th August, 1881.
1483. How long did you occupy that position? I did duty as tide-waiter for five years, and for ten years as acting locker in charge of bonded warehouses.
1484. When you were tide-waiter I suppose you attended every morning, signed the book, and obtained duty when there was work to be done? I may say that when I was on duty the book was not signed.

W. Adams.
21 Oct., 1897.

- W. Adams. 1485. Was your employment as a tide-waiter frequent or occasional? Frequent. The pay was 10s. 6d. a day, and I made an average of £12 a month during five years, which is almost the £3 a week.
- 21 Oct., 1897. 1486. I suppose some money was made by overtime? Yes.
1487. What bonds were you in charge of during your connection with the Customs? The City Bond, Ritchie's Bond (which I opened), Saywell's Bond, Parbury's Bond, Metcalfe's Bond, Rowan's Bond, Anthony Hordern's Bond, and several others.
1488. When you were acting locker I suppose your duties were continuous from Monday morning to Saturday at midday? Yes.
1489. How were you paid? Monthly.
1490. What was your rate of pay? Thirteen guineas.
1491. Was that calculated at a daily rate? Yes.
1492. For ten years you were to all intents and purposes a temporary servant of the Government? Yes. I happened to be sick part of the time, and was paid for it.
1493. How long were you away? Ten days out of fifteen years.
1494. Had you any holidays? No; although I was told I was entitled to them.
1495. When were you discharged? 1st August, 1897.
1496. What bond were you in charge of at that time? Lassetter's.
1497. Did you apply for any gratuity? Yes.
1498. Was any granted? No.
1499. Was any reason given? I received a reply to the effect that, considering the nature of service rendered by me, the Board were of opinion that I was not entitled to a gratuity.
1500. Are you in the employment of the Department now? No. I may state that I was never at any time dismissed and reinstated, and I was never suspended. I was told by the head of the branch when I received my last cheque that that would be the last he would have to pay me. That was the only intimation I received of my dismissal. I then saw the Collector of Customs and he said I was still a tide-waiter—that the Public Service Board had not yet dealt with tide-waiters, and that I was to report myself on the tide circular and go on the tide-list. I did so next day. I found a new tide-list had been made out, and I was left off.
1501. Mr. Hogue.] Did you ever receive anything in the shape of a gratuity or retiring allowance? No.

Michael Cooper sworn and examined:—

- M. Cooper. 1502. Chairman.] You were in the Registrar-General's Department? Yes, for eighteen years.
- 21 Oct., 1897. 1503. When were you first appointed? October, 1878.
1504. Were you appointed by the Governor-in-Council and gazetted? Yes.
1505. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from the commencement of the Act of 1884.
1506. When were you retired? In January of this year.
1507. How did you retire? I was asked to resign my position through an offence.
1508. Did you do so? Yes.
1509. Do you care to state the nature of the offence? It was over-indulgence in liquor.
1510. Was this the first complaint made against you? Yes; I had never been reported for anything at all before for eighteen years.
1511. Were you away from your office long? I must correct myself there. I was checked by Mr. Walker, the Principal Under Secretary, about a month prior to being suspended. He sent a memorandum to say my conduct was not altogether what it should have been, and hoped I would behave better in future. Then the suspension took place about a month or six weeks after. I was away about a day.
1512. A whole day? No; from about 11 o'clock to 3 o'clock.
1513. Were you called upon by the Board to explain your conduct? I was called upon by the Registrar-General to explain, and he would not accept my explanation. He made me admit it in writing, and he forwarded it on to the Board. He would not accept the explanation I was going to give him. He said he knew the reason, so I was made to acknowledge it.
1514. Would the explanation you desire to offer have cleared you from the charge of over-indulgence? I do not think it would.
1515. Would it have reduced the enormity of the offence? Yes.
1516. You say that, under the order of the Registrar-General, you admitted it, and you were summarily dismissed? I was suspended for six weeks, when I was called upon to resign. I got ten days' pay, and they turned me out without another penny. I applied for my superannuation money twice, and they said I was not entitled to it.
1517. Did you write out your resignation? Yes.
1518. Who made you write it? The Minister of Justice. I received a letter from him to say my case had been considered by the Governor and the Executive Council, and they had come to the conclusion that I should send in my resignation.
1519. Do you consider that, having tendered your resignation, you are entitled to any refund? I think they dealt too severely with me. I understand the Board has the discretionary power to give a man something.
1520. You have applied for a refund, and it has been refused? Yes.
1521. Refused, I suppose, on the ground that, having resigned, you had no further claim? On account of my being asked to resign. They considered my case was an offence. Of course some people think that word only applies to something criminal.

James Jenkins sworn and examined:—

- J. Jenkins 1522. Chairman.] You were in the employment of the Government? Yes.
- 21 Oct., 1897 1523. As a warder in the gaol at Mudgee? Yes, at first. I was appointed to the position on 15th January, 1874.
1524. Were you appointed by the Governor-in-Council? By the late Comptroller of Prisons.
1525. How long did you hold that appointment? Until November, 1887, when I was appointed senior warder. 1526.

1526. By whom was your appointment to the gaol at Mudgee confirmed? By Mr. McLean.
1527. In the first instance, then, you were appointed in a sort of probationary way? Yes; to see how I got along.
1528. When did you commence your permanent service? April, 1874.
1529. I see from the memo. you have handed in that you were appointed senior warder to the Mudgee Gaol in November, 1887? Yes.
1530. And continued until January, 1893? Yes.
1531. Upon which date you were appointed Deputy Governor of the Berrima Gaol? Yes.
1532. Which position you held for three years? Yes.
1533. Then you were appointed on 1st January, 1896, as gaoler at Forbes? Yes.
1534. You were retired by the Public Service Board on 1st January, 1897? Yes.
1535. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from August, 1893.
1536. Was any reason given why you were retired? No.
1537. Did you receive a notification in writing? Yes; in August, 1896, saying that I was to retire at the end of the year.
1538. Have any charges been made against you? No.
1539. Was any reason assigned for your retirement? No.
1540. Did the Public Service Board visit the gaol of which you had charge during your term? No.
1541. You say in this memo. that there has been no default against you during twenty-three years of service, and that you are now as capable as ever of performing duty? More so, because of my experience.
1542. What is your age? Fifty-five years.
1543. Did you apply for a pension? No; they offered me a gratuity of £186.
1544. Did you accept that? I did not. I did not refuse it, but I said, "I claim a pension."
1545. Does the matter stand in that way still? Yes.
1546. Was any reason given by the Board as to why they considered you were not entitled to a pension? They said they considered nineteen years of my service was temporary. I may state that the 31st section of the old Act states that no one shall be employed for more than two years as temporary.
1547. I see that on the 26th June, 1889, the Comptroller-General of Prisons made a minute to the effect that you were in permanent employ? Yes.
1548. Notwithstanding which, the Board ranked you as a temporary employee? Yes. I put in a letter from Mr. Critchett Walker, as follows:—

Sir,

Chief Secretary's Office, Sydney, 14 September, 1897.

In reply to your letter of the 3rd ultimo, having reference to your retirement from the Public Service, I am directed by the Chief Secretary to inform you that the Public Service Board, to whom your case has been referred, report that you had a service of twenty-one years; but as you had only contributed to the Superannuation Account since 1st January, 1893, the greater part of your service, for the purpose of retiring allowance was, in accordance with the Board's rule, counted as temporary, and you were granted compensation on that basis, viz., a gratuity of a fortnight's pay for each year of nineteen years of temporary service, and a month's pay for each year of two years' permanent service. The Board also state that they have expressed their willingness to consider your claims for re-employment when a suitable opportunity offers, but none has occurred.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

CRITCHETT WALKER,

Principal Under Secretary.

- That letter says, "according to the Board's rule"; but the Board's rule cannot override the Act.
1549. Whilst in the employ of the Government, I believe you were badly wounded? I was shot by the then gaoler at Mudgee, John Dick. He was tried for attempted murder.
1550. I believe your assailant was sentenced to death? Yes.
1551. Were you laid up for any length of time? Yes; for three months.
1552. Do you suffer any inconvenience from the wound? Yes; in the cold weather. There is a big hole in my lower jaw.
1553. Mr. O'Reilly.] In 1893 you were Deputy Governor of Berrima Gaol? Yes.
1554. And in January, 1896, you were appointed head gaoler at Forbes;—was that a promotion? It was, in point of rank, but not in point of salary.
1555. Was there any decrease of salary? No.
1556. Although the gaol was of less importance, still the position of gaoler was higher than that of deputy gaoler? Yes; it ranks higher.

TUESDAY, 26 OCTOBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE,

MR. WADDELL,

MR. JESSEP,

MR. PERRY.

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Peter Herbert sworn and examined:—

1557. Chairman.] What position have you held in the Public Service? As Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol.

P. Herbert.

26 Oct., 1897.

1558. Upon what date did you first join the Service? 1st March, 1865.
1559. Was your first appointment upon the permanent or temporary staff? I assume it was permanent, because I have never been a day out of the Service from first appointment until retired.
1560. What was the nature of your first appointment? Warder in the Parramatta Gaol.
1561. Was that appointment made by the Comptroller or the Governor-in-Council? By the Inspector of Prisons.
1562. I suppose you have held various positions in the Service? Yes; from that I was made trades foreman in Berrima Gaol; then trades overseer; then gaoler of the old gaol, Goulburn; then gaoler of the new gaol, Goulburn, in the building of which I had a good deal to do, along with the Government Architect;

P. Herbert. Architect; then, on 1st June, 1890, Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol. On the day after my appointment as Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol, the Sydney Morning Herald published the following:—
26 Oct., 1897.

Mr. Peter Herbert was appointed by the Executive yesterday Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol, in succession to the late Mr. John Lovett. Mr. Herbert entered the Public Service on 1st March, 1865, and for many years was engaged in the Trades Branch. In February of 1882 he was appointed Governor of Goulburn Gaol, and he has remained in that position to the present time. The duties attaching to his office have been efficiently discharged, and Mr. Herbert was held in high esteem by Mr. Harold MacLean, the late Comptroller-General of Prisons. In making the selection the Minister for Justice (Mr. Gould) was guided by the service and length of time which the different applicants had been in the Department; and it appeared to him, after carefully considering the matter, that Mr. Herbert was unquestionably the man best fitted for the position. The appointment carries with it a salary of £420 per annum.

1563. Were any of these appointments gazetted? The first gazetted appointment would be about 28th February, 1871. That was as trades overseer, Berrima Gaol.

1564. Did you contribute to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; from its initiation.

1565. When were you retired? 8th August, 1897.

1566. Did you receive a written intimation of your retirement? Not at first. I first received a verbal intimation from the Comptroller-General of Prisons, to the effect that the Board intended to retire me.

1567. Was any reason given for your retirement? The reason assigned was that the Board thought that Darlinghurst Gaol should be in charge of a younger man.

1568. What was your age at the time? Fifty-eight. He further said that the retirement would be carried out almost forthwith, in consequence of representations which had been made to the Board by the Under Secretary for Justice, and that I had a right of appeal against the decision, but if I did so I would probably forfeit my pension.

1569. You were informed by the Comptroller of Prisons that if you appealed against your retirement you would probably forfeit your pension? If I appealed against my retirement "further charges" would be brought; but he had made no charge beyond what I have already mentioned. He said "other charges," or "further charges" would be brought, and that probably I would forfeit my pension.

1570. Was that Mr. Neitenstein's intimation to you? Yes; he came to the gaol to convey that to me. He also told me that I was not to mention the matter to anyone, but to keep it quiet, and that he would stand my friend and see that I was well dealt with.

1571. Have any charges been preferred against you? None whatever.

1572. Did you regard that as a threat to induce you to refrain from appealing? At the time I did not, but I am now firmly of opinion that it was done for the purpose of deterring me from appealing. Subsequent events have confirmed that opinion.

1573. Did you appeal? I did not. I dare not, under the conditions, because I was nearing 60 years of age, when I would be legally entitled to a pension; and in view of the threat made, and having a family to support, I dare not move.

1574. I suppose that when you were actually retired you received a notification in writing? I received a verbal intimation from the Deputy Comptroller of Prisons that my retirement would take place positively on the 30th April, and he would take my place in the gaol on the 1st May.

1575. What actually happened on your retirement? I did not receive any further notice until after the execution of Butler. I was kept back until he was dealt with. Directly after he was executed I received a letter.

1576. You received a letter from the Comptroller-General on the 31st July, stating that the Minister had approved of the necessary steps being taken to cause your retirement to take effect from the 8th proximo? Yes.

1577. "And in order to prepare for the reception of your successor the Minister has approved of the suggestion made by the Comptroller-General, that leave be granted you to vacate your position on the 4th instant"? Yes.

1578. On the 7th August you received a letter from the Under Secretary, stating that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, and upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, had approved of your retirement? Yes.

1579. On the 26th August you received a letter from the Comptroller-General, asking you to state how you desired the liability to the Civil Service Superannuation Fund to be discharged? Yes.

1580. I suppose you answered that letter? Yes. I wrote asking to be supplied with information as to my debt to the Superannuation Fund.

1581. Did you receive a reply to that? Yes. I received a reply on the 28th August, stating:—"The amount due by you to the Superannuation Fund is £187 17s. 9d." That letter was from the Comptroller, and I want you to take particular notice of the amount. The next document I received was a paper granting the pension.

1582. On the 9th September you received an intimation from the Public Service Board that they had approved of the payment to you of a pension amounting to £243 4s. per annum, to take effect from the 9th August of this year? Yes.

1583. Have you accepted that pension? No; I have not touched it. It is still lying in the Treasury.

1584. Do you take exception to the amount? Yes; because it is 14·85 per cent. less than what I am entitled to.

1585. Have you explained your views to the Board? Yes. I may state that I called and saw the Secretary, who told me that I had better go and see the actuaries. On 16th September, 1897, I wrote the following letter to the Board:—

Gentlemen,

"Quantock," Toxteth Road, Glebe Point, 16 September, 1897.

Yesterday, I had an interview with your Secretary, and subsequently with the actuaries, from whom I gathered the following:—

1. That my service had been computed to start on the 24th August, 1866. The official Blue Books, compiled by the Government Statistician, and published from year to year, show the date of my first appointment under the Colonial Government to be the 1st March, 1865.

2. That, in consequence of having been retired on the 8th August last, and being computed to have entered the Public Service on the 24th of that month, the last year of my service is not to count, being fifteen days under the 365 days required to complete the year. Yet, for this $\frac{3}{10}$ of a year, 4 per centum has been deducted from the total value of both salary and emoluments. With all respect, I claim that to deduct the premiums, and then refuse to pay the amount which such premiums have been enforced to provide, is most unjust. At this point, I beg to invite your attention to the action of the late Civil Service Board in dealing with the case of the last Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol, retired on a pension—viz., Mr. J. C. Read. This gentleman was first appointed on the 10th April, 1861, and retired on the 31st

December,

December, 1888; total service, equal 27 years and 8 months. The salary was £575; emoluments, £225 = £800; the $\frac{1}{10}$ th part equal $13 \cdot 33 \times 27 \cdot 92 = £372$ 4s., the pension granted. In this case the broken period was included in the calculation for pension. Such being so, why not in my case? P. Herbert.
26 Oct., 1897.

3. That 4 per centum is to be deducted for the value of the emoluments enjoyed prior to the 1st January, 1896. Part No. 6, section 55, of the Civil Service Act of 1884, sets forth that:—

“Any officer in the Service who held any office at the commencement of this Act, except as hereinafter provided, shall, notwithstanding his not having contributed during his past service to the Superannuation account, be entitled to the Superannuation allowance and gratuities hereinafter provided, subject to such an annual abatement from such pension as, on the certificate of the actuaries appointed under this Act, shall be equivalent to 4 per centum on his past salaries, and on such payment he shall be entitled to the full pension, when otherwise entitled thereto.”

Then Part No. 5, section 61, of the Public Service Act of 1895, directs that:—

“From and after the commencement of this Act the 4 per centum deductions referred to in section 53 (which only provides for a deduction from each payment of the salary) of the Civil Service Act of 1884 shall be made from the total value of salary and emoluments, other than forage, equipment, or travelling allowances.”

I beg to contend that under the clear wording of the sections just quoted to exact 4 per centum on the value of the emoluments enjoyed prior to the 1st January, 1896, would be an unjust proceeding.

4. That although 4 per centum is claimed, and during the twenty months prior to my retirement, was actually deducted from the total value of my salary and emoluments, yet now it is proposed to deduct from the value of said emoluments the sum of £26, being the estimated value of servants, this unauthorised deduction being apparently made for the purpose of reducing the average of the salary on which the pension is computed. I contend that the only deductions that can be made is the value of forage, equipment, or travelling allowances.

5. I am also informed that the abatement, which, I contend, would, if computed in accordance with the directions contained in the Civil Service Act of 1884 and the Public Service Act of 1895, amount to £140 3s. 9⁶d., is computed to be £172 12s. 7⁶d., but even assuming the last-named amount to be correct, the annual payments calculated to defray such charge is estimated to be £16 14s. 5⁶d.

This amount appears to be in excess. My age, 58⁵ years; life risk, first-class; expectancy of life, equal 15 years.

Then $\frac{£172 \cdot 629}{15} = £11$ 10s. 1⁹d. Difference, £5 4s. 3¹d.

Soliciting for the various matters herein brought under notice, your most favourable consideration.

I have, &c.,

P. HERBERT,

Ex-Governor, Darlinghurst Gaol.

The Public Service Board.

1586. The letter you have read gives the grounds in detail of your objection to the manner in which the Board have calculated the pension they intended for you? Yes. I have also prepared a paper, which I think will render my letter clearer still:—

STATEMENT showing how the deductions appear to have been effected from the pension legally due to Mr. P. Herbert, ex-Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol.

Pension legally due on 32 5-12th years' service				285	12	2
Pension awarded by the Public Service Board, 9th September, 1897 ...				243	4	0
Total deduction.....				£42	8	2

This illegal deduction of £42 8s. 2d. appears to have been effected as follows:—

(a) By loading the annual abatement at the rate of £53 ² per centum ..	7	16	5	8
(b) By reducing servitude 2 5-12th years, and by deducting £26 from emoluments	34	11	8	2

Total deduction..... £42 8 2

The annual abatement due on the thirty-year period on which the Public Service Board have directed the pension to be computed amounts to £8 17s. 11²d., being 4 per cent. on salary received anterior to the 1st January, 1895—viz., £3,336 7s. 6⁶d. The abatement claimed by the Board amounts £16 4s. 5⁶d., a difference of £7 16s. 5⁸d., being an overcharge at the rate of £53² per centum.

The loading of the abatement with interest, or any other charge, is quite illegal, not being authorised either by the Civil Service Act of 1884 or the Public Service Act of 1895. “Forage,” “equipment,” and “travelling allowances,” are the only deductions that can be made from the emoluments.

I desire to specially invite the attention of this Select Committee to my service having been reduced two years and five months. The Government Blue Books, published from year to year, and all other official papers, show that P. Herbert entered the Public Service on the 1st March, 1865; consequently on the date of my retirement, 8th August, 1897, my service amounted to thirty-two years five months and eight days.

P. HERBERT,

Ex-Governor, Darlinghurst Gaol.

I also put in the following statement:—

£3,511 17s. 6d. at 4% = £140 9s. 2⁴d. = £9 7s. 2⁸d., annual payment due to the Superannuation Fund.

15 yrs.

The Comptroller-General of Prisons represented the sum due to the Superannuation Fund to be £187 17s. 9⁶d.; this would be equal to 4% on salaries amounting to £4,697. The computation the Actuaries employed by the Public Service Board would not accept, they computing the sum to be £172 12s. 7⁶d., = a difference of £15 5s. 2⁶d.; the true sum due, as shown by this statement, being £140 9s. 2⁴d.

P. HERBERT,

Ex-Governor, Darlinghurst Gaol.

1897.

27th October, 1897.

- P. Herbert. 1587. What is the amount of pension to which you consider you are entitled? £285 12s. 2d.
 1588. Then, according to your statement, there has been an unauthorised deduction of £42 8s. 2d. per annum? Yes.
 26 Oct., 1897. 1589. Does the matter stand at the present moment in that way between you and the Board? Not exactly. Receiving no reply to my letter of the 16th September, I wrote on the 11th October last the following letter to the Board:—

Gentlemen,
 "Quantock," Toxteth Road, Glebe Point, 11 October, 1897.
 I have the honor to invite your attention to my letter, bearing date the 16th ultimo, the receipt of which was acknowledged on the 20th ultimo, respecting certain errors in the computation of my pension up to date hereof. No reply has been received to this communication, and being anxious to have this matter settled, I now respectfully request that you will please inform me when I may expect to receive your reply.

I have, &c.,
 P. HERBERT,
 Ex-Governor Darlinghurst Gaol.

The Public Service Board.

I received an answer to that letter as follows:—

Sir,
 Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 13 October, 1897.
 With reference to your communication of the 11th instant, and previous correspondence, regarding the computation of your pension, I have the honor to inform you that one of the questions raised by you, being a legal one, has been referred to the Law Advisers of the Crown, and as soon as a reply is received you will be further communicated with.

I have, &c.,
 J. W. HOLLIMAN,
 Secretary.

P. Herbert, Esq., "Quantock," Toxteth Road, Glebe Point.

1590. Have there been any further communications since the 13th instant? No; I have a letter written which I intend sending in to-morrow, again pressing for a reply.

1591. The letter you have read is the last communication you have had from the Board? It is the last direct communication connected with my case. Recently, thinking that the legal opinion asked for by the Board had been delayed in the Crown Law Department, I called at the office of the Crown Solicitor and subsequently that of the Attorney-General, and elicited that no papers in my case had come to hand, nor yet had any question regarding my pension been received from the Public Service Board.

1592. You say you are not disposed to give the names of the gentlemen in question? I would rather not.

1593. It is hardly fair, in view of the fact that your statement is so condemnatory of the Public Service Board? I do not think that the gentlemen would object to their names being mentioned—Mr. Colquhoun, for instance.

1594. That is the Crown Solicitor? Yes; and Mr. Want's Secretary, Mr. Pollock.

1595. And there the matter stands at present? Yes.

1596. Mr. Hogue.] Did you act under legal advice in making your communications to the Board? I had the advice of a solicitor.

1597. When you interviewed the Secretary to the Board, did he refer you to the actuaries? Yes; and the actuaries afforded me the information upon which I have founded my protest. They acted in a most courteous manner, and explained that the computations were made in accordance with instructions received from the Board.

1598. They computed it from August, 1866, instead of March, 1865? Yes; and took £26 off for servants, and charged the interest back upon the quarters anterior to the Act of 1895, which says it shall only commence from and after the commencement of that Act.

1599. You are certain about your appointment as a permanent officer from 1st March, 1865? I am only certain to this extent: that I have always accepted the Blue Book as being correct. I have no records myself. I have a witness who can state that I was in the Service during 1865, but as to whether I was there or not in the month of March he cannot say. I have no official documents from the Government until I was appointed trades overseer of Berrima Gaol, and then I was gazetted; and from that date to the present time I have always accepted the Blue Book notice as being the legal date of my first appointment. The Secretary to the Public Service Board has asked me if I can produce documents establishing my service from the 1st March, 1865; but of course I cannot.

1600. I suppose you can produce the Blue Book? Yes.

1601. Have you any gazette notice of any appointment? No.

1602. Mr. Jessep.] Do the Board dispute the date of your appointment? Evidently.

1603. Mr. Hogue.] I notice by the Blue Book, under the heading of Darlinghurst Gaol, that the date of your appointment to that place is 1st June, 1890, also that the date of your first appointment in the New South Wales Government is 1st March, 1865? Yes; that is so. That is in all the Blue Books for many years past.

1604. Chairman.] Then the Public Service Board appear to question the accuracy of that date? It would appear so, although they have not replied to my letter of the 16th September.

1605. Mr. Hogue.] Do you understand that the Public Service Board ignore the Blue Book as an official record? They must have done so; but not having replied to my letter, I do not know what position they are going to take up.

1606. I understand that, in addition to postdating your appointment, the last year of your service is not to count in the pension, because it is not complete by fifteen days? That is so.

1607. In other words, if they had kept you on fifteen days longer, you would have had another year to add to your service? Yes. They deducted from my salary all the premiums for that year, but refused to give the pension. They deducted the 4 per cent. up to the 8th.

1608. Chairman.] Did they deduct 4 per cent. from the final payment to you after you had ceased to be in the Service? Yes, they deducted the 4 per cent., even on the eight days.

1609. And they refused you a pension for the same period? Yes. There is another point which I would like to mention. I applied to the Board for the statutory six months' leave to which I was entitled to on account of long service, and was refused. I was also refused leave for a month, two months, three months, or a fortnight, because if I had got my leave it would have brought me over the fifteen days.

1610. Mr. Hogue.] Nevertheless, in order to suit the convenience of the Service, you were kept in the Service longer than they had originally intended, in consequence of the arrival of the prisoner Butler? Yes.

1611. Have you any idea why they kept you on because of Butler's arrival? He was one of the most dangerous criminals ever received in the gaol, and most difficult to manage, and I can only assume that they did

- did not like to try a new hand with him. Having been notified to retire on the 30th, I had to pay house-rent—£7 a month—from that date, and when I applied for a refund my request was refused.
1612. That is to say, the moment you received notice of your intended retirement you rented a house, and had to pay rent for it, although you were still kept in the Service? Yes. My salary was actually reduced at the rate of £84 a year during the last three months and eight days.
1613. Do you consider you are entitled to house rent during that time? Unquestionably. Had it not been for the arrival of Butler on 27th April I certainly would have been retired on the 30th April.
1614. Is there anything against you in the Service? Not that I know of.
1615. I understand that your record is clean and above reproach? I have never had a charge laid against me.
1616. I understand you to say that the only ground for your retirement was that they desired to appoint a younger man? Yes; and that the Under Secretary of Justice had made certain allegations respecting negligence of duty in connection with the Delany frauds. I saw the Under Secretary of Justice afterwards, and he denied having urged my retirement. He said, "Nothing of the sort; I have been opposed to your retirement."
1617. They would not trust a younger man to deal with Butler? No.
1618. Mr. Perry.] Was any direct charge made against you for negligence in the Delany frauds? No direct charge, but indirectly I was called on to explain why certain instructions respecting sending out special accounts had not been complied with. In my reply I reported that the letter containing such instructions had not reached my hands, it having been stolen by Delany, who secreted it, and this letter was not found until Delany's office was searched by an Inspector from the Treasury, after his (Delany's) arrest. Incidentally I have heard that the head of the Department made a number of charges against me to the Board, but none of them have been brought forward, and I can only speak from hearsay, and am not positive as to whether the reports that have reached me are true.
1619. It has been brought to your knowledge somehow that they were attempting to make charges against you? Yes.
1620. Mr. Hogue.] Do we understand you to mean that there was some intriguing in the Department in order to have you superseded? I attribute my retirement to personal ill-feeling on the part of the Comptroller-General of Prisons, and McCauley, who is now the Deputy Comptroller.
1621. Has he ever been friendly with you? When he was my chief clerk in the gaol he asked me to assist him in getting to the accountant's position in the head office. I recommended him, and he wrote a warm letter thanking me. There is another feature of the matter: at the time of my appointment to the gaol there was a large number of applicants, and amongst the applicants were, so I am informed, Captain Neitenstein and McCauley. Since then the wheel of fortune has brought them over me.
1622. Mr. Perry.] I understand you were entitled to six months' leave of absence? Yes, under the Act.
1623. And you think the reason they refused to allow it was to enable them to reduce your pension? Yes; to get me out as quickly as possible, so that the pension would be less. I was promised on several occasions by the Comptroller-General that I would get two or three months' leave, whereas, after thirty-two years' of service, I got but four days' leave.
1624. Chairman.] Have you had no leave during the whole of your service? Only sick leave during the past fourteen years. The duties of the gaol were so onerous that I could not see my way to take the annual leave.
1625. Mr. Hogue.] And during that time there is not the scratch of a pen against you? Except the Delany matter, nothing whatever. I should like to put certain figures before you in explanation, of those I have already given, as showing the injustice of the computations made. The Board have charged me with £172 12s. 7d.; that, capitalised, means a debt, at 4 per cent., of £4,315 14s. £172 12s. 7d., divided by my expectation of life, would give me an annual payment of £11 10s. 2d. per annum; but the Board make it £16 14s. 5d.—an overcharge of £5 4s. 3d., equal to 6·7 per cent. £3,336 7s. 6d. is the actual money I have received during the period 24th August, 1866, to 31st December, 1884; and 4 per cent. on that sum yields £133 9s. 1d. as the debt actually due to the Superannuation. This amount, divided by my expectancy of life—fifteen years—gives £8 17s. 11d. as the annual abatement due. I place that against the abatement charged by the Board, viz., £16 14s. 5d., and so get £7 16s. 6d. as the actual annual overcharge. The overcharge on the gross sums—£4,315 14s. and £3,336 7s. 6d.—amounts to £976 6s. 6d., and this amount has been used to increase my indebtedness to the Superannuation Fund.
1626. Mr. Jessop.] Where do they get the additional amounts from? My contention is that the whole matter of the deductions, interest, and so on is illegal.

Frederick George Davidson Smith sworn and examined:—

1627. Chairman.] You were in the Railway Department of the Public Service? Yes.
1628. Have you been retrenched by the Board? Retired.
1629. On what ground? On account of ill-health.
1630. Have you been a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; since the commencement.
1631. Have you always been in the Railway Department? Yes.
1632. The Public Service Board have refused to grant you any pension or gratuity? Yes.
1633. Have you a letter of refusal? Yes; on the 11th November, 1896, I received a letter:—

I am directed by the Public Service Board to inform you, that in view of the circumstances of your retirement, you are not entitled to pension or gratuity.

1634. The first notice you had retiring you was, I suppose, the notice signed by H. F. Brown of the power-house, stating that on account of continual ill-health you would be retired? Yes.

1635. Then you applied to the Commissioners for pension, and they referred you to the Public Service Board, on the 16th June, 1896? Yes.

1636. I see from the papers that on the 29th September, 1896, the Board said:—

Respecting the payment of retiring allowance, the matter would be dealt with as speedily as possible.

On the 30th October, 1896, the Railway Commissioners advised you that they have no voice in the management of the fund, and then comes the letter which you have already referred to, declining to recommend your claim, and giving no reason? That is so.

1637. There has been no further correspondence since November? No. I saw the Secretary and spoke to him about it, and also asked him about a refund of the contributions, and he said the date of the last Act past included the Railway employees, was November; therefore I had no claim.

- F. G. D. Smith.
26 Oct., 1897.
1638. And that is all you know about it? Yes. I was not in good health, and I have not taken the matter up.
1639. Mr. Jessep.] You were twenty-four years in the Service, and the cause of your retirement was continued ill-health? Yes.
1640. When did your health break down? About two years before I went into the power-house—1894.
1641. When did your health first break down? 1892.
1642. As a matter of fact, you served twenty years in good health? Yes.
1643. And that is the only reason they assigned against you? Yes. About Christmas, 1895, I saw Dr. Walker Smith, of the Glebe, and he advised me to have a rest. I was run down, and he was afraid of paralysis of the brain. I went to the Medical Board, and they recommended a rest.
1644. Has there been anything against you during your employment? Nothing at all that I know of. As a matter of fact, I was over-anxious in my duties, which caused me to break down.
1645. Chairman.] Are you able to do anything now? I could not take up any clerical work. My brain is dull and my memory bad.
1646. Mr. Jessep.] Do you know how much you paid into the Superannuation Fund? Nearly £100.
1647. And they declined to return you that? Yes.
1648. Have you made application for it? Only a verbal application.
1649. What is your age now? Forty-seven.
1650. Chairman.] Were you on the Northern line? No; on the Western line. I was also in the Chief Mechanical Engineer's office for many years, and then went to the power-house.

Tasker Charles Smith sworn and examined:—

- T. C. Smith.
26 Oct., 1897.
1651. Chairman.] You were in the Public Service? Yes; for over eighteen and three-quarters years.
1652. In what branch? Over fifteen and a half years in the Government Architect's Office, and three and one-quarter years in the Justice Department.
1653. In what capacity were you employed? In the Architect's Office as a draftsman, and in the Justice Department as clerk.
1654. You had a break of two months in your service? Yes.
1655. Was that between the two Departments? Yes; before I went into the Justice Department.
1656. Did you receive pay during that two months? No.
1657. How long ago did that break occur? In January and February, 1893.
1658. You considered yourself entitled to four and a half months' leave on full pay? Yes; that is what I was entitled to, according to the Act.
1659. And you have not had it? They gave me six months on full pay.
1660. Instead of four and a half? No; I received a note, stating I was to receive six months' leave of absence.
1661. When? After I was retrenched from the Government Architect's Office, with a promise of being taken on shortly.
1662. Were you taken on during that six months? No.
1663. The two months' break was after the lapse of the six months? Yes.
1664. When were you retired finally? The early part of this year—24th February, 1897—after five months' temporary employment.
1665. I believe you had a salary of £225 per annum? Yes; in the Government Architect's Office, and 10s. a day in the Justice Department.
1666. On your retirement, the Public Service Board tendered you £11 2s. 3d.? I saw it announced in the newspaper. I happened to be in the Justice Department, and they handed me a voucher, and advised me to take all I could get. I took it under protest, with the proviso, "Subject to further consideration, I accept this sum."
1667. How much did you pay into the Superannuation Fund? About £4 altogether.
1668. And what do you consider you are entitled to? A fortnight's pay for every year of service, less two and a half years. I received six months on full pay, and I was entitled to four and a half. The amount I am entitled to altogether is about £121.
1669. Have you represented that matter to the Public Service Board? I sent a statement to the Minister.
1670. But not to the Board? I understand that was sent to the Board.
1671. Mr. Jessep.] Have you communicated with the Board direct? No. When Mr. Gould saw my compensation papers, he laughed, and said it was ridiculous.
1672. Mr. Hogue.] Do I understand that, from the day you saw the notification of your retirement in the newspapers, up to the present, you have had no official communication of your retirement? No; I have not.
1673. How did you come to leave;—did any superior officer tell you you were retired? Yes. It seemed to be generally known through the newspapers. Others said that they only saw that they were retrenched from the newspapers. The head of the office told me that my name was not in the newspapers as one of the officers of the Department.
1674. Was that an official communication to you? No; I was not informed officially about it.
1675. And on the strength of that you walked out? No. I kept on hoping I would receive an official communication. In the meantime they were trying to have me kept on. They were writing asking me to be temporarily employed. As a matter of fact, I got back four or five months as a temporary hand.
1676. Chairman.] Will you send in, to be attached to your evidence, a tabulated statement showing the amount you consider yourself entitled to? Yes.
1677. Mr. Jessep.] You had fifteen and a half years of continuous service in the Government Architect's Department, during which time you received £225 per annum? Yes; towards the latter part of it. That was my salary when I left.
1678. Were you on the permanent staff of the Government Architect's Department? No; I was not on the staff.
1679. After fifteen and a half years of service you applied for leave of absence? I did not apply for it. It was granted without application, on full pay.
1680. By whom was it granted? I got it from the Secretary for Public Works.

1681. A break of two and a half months followed, when you were taken to the Justice Department, and T. C. Smith. employed as a temporary clerk at 10s. a day? Yes.
1682. Were you employed as a temporary clerk in the Justice Department, or were you gazetted? I 26 Oct., 1897. was gazetted towards the end of my service.
1683. When? About 1st December, 1895—just before the new Act came into force.
1684. And up to the present moment you have had no official notification of your retirement from the Service? No.
1685. Have you stated your case in full direct to the Public Service Board? Not direct, but through the Justice Department.
1686. Have you communicated with the head of the Government Architect's Department? No.
1687. As a matter of fact, you have only communicated with the head of the Justice Department? Yes.
1688. Have you detailed the whole of your grievance to him? Yes.
1689. You consider you are entitled, by your length of service, to about £121? Yes.
1690. And the sum which has been offered to you amounts to £11 2s. 3d.? Yes; and I accepted it under protest.
1691. When you signed the protest did you notice anything on the document intimating that you were retired from the Service? I cannot remember what it said with regard to my retirement.

George Herbert Greville sworn and examined:—

1692. Chairman.] I believe you were in the employment of the Public Service for seventeen years? Yes.
1693. What Department? The Charting Branch of the Department of Mines.
1694. Have you been retired? Yes—on the 1st August, 1896.
1695. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.
1696. How much did you contribute? About £120.
1697. Did you receive a written notification of retirement? Yes, signed by the Under Secretary for Mines, informing me that His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, had, on the recommendation of the Board, retired me.
1698. Did you apply for a retiring allowance? Yes, and I have received one.
1699. What was the amount? About £450.
1700. Were you satisfied? No.
1701. Why? I thought my leave rights had not been considered; I thought I was perfectly right in claiming three months' leave after ten years of continual service on the permanent staff, and two months' accumulative leave under the Civil Service Act.
1702. That would have given you five months' pay? Yes, equal to that.
1703. Have such allowances been made, within your knowledge, in other cases? Not by this Board, as far as I am aware. They were made under the old Act.
1704. Then, really, your complaint is that you have not been granted five months' leave of absence on full pay? Yes.
1705. Did you apply definitely for that? Yes.
1706. And it has been refused? Yes.
1707. And you think you ought to have either had the absence and the pay, or the pay without the absence? Yes.
1708. Is that the whole of your complaint? That is the only complaint I have. I wish to put in the following letter:—

Sir,

I completed seventeen years of permanent service under the Government, being retired by the Public Service Board on 1st August, 1896. From 5th May, 1879, until 1st August, 1896, I held the position of charting draftsman in the Department of Mines, and at the time of my retirement was ranked as one of the senior draftsmen. After I received notice of my retirement, but before leaving the Public Service, I applied for leave of absence then due to me under the Civil Service Act of 1884, viz., three months upon the completion of ten years' service on the permanent staff and two months accumulated leave—in all, five months' leave of absence on full pay or payment in lieu thereof. Upon applying for this I received a reply from the Public Service Board to the effect that my request could not be entertained by them.

I beg, therefore, to submit for the consideration of this Honorable Committee the following point:—That the terms of the Civil Service Act of 1884 should not have been superseded by those of the Public Service Act of 1895, in so far as regards the leave due to me.

I have, &c.,

JOHN CASH NEILD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

George Lynn Little recalled and further examined:—

1709. Chairman.] I believe you have some additional evidence to place before the Committee? Yes; I G. L. Little. desire to hand in the following statement and correspondence:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—

In November, 1872, I passed the Civil Service Examination. In March, 1873, was appointed by the Governor and Executive Council as clerk in the Postal Service at a salary of £75 per annum. In July, 1896, I was retired from the Service by the Public Service Board, my salary then being £340 per annum. I now ask an alteration in the date of my retirement, so that I may receive the benefit of the 62nd clause of the Public Service Act of 1895.

In support of this request, I beg to say that I have never had the benefit of the extended leave of absence which is and has been always allowed to officers of my standing on application therefor.

From an interview with Mr. Commissioner Barling, I learned that my case was especially to be referred to the Crown Law Department, on section 19, clause 4, of the Act, and also the Regulation No. 20.

I have contributed to the Superannuation Fund since its inception, and, of course, in all good faith, that on being retired at any time, other than for an offence, I should receive the benefit of my contract with the Fund, and on the terms and scale therein set forth.

18 October, 1897.

27 Oct., 1897.

I,

G. L. Little. I, therefore, now in order to show that my record is good, my services faithful, and my ability equal to the office I held, I do hereby allege maladministration of the Public Service Act in regard to the grading of the mail branch department of the General Post Office, and sincerely request, may I say demand, an inquiry into the action of the sub-committee appointed thereto, viz., Messrs. Davies, Unwin, and McMahon.

27 Oct., 1897.

It was almost a matter of impossibility for the Public Service Board, in the time given, to deal fairly with the individual cases, and, therefore, gentlemen, as I have already stated, the so-called grading of the Department was merely a faction fight, and if not remedied now this Public Service Act of 1895 will certainly have caused more injustice and wrong than any other mandate ever issued in this country.

Trusting I have established my claim to the right and privilege I have asked as an officer of nearly twenty-five years' faithful service, and now 50 years of age.

I have, &c.,
GEO. LYNN LITTLE.

Frederick Ashby Thorpe sworn and examined:—

F. A. Thorpe.
27 Oct., 1897.

1710. Chairman.] I believe you were employed in the Charitable Institutions Department? Yes; I was also in the Harbours and Rivers Department for fourteen years.

1711. When did you enter the Service? On the 20th June, 1878.

1712. As a permanent or as a temporary officer? As a temporary officer.

1713. When were you removed into the Charitable Institutions Department? 1st January, 1893.

1714. Was that a permanent appointment? Yes.

1715. Was it gazetted? Yes.

1716. From the letter you have sent in, asking to be examined, it appears that some time during this year, or about the end of last year, you were verbally notified by the Chairman of the Public Service Board, Mr. Wilson, that the Board had approved of an increase in your salary, to date from the 1st July, 1896? Yes.

1717. Did you get that increase? No; that is my complaint.

1718. What caused you to resign your position? The offer of a better position outside the Service. I resigned on the 5th February, 1897.

1719. Did you apply for any allowance? I could not, under the Act, apply for an allowance. I was a contributor to the Superannuation Fund whilst I was in the Charities Office, but as I resigned I was not, under the Act, entitled to either a pension or compensation; but three weeks or more prior to my resignation I was informed by Mr. Wilson, as the result of a rather minute examination of my work, that I was to receive an increase of £35 a year, the increase to date from the 1st July, 1896. Therefore, at that time, I was entitled to seven months' back pay.

1720. Have you read the resolution of Parliament appointing this Committee? Yes.

1721. Did you not see that the Committee was appointed to inquire into the question of gratuities and retiring allowances granted or refused. Your grievance is that you did not get some back salary which you say you were promised? I put the particulars of my case before a member of the Committee—Mr. Perry—and I asked him if he thought it would come within your jurisdiction. He told me I was to write and state my case, and that it would be decided then. As a result, you have asked me to come here, and that is why I am here. I wish to put the matter before you—not that I expect to get anything out of it—but I think it is as well for you to know the way in which the Board does its business.

1722. Did you make any application for the back payments to which you refer? Yes.

1723. Did you receive any reply? They told me it could not be done. I then asked for an interview, and Mr. Wilson said that no good end would be served by it. I asked then, in consideration of my long service, and the merit I had gained in the Service—I may mention that I have an excellent recommendation from Mr. Sydney Maxted—for a reason why they had gone back upon the promised increase, and they did not reply.

1724. Mr. Travers Jones.] Instead of remaining in the Service you resigned and took a better position? Yes; but before I resigned I was rated—verbally, no doubt—at a higher salary than they had been paying me.

1725. Then you consider that you are entitled to the seven months' increase, notwithstanding that you left the Service of your own free will? Yes. I may mention that I told Mr. Wilson, at the time he notified me of the increase, that I had been approached with regard to a position outside. He replied, "That will have nothing to do with it; it is purely a case of merit."

1726. Mr. O'Reilly.] You say you were rated verbally by Mr. Wilson? I was sent for by him, and informed verbally that my salary was increased by £35 a year.

1727. Was that seven months before you left the Service? No; that was in January, 1897, and I left the Service three weeks afterwards. The increase was to date from the 1st July, 1896, seven months prior.

1728. Was that an understood thing? It was clearly stated. It was afterwards discussed by Mr. Wilson with other officers of the Department. I saw Mr. Barling about it, and he tried to put me off. It was simply a case of back-sliding on a verbal statement. If it had been in writing I could have taken some action, perhaps, to compel them to pay.

1729. Do you not think that the promise was made upon the pre-supposition that the Department would benefit by your services in the future? No; it was stated otherwise. Mr. Wilson examined my work for at least an hour and a half, and he assured me that it was the result of his investigation—it was purely a case of merit. I was getting an allowance prior to the Board's grading, and this was to recoup me. I had made an appeal, and he said that as the result of the appeal he had found they had rated me too low.

1730. What would the increase of pay which you say would be due to you amount to? To about £21.

Henry Forster sworn and examined:—

H. Forster.
27 Oct., 1897.

1731. Chairman.] I gather from a letter you have sent in that you were overseer of the mat department, Darlinghurst Gaol, for over twenty years? Yes.

1732. Were you overseer during the whole of that time? Yes.

1733. Was that the full length of your service with the Government? I had about three months' service as a warder, at first.

1734.

1734. You were retired in February of this year on three months' leave of absence, which expired on the 15th May last? Yes. H. Förster.
27 Oct., 1897.
1735. By whom were you retired? By the Comptroller-General of Prisons. I was physically unfit to perform my duties. At the beginning of the year I was brought before the Medical Board and Mr. Ashburton Thompson, at the investigation of the authorities. I was suffering from locomotor ataxy. I tried to be kept on for another two years, so that I should be 60 years of age. Mr. Thompson said, "You might, I think, try to be kept on, but do not have any worry; that is the thing which will knock you over, and you are not to go up and down stairs too often." Three or four weeks after that I had a severe attack. At this time there was a lot of worry at the gaol, and I suppose it upset me. At all events, I was unable to perform my duties any longer.
1736. I suppose that all this resulted in your being retired on the ground of ill-health? Yes.
1737. Did you apply for a pension? I was told by the Governor of the Gaol, Mr. Herbert, that I would get nothing. Of course he had it from the Comptroller.
1738. You understood from him that the statement that you would receive no monetary consideration came from the Comptroller? I went to the Comptroller, and he said he had no authority to recommend me for a gratuity.
1739. Had you been a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? No; it is on those grounds that I asked for a gratuity. If I had been a contributor I could have retired on a pension.
1740. Then your case rests upon this: You claim some retiring allowance as an act of grace? The Act says that non-contributors to the fund shall receive a gratuity of a month's salary for each year of service.
1741. Were you 60 years of age? Fifty-eight.
1742. Did you make an application in writing to the Board? No; I did so to the Comptroller. I also went to the Under Secretary for Justice, and he told me that if I got the Comptroller to specially recommend me, possibly an amount might be placed on the Estimates to meet my case. I went to the Comptroller, and he was surprised to think the Under Secretary had told me that. He said, "It is out of my power to do it. If I do it for you I shall have to do it for hundreds of others." I may state that other non-contributors have received a gratuity. Mr. Buchanan is one. His gratuity was paid, however, before the Act was passed.
1743. Do you know of any non-contributors who have received a gratuity since the Act was passed? Yes; Warder Thompson. He was a non-contributor, and he received a gratuity at the beginning of this year of so much for each year of service.

William Henry Tindell sworn and examined:—

1744. Chairman.] I believe you have a written statement to present? Yes, as follows:—

Burwood, 27 October, 1897.

To Major Neild, Chairman of the Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly on Public Service Board—Retiring Allowances and Gratuities,—

W. H. Tindell.
27 Oct., 1897.

My name is William Henry Tindell. I have been a contract draftsman in connection with the Department of Lands from the year 1873 until the present time, and am still working in that capacity in connection with the said Department. My work consists of making plans of portions of land upon the deeds prepared by the Department of Lands, referring to such portions of land. I have been constantly engaged in that work ever since I first entered upon it, which is not only a longer period than that served by any other contract draftsman, but is also a longer period than has been served by any officer now in the Service in the Deeds Branch of the Department of Lands. The term "contract draftsman," or "permanent emergency men," is derived from the fact that such persons are paid by piece-work, and are not paid a regular fixed salary. There is no doubt that that method of getting such work done was adopted, and has been continued, for purposes of economy. It is true that "contract draftsmen" have always been free to accept work from private persons, and I, in common with other "contract draftsmen," have from time to time accepted such work. My work for the Government has, however (with the exception of night-work, necessary on account of its urgency), been done in the Government offices, where regular office accommodation has been provided for me. I have been in daily attendance at the office, consequently my opportunities for getting private work have been few, and the amount of such work which I have obtained has been small. My time and my services have been as fully at the disposal of the Government as if I were a salaried servant, but I have not had the advantage of a regular fixed salary. I beg respectfully to urge the importance of this fact—that my position has been such that, although called a "contract draftsman," I have practically been quite as subject to the officers of the Government, from whom I received my instructions, as if I were a permanent officer in the Service. I beg also to repeat that my position has been so far assimilated to that of a regular Civil Servant that practically I have been almost entirely dependent upon the money received by me from the Government; and, moreover, that the advantages of such an arrangement have always been with the Government, and not with the "contract draftsman." I would, therefore, respectfully submit that I have been a person "temporarily employed" in a public department within the meaning of section 31 of the Civil Service Act of 1884.

I have lately been afflicted with a stroke of paralysis, from which I am slowly recovering. After a month's absence I resumed my duties, though with much suffering. I would respectfully submit that I may reasonably ask to be allowed to retire from my work with a gratuity under and according to the provisions of section 60 (ii) of the Public Service Act of 1895. The position of "contract draftsmen" was made the subject of special reference when the Public Service Act of 1895 was being passed through Parliament, and I would respectfully direct the attention of the Committee to the remarks of Mr. Morton, M.L.A., and the Hon. the Premier when what is now section 11 of that Act was under consideration—the Legislative Assembly, see Hansard, Session 1895, page 1876. I beg to emphasise the fact that all work that has been entrusted to "contract draftsmen" has been of a specially urgent character, involving in every instance the closest application and a continuance of hours of labour for speedy completion. It is by these requirements that the "contract draftsman" has always been a most valuable and indispensable officer to the State, and, moreover, one who, while rendering long, unbroken, and studious service, has not received one day's holiday or other consideration at the expense of the country.

In conclusion, I would mention that, notwithstanding my long service, I have been unable to make provision against the misfortune which has overtaken me, owing to the reduction of payment for work done, and the irregularity with which the work has been issued, enforcing idleness sometimes for days, whilst requiring my daily attendance at the office in case it would be issued in my absence. I have, to the best of my ability, rendered faithful service all these years, and I only ask that that consideration may be shown to me which it has been the practice of every Government of this Colony to show to those who have rendered long and faithful service in the work of the administrative department.

I have, &c.,
WM. H. TINDELL.

1745. You swear to the accuracy of that statement? Yes.
1746. Are you still in the Department? Yes.
1747. I believe you desire to retire? Yes.

W. H. Tindell. 1748. Have you made any application for leave to retire? Yes; to the Public Service Board. I applied for a gratuity, and received the following letter in reply:—
(Nc. M. 5,478-336.)

27 Oct., 1897.

Sir,

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 8 September, 1897.

With reference to your letter of the 31st ultimo, in which you apply for a gratuity in respect of your services as contract draftsman, Department of Lands, I am directed to inform you that your request cannot be complied with, as you were not an officer within the meaning of the Public Service Act.

Mr. W. H. Tindell, Cheltenham-road, Burwood.

I have, &c.,

J. W. HOLLIMAN,

Secretary.

1749. Mr. Travers Jones.] Did you pass the examination required under the 31st section of the Act? No. I was never asked to do so.

1750. Did you yourself ever ask to be examined? No.

George Peell sworn and examined:—

G. Peell.
27 Oct., 1897.

1751. Chairman.] Judging from the letter you have sent in, it appears that you entered the service of the Department of Lands on the 1st October, 1876? Yes. I was first of all a messenger for two or three years, and I was then employed as a temporary clerk. I remained in that position until the 1st July, 1887, when I was placed on the permanent staff, with an increase of £20 or £30 a year. I held that position until I was dismissed on the 31st July, 1896.

1752. So that you had served ten years and nine months on the temporary staff, and nine years and one month on the permanent staff, or nineteen years and ten months altogether? Yes.

1753. You say in your letter that you were subsequently forced to accept £235 ls. 8d. as a gratuity and refund;—the refund, I suppose, consisted of your contributions to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.

1754. Do you know how the gratuity was calculated? I had great difficulty in obtaining any information whatever. I was corresponding with the Secretary of the Public Service Board, and they then informed me that if I called at the office they would allow me to see how the gratuity was calculated. They would not, however, allow me to make a copy of the statement. I found from the statement that their calculation was within a pound or so of my own—that is, taking their data to calculate upon.

1755. That is, a fortnight's pay for each year of temporary service, and a month's pay for each year of permanent service? Yes.

1756. What claim do you consider you have? I consider I was illegally discharged.

1757. You think that the amount the Board gave you was reasonable, but your grievance, on the other hand, is that you do not consider that you were properly removed from office? In addition to that, I consider that I ought to have had a pension instead of the gratuity, because I had been in the Service for nineteen years and ten months.

1758. Under what section of the Act do you consider yourself entitled to that? I maintain that by continuing to contribute to the Superannuation Fund—I may say I was specially asked whether I would do so—I was still under the operation of the old Act as far as pensions are concerned. Therefore, I say that, in spite of the subsequent Act, I have a right to claim a pension under the 48th section of the Act of 1884.

1759. Mr. Hogue.] What age were you when you were retired? Sixty-seven.

Frederick Atkinson sworn and examined:—

F. Atkinson. 1760. Chairman.] Judging from a letter you have sent in, it appears you were employed in the Government Printing Office as assistant photo-lithographer from May, 1874, to 19th March, 1897? Yes.

27 Oct., 1897.

1761. You say that when you first entered the Service you were employed on the temporary staff, and remained in that position for one year and three months, and then you were permanently employed until retrenchment? Yes, as near as I can remember.

1762. Were you a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes, for about sixteen months.

1763. What was your salary? £200 per annum.

1764. You were the longest appointed officer in the photo-litho. department? Yes.

1765. Was any reason given for your retirement? No; I was reduced first, when the grading came out, by £40.

1766. Was your work lightened? No.

1767. Was your position changed? No; the two branches—the photo-litho. and the photo-mechanical—were brought together.

1768. Then you were not reduced on account of incompetency? No.

1769. Did you discharge equally responsible duties with a reduced salary? No; not when the two branches were put together. When the two branches were put together there were a lot of changes. Mr. Sharkey's and Mr. Dyer's hands were brought together. Under Mr. Sharkey I had a lot more work to do than under Mr. Dyer.

1770. When the two branches were brought together was your work as responsible as it was before? No.

1771. Did you apply for a gratuity? I received one of £96, being at the rate of two weeks' salary for the last twelve years of salary. I had been in the Service for twenty-four years. I received no consideration in respect of the first ten years of service.

1772. How was that? I do not know; no reason was given. For years whilst I was in the branch I was suffering from blood-poisoning. It keeps breaking out now.

1773. You say in your letter that for the last twelve years you suffered from blood-poisoning, contracted by the use of chemicals necessary for the carrying out of your work? Yes.

1774. Has this blood-poisoning interfered with the discharge of your duties? Mr. Sharkey took me off my ordinary work as much as he could, and gave me other work, such as enamelling portraits, and so on.

1775. Do you attribute the reduction of your salary to the blood-poisoning from which you suffered? No. My salary was only lately reduced—in January—when the grading of the office came out. Three months afterwards I was retired without warning.

1776. Did you get no notice? Two days' notice.

1777. Have there been any complaints in connection with the discharge of your duties? No. F. Atkinson.
1778. Do you consider you were discharged on account of the work required of you having fallen off? I think I was retired because there were too many hands there; but as I was the oldest hand, and I could do the work of ten out of sixteen of them, I think I have a claim. 27 Oct., 1897.
1779. Practically, you appear to have been a permanent officer for nearly twenty-one years? Yes.
1780. And yet you only received a gratuity at the rate of a fortnight's pay for each year of service for twelve years of that time, whilst you supposed that under the Act you were entitled to a month's pay for the whole period of your permanent service, and a fortnight's pay for the period of your temporary service? Yes, I thought, by being left on after the grading was done, that I was entitled to that under the Act.
1781. Mr. Travers Jones.] Did the blood-poisoning prevent you doing your work? No. I did the work with bad hands; with my fingers tied up.
1782. Are you fit now to do the work? Since I have been away it has not been so bad. It breaks out on the fingers and on the back of my hand. It eats away my thumb-nails.
1783. Mr. Hogue.] Have you any documents showing you were appointed as a permanent officer? No; I was appointed by Mr. Richards.
1784. Chairman.] Not by the Governor-in-Council? No.
1785. How did you come to consider yourself a permanent officer? I was appointed by the Treasurer.
1786. Were you continuously employed? Yes.
1787. How was your pay reckoned? By the day, until I got £150 a year, and I was then paid monthly.
1788. Was it calculated at the rate per year? Yes. When I was on daily wages I was still paid monthly in the same way as the other permanent hands.
1789. Have you had no explanation as to why they offered you this small sum? No; I was told by the overseer that I was retired. I saw Mr. Gullick, and told him how I was situated, and he said, "I will let you and the other man stop on till the end of the month, and then you must go."

TUESDAY, 2 NOVEMBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE, MR. TRAVERS JONES,		MR. O'REILLY, MR. WADDELL.
JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Joseph Barling sworn and examined:—

1790. Chairman.] We have asked you to come here to give us some information with reference to cases of persons who have been dismissed from the Public Service. I think the majority, or a great many of them, have a sort of family likeness, particularly in the case of the Customs Department. Referring to the first witness examined by the Committee from that Department—David William Mead—have you the paper connected with his case? Yes. J. Barling.
2 Nov., 1897.
1791. This man was originally appointed a tide-waiter? Yes.
1792. And acted for about six years in that capacity? I do not know his length of service, but the papers will show it.
1793. He subsequently became acting locker? Yes.
1794. So that he was in the Department, in one capacity or another, for about twelve years? I think I had better obtain his papers. You spoke just now about cases having a family likeness. I think I could save you trouble by letting you know the principle upon which the Board acted in connection with these men. They were persons whom we considered to be casual employees, and we had extreme difficulty in arriving at a decision as to what Parliament intended in granting gratuities to persons of that character. We felt so uncertain that we addressed a minute to the Premier on the subject, and as this will deal with a great many cases, perhaps the Committee will allow me to read it. The minute is dated 21st April, 1897. In regard to this minute we have not yet received a decision. When the matter is decided, it will clear off a large number of cases. The minute is as follows:—

The question of granting compensation on retirement to persons in the Public Service is a matter to which the Board have given a great deal of anxious attention. Prior to the passing of the Public Service Act of 1895, no public servant was entitled to any consideration on his retirement except so far as he came within the operations of the Civil Service Act of 1884.

I may state that although this minute is in print, it is not yet a public document. It is in print because it will form part of our Annual Report.

That Act provided for the formation of a Superannuation Fund, to which all permanent "officers" were compelled to subscribe, and the option to do so was also given to persons not designated as "officers," who came within the terms of section 8 of the Act. The Act further provided that from this fund a pension should be granted to persons with over fifteen years' service who might retire by reason of their having reached the age of 60 years, or through ill-health, or whose offices might be abolished. Where the service was less than fifteen years it was provided that a gratuity not exceeding one month's pay for each year of service should be granted. This consideration was limited entirely to subscribers to the fund, and other employees were not entitled to any consideration whatever; but, as a matter of fact, this rule has been departed from at different times, and the practice then seems to have been to grant persons, not subscribers to the fund, one month's pay for each year of service if they had been permanently employed, and a fortnight's pay if their service had been of a temporary character. The money so paid, however, was not a charge upon the Superannuation Fund.

The Public Service Act of 1895 introduced considerable modification of the benefits to which officers would be entitled on retirement during the first twelve months after the passing of the Act, and considerably improved the position of officers continuing to subscribe to the fund after the expiry of that period. A new principle was, however, introduced, which is found in section 11. It is therein provided that officers temporarily employed at the commencement of the Act whose services are dispensed with shall be granted by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Board, out of moneys provided by Parliament for the purpose, a gratuity at a rate not exceeding a fortnight's pay for each year of service prior to the commencement of the Act.

This principle of compensation to "temporary" officers, although, as already pointed out, from time to time tacitly recognised prior to the passing of the Public Service Act, was for the first time made law when that Act came into operation. The Board have had no trouble in dealing with the cases of persons who are permanently employed, and who are subscribers to the fund; but they have experienced great difficulty in their endeavour to arrive at the intention of Parliament as expressed in the proviso to section 11 above quoted. Officers and others employed in the Public Service are divided into three classes—permanent officers, temporary officers, and persons casually employed.

J. Barling. 1795. Who makes that division? You will see later on. We want this matter definitely settled by the Cabinet or by Parliament—
2 Nov., 1897.

The distinction between the two latter classes appears to the Board to be that "temporary" officers are those appointed by some member of the Executive Council, and "casual" employees are persons employed on the authority of the head of a Department or some other official. The distinction between temporary officers and casual employees is one, however, which cannot always be made, as many persons whose employment is simply from day to day have been taken on under the instructions of a Minister of the Crown. In their desire to carry out the intentions of Parliament, the Board have had to decide who are officers coming within the meaning of the proviso to section 11. It seems to them that the only persons who could come within the proviso are those who, if they were permanent officers, would come within the operations of the Public Service Act.

I may point out that the question as to what is the meaning of a temporary officer has never been clearly defined, and we are anxious to get it defined once and for all.

This opinion of the Board has been confirmed by the Attorney-General, who has decided that persons whose employment and dismissal do not come within the cognizance of the Board are not officers within the meaning of the Act. This places outside the operation of the Public Service Act, except for the purpose specifically reserved to the Board in section 55, all persons employed in the Department of the Inspector-General of Insane and the Department of Prisons, as well as such other Departments as had Regulations under any other Act than the Civil Service Act of 1884, which were in operation when the Board took office. This exclusion, although it considerably narrows the circle of officers who would be affected by the operations of the Public Service Act, still leaves a large number of officers to whom the term "temporary officer" could be applied, and the Board are seeking for some instruction or guidance which would enable them to come to a definite determination as to the persons to whom the beneficence of Parliament was intended to be applied. There are several thousand persons now in the employment of the State who were in their present employment on the passing of the Act, and who, by the terms of their engagement, are liable to be discharged from their employment practically without notice. If it is the intention that such persons should receive a gratuity on loss of office, the expenses of the Government will be very materially added to, as a fortnight's pay for each year of service is practically equivalent to an addition of 4 per cent. on the remuneration received by them prior to December, 1895.

The matter is so important, and the provisions of the Act so obscure, that the Board think it would be highly desirable that some legislative interpretation should be given to the proviso under section 11. At the present time there are a very large number of cases awaiting the decision and recommendation of the Board; but, in view of the very large sum of money at stake, the Board do not feel able to make the recommendation until they have had some authoritative decision, either by the Cabinet or by Parliament, as to the real intention of this portion of the Act.

It may not be out of place to point out that the provision in respect of the compensation to temporary officers was introduced in the Assembly by a private member.

We are now awaiting a reply to that communication.

1796. Then, I understand from that, that the rating of the persons in the public employ into three classes—permanent, temporary, and casual—is absolutely an act of the Board? No; I could hardly say that it is absolutely the act of the Board. It is what we think the Service should be divided into, pending the decision being given in regard to our minute. It is not authoritative in any way.

1797. Is there any section of the Act which makes any reference to the casual class which you appear to have constituted? The word "casual" is certainly not introduced into the Act. There is the word "temporary" in the Act, and we are asking for the decision of Parliament or of the Cabinet as to what is the meaning of "temporary." The expression "temporary hand" has never yet been defined. We have given no decision whatever in the matter. We are holding our decision over for the decision of Parliament or of the Cabinet.

1798. The 2nd section of the Act to which you have referred gives the Board full power to determine whether the employment, work, or duties of any person is to be considered as constituting him a permanent officer, even though that person was not appointed by the Governor? Undoubtedly it gives us that power.

1799. May I, in a general way, ask whether you have exercised that authority in the case of any persons who have not been appointed by the Governor-in-Council? We have regarded them as temporary, and we have exercised our powers under that clause, and declared them permanent officers.

1800. Reverting to the case of Mead: he appears to have been a tide-waiter, in frequent, though not continuous, employment for a term of years, and subsequently was, for a term of years, an acting locker, discharging continuous duty, and being paid, apparently, even when absent on account of illness;—has your Board considered cases of that kind as coming under the head of casual employees? Yes, because they are paid by the day. They can be taken on to-day, and, if the work is not there, they can be paid off to-morrow, and so on.

1801. You are now referring to the case of a tide-waiter; but I am referring specially to the case of an acting locker, where a man is in the responsible position of an acting locker? I think it is a fact that his engagement was really as a tide-waiter. I am well aware that occasionally these tide-waiters have been employed upon other work; but the nature of their engagement remains the same—strictly of a casual nature, when they can be turned off any day.

1802. But cannot any temporary officer be turned off;—does not the minute you have read show that a temporary officer can be discharged peremptorily? That is very true; but the man who would be paid at a monthly rate would not be turned off in that way. Tide-waiters are paid at so much per day. I must admit, as the Board has admitted in their minute, that this is a matter surrounded with considerable difficulties, and we have done our best to get it settled. If we are to constitute these persons as coming under the head of temporary officers, why should not we apply the same principle to working men who are taken on by the thousand, and who were in the employ of the State when the Act was passed. We have given the question the most anxious consideration, and it has been a matter of great difficulty to come to a determination, and I think we have taken a wise and right course in asking for a decision.

1803. May I not ask you to admit that there is a vast deal of difference between the position of a working man and the position of an employee of the State, placed in the responsible position of a locker, and receiving his pay monthly, and being employed year after year, even though that payment were calculated at a daily rate? There is, no doubt, a difference to a certain extent; but it must be remembered that there are a considerable number of working men who work in one place for nine or ten years or more at a stretch. We have simply expressed our own difficulties in the matter, and I think we have done the right thing in asking Parliament to say what is meant. I do not think we could have done more.

1804. Is it the case that, prior to the penning to the head of the Government of the minute you have read, your Board communicated to Mead and other persons the point-blank statement that they had no claim to gratuities? I suppose we have done so. I do not remember each particular case. With the doubts we had in our mind we must have decided in that way. If we had paid them there would have been no remedy?

1805. In view of the fact that your own minds do not appear to have been positively made up upon the point, do you not think that in giving a point-blank refusal in cases where the matter was really still under consideration, there was a great likelihood of misconception to arise? Of course it is possible that such a thing might be urged. I may say we took a strong view of the case at first; but as we went on with the matter, considerable doubt crossed our minds, and we decided to ask for a formal decision on the matter.

J. Barling.
2 Nov., 1897.

1806. There is a statement made by Mead to the effect that Mr. Beard, a tide-waiter, received a gratuity from the time he commenced as a tide-waiter;—have you any knowledge of the matter? No; I have not the case before me.

1807. Do you remember the case of Mr. Bruton? I do not remember these cases. They can, however, be found out. In connection with these people, Mr. Powell would give better information than I. Of course I can speak as to the principles which have guided us; but Mr. Powell, having been for many years Collector of Customs, will know more of the characters and details of the men than I.

1808. It would perhaps save a little time if you would allow me to interpose a witness to put in a document upon which I may have to ask you a question? Certainly.

Edward Mann Clark sworn and examined:—

1809. Chairman.] You are a Member of the Legislative Assembly? Yes; sitting for St. Leonards.

E. M. Clark.
2 Nov., 1897.

1810. Will you look at the letter dated "The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 16th March, 1897," addressed to yourself? Yes.

1811. Attached to it is a type-written document, dated "Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 10th March, 1897," addressed to the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, and signed by the Secretary for the Public Service Board? Yes.

1812. Were those two documents sent to you and received by you? Yes.

1813. They have reference, I suppose, to the case of Cannis and Portus? More particularly to the case of Cannis. It was his case more particularly which I brought under the notice of the Board. I also wrote afterwards to the Colonial Treasurer; and that is how I received the letter from the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade. Perhaps it would be convenient if I read the document.

Sir,

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 16th March, 1897.
Referring to your letter of the 22nd ultimo,—I am now directed by the Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer to forward herewith, for your information, copy of a communication from the Secretary, Public Service Board, dated 10th instant, relative to the claims of Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus to compensation owing to their retirement from the Government Printing Office.

I have, &c.,

F. KIRKPATRICK,

Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

E. M. Clark, Esq., M.P., Parliament House.
(No. 97 M 2,922-3/330.)

Sir,

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 10 March, 1897.

With reference to your B.C. communication of the 3rd instant, conveying a request from the Honorable the Premier to be furnished with the facts which are held to disqualify Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus, lately employed in the Government Printing Office, from receiving compensation, I am directed to state that the cases of gratuity being so numerous, the Public Service Board have had to lay down definite rules to guide them in their recommendations to the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, otherwise the expenditure under this head would be altogether beyond his expectations and the reasonable aspects of the case, viewed in the light of the serious responsibilities of the Board in relation to the whole question.

The rules laid down are:—

1. Persons appointed by the Governor and Executive Council are considered as "permanent officers."
2. Persons appointed by a Minister, and whose appointments have not been confirmed by the Executive Council, are considered as "temporary officers."
3. Persons appointed by the Head of a Department, and therefore removable by the same authority, are considered as "casual" employees, and, therefore, not entitled to compensation when their employment is brought to a close.

Messrs. George Cannis and Sydney Portus come under the latter category, they having been appointed by the Government Printer, who, therefore, had the power to dispense with their services at any time.

I have, &c.,

J. W. HOLLIMAN,

Secretary.

The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

I may say I hold very strong views upon the point that the Act provided that only two classes of employees should be recognised, namely, the permanent and temporary classes. The Regulation providing for casual employees seemed to me to be a Regulation altogether outside the Act of Parliament.

1814. And you made that the subject of a communication to the Colonial Treasurer? Yes.

Joseph Barling recalled, and examination continued:—

1815. Chairman.] Do you recognise the document put in and alleged to be signed by Mr. Holliman as an official document of your department? I have no doubt about it whatever. I think the words we put in were "altogether beyond his expectations and the intentions of Parliament." I know that in one of our minutes they were put in, but they are not in this document.

J. Barling.
2 Nov., 1897.

1816. Apparently your Secretary has informed the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade that you have laid down three definite rules, and the rules specified in this document do not quite accord with the statement which you gave to the Committee just now with reference to your action in classification;—you stated just now that you had, in some cases, treated as permanent officers persons who had not been appointed by the Governor-in-Council? That is when we had declared them as permanent officers.

1817. The evidence you gave just now referred rather to your actions in respect to persons who are retained in the public employ than in respect to persons dismissed from the public employ? Undoubtedly.

1818. Mr. Hogue.] Do you refer to this part of section 11 of the Public Service Act of 1895—

In all cases in which it shall appear to the Board that any person actually employed in the Public Service at the commencement of this Act has not been appointed by the Governor, the Board shall inquire into and consider the character of the work or duties performed by such person and the time during which he shall have been so employed, and if the Board shall determine that the employment, work, or duties of such person are in their nature such as should properly be designated permanent, and that the services of such person should be retained, then such person shall be considered as having become a permanent officer at and from the commencement of this Act, without examination or further probation, notwithstanding that he shall not have been appointed by the Governor.

? We have acted upon that in a great number of cases.

1819.

J. Barling. 1819. Chairman.] You have applied a different principle to persons dismissed from the Service from that which you applied to persons whom you have retained? In this way. Those who are retained are persons who unquestionably should be retained; but there is a large fringe outside who could not by any process of reasoning be brought under such a rule, and Parliament gave us the authority to decide, which we did. Then, with regard to that large number of persons left outside, we were at first pretty clear as to the action we should take, and it is laid down in the letter put in by Mr. Clark, dated March 10th; but in thinking over the matter, our minds became rather doubtful as to the correct course to take. It formed a subject of most anxious consideration on our part, and we decided then to put our difficulties into the shape of a minute and ask for a definite decision.

2 Nov., 1897. 1820. Mr. Hogue.] Does that decision depend upon the Cabinet or Parliament? The Cabinet or Parliament; I suppose it will be Parliament who will decide it.

1821. Do you find that the Act is in such a condition that it needs amendment to make it more clear? I daresay it would be an advantage to have amendments in certain parts. I could mention others where it would be desirable to have amendments; but it never has been clearly laid down what is the meaning of a temporary officer.

1822. Did I not understand you to say that the Act was not clear as between temporary and permanent officers? In some respects it is not clear.

1823. And it is not clear as between temporary officers and casuals? What we call casuals. I quite admit that it is a word coined by ourselves, as it were. It enables us to express our doubts in one word.

1824. Chairman.] You still think that a person might have been for many years in the continuous employ of the Government and be justly classed as a casual? I do not say that he should be justly classed as a casual. We only want to know whether he shall or shall not be so classed. Of course it is his good fortune that he has been kept on.

1825. Mr. Hogue.] The desire of the Board has been, of course, to interpret the Act literally? Yes; and it is the only safe plan for the Board to follow. If we were to loosely administer the Act, I do not know to what extent it would involve the public. I may refer to the painful position in which we have been placed. We have had to think of the unfortunate men who have had to go out, and also of the tens of thousands of our fellow-citizens who, for the last four or five years, have been put to the greatest straits. Incomes all through the Colony have come down something like 50 per cent. I do not think I am wrong in saying that. We have a most solemn duty to perform as between the public, who have really to find the money for the Service, and the Service itself; and I say positively that the Civil Servants have been treated better than many tens of thousands of unfortunate people who have been turned out of their positions without sixpence to bless themselves with. I am only showing what a responsible position ours is, and how careful we have to be.

1826. Mr. Hogue.] Do you know anything of cases in the Government Printing Office? I think the remarks I have made would apply to those cases, because the letter of 10th March clearly states the position with regard to them.

1827. Could you, without specially acquainting yourself by looking up documents, give any information concerning the employees in the Government Printing Office? I think, if you look at the letter of 10th March, it will show you the principles which have guided us in those cases.

1828. Mr. Travers Jones.] Do you classify all the men on wages as temporary officers, whether appointed by the Government or not? It all depends. There are certain persons—wages men—who have the right of making themselves permanent officers by notifying to the Treasury—that is, under the old Act—that they wish to become subscribers to the fund. That determines the question and makes them what may be practically called permanent officers. We have been guided to a certain extent by the opinions given by the Attorney-General and the Crown Solicitor. Mr. Ernest Smith, the Crown Solicitor, advised the late Civil Service Board as follows:—

Although the meaning of the Act is not at all clear, I think it must be taken that these wage men are to be entitled to participate as "officers" only from the date of their first contribution to the fund.

We have considered that as laying down a principle that they became permanent men when they determined to contribute to the fund; and that is how we have interpreted it. That does not exactly meet the case, but it very nearly meets it. This is Mr. Barton's opinion:—

I concur with, and, for the purposes of this opinion, adopt the views expressed by the Crown Solicitor in his letter of the 25th October, 1893 (the opinion of Mr. Ernest Smith above referred to). In that letter the Crown Solicitor deals with the cases of persons applying under section 57 to be admitted contributors to the Superannuation Account.

With reference to the cases of gentlemen who were officers entitled to classification at the time of the passage of the Act, and classified accordingly by the Board after its passage, but who had an anterior service, not as officers, but as persons who would have been within section 57 had that enactment been in existence during such anterior service, I am of opinion that the Act does not authorise the allowance to them of the whole continuous service from date of first appointment, as if they had been officers all the time; and (answering the Board's question) that services remunerated by daily, weekly, or monthly wages cannot properly be considered in computing retiring allowances, except where section 57 has been resorted to, in which case they are computable from the date of admission of the applicant as a contributor.

From that we have deduced this principle: That the wage class, to put themselves into a position to become permanent officers, can only do so from the time when, under the terms of the Act, they apply to the Treasury to be permitted to contribute to the fund. The whole question is beset with difficulties, but we have done our best to lay down principles to guide us.

1829. Whom do you classify as casual men? We have not classified them. We have merely pointed out those whom we suppose to be the casual men. We have pointed out that the definition is not very clear, and that we wish it to be made clear.

1830. Can you distinguish between a temporary and casual hand? Sometimes it is not very clear. We pointed out in our minute:—

There are several thousand persons now in the employment of the State who were in their present employment on the passing of the Act, and who, by the terms of their engagement, are liable to be discharged from their employment practically without notice. If it is the intention that such persons shall receive a gratuity on loss of office, the expenses of the Government will be very materially added to, as a fortnight's pay for each year's service is practically equivalent to an addition of 4 per cent. on the remuneration received by them prior to December, 1895.

We all admit the distinction is not very clearly made, and that is the reason why we are anxious to have it settled.

1831. Mr. O'Reilly.] We find, as the result of your evidence, that your real difficulty is an accurate legal definition of the term "temporary"? Yes.

J. Barling.
2 Nov., 1897.

1832. Have you taken legal opinion as to the meaning of the word? No; this minute asks for it.
1833. You have referred to the payment of a large sum of money—4 per cent. on salaries prior to 1895? Yes; a fortnight's pay for each year of service is practically 4 per cent.
1834. Which means many thousands of pounds? Yes.
1835. And you felt it was due to the Government and to the country that you should act guardedly in the matter? Yes; we should have been recreant to our trust if we had not done so.
1836. Mr. Hogue.] Are you aware whether there are not some officers appointed by the head of their Department, and yet removable, not by the same authority, but by the Governor-in-Council? It is possible, although I do not remember any such case.
1837. Take the case of employees in the Government Printing Office. I should like to draw your attention to the return which was ordered by Parliament to be printed some years ago. It is dated August 20th, 1890, and gives the names of compositors employed in the Government Printing Office. It also gives the date when they were first employed, and the date of their promotion to the permanent staff. In this list there is a number of employees who are classed as permanent officers. Amongst others there are Samuel Hegarty, Edward George Wilton, Frederick McDermott, and Frederick Shettle. Beyond that I should like to direct your attention to a notification in the Government Gazette, signed G. H. Reid, New South Wales, December, 1896. You will observe that the officers in that list were appointed by the head of the Department. They come under Rule No. 3, as laid down by yourself in the letter of March 10th. This notification in the Government Gazette says:—

The Treasury, New South Wales, December 29th, 1896.
His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, and upon the recommendation of the Public Service Board, has been pleased to approve of the retirement of the following permanent officers of the Government Printing Office, as a sub-department of the Treasury, from the Public Service, as from the 31st instant, namely.

So you see that although these officers were appointed by the head of the Department, they were removed by the Governor? That is quite a different thing. When the Public Service Act came into force we could not do anything except with the approval of the Governor. This is under the new Act of 1895. I may mention that all officers in the General Division are now appointed by the Governor-in-Council.

1838. Chairman.] But in the one class they are referred to as permanent officers? Yes. I have not these individual cases before me. Many thousands of cases come before us, so that it is impossible to remember each without looking up the papers. I am only pointing out that under the Act of 1895 we can only act through the Governor. Every one is now appointed by the Governor, even if he is only a messenger.

1839. Mr. Hogue.] Therefore Rule 3 will scarcely be correct? It states:—

Persons appointed by the head of a Department, and therefore removable by the same authority.

That meant at that time. Of course it will not apply now, because they have all to be appointed by the Governor-in-Council. We were dealing with cases of the utmost difficulty, and it is quite possible for any two persons to hold different opinions. We were doing our best to get through a most difficult task in a limited time.

1840. But would not permanent officers, as officially described, be entitled to a month's pay for every year of service on their retirement? If they were permanent officers in the proper sense of the term. I should like to look up these particular cases.

1841. Under section 60 of the Act they consider they are entitled to a month's pay for each year of permanent service, and to a fortnight's pay for each year of temporary service? I think it very clear they were not. I do not think they were contributors to the Superannuation Fund. The reasons I have given you show you how it was we put them in the other category. I quite admit it is open to argument. All I say is, we are doing our best under the circumstances. If we had opened our hands and scattered money broadcast we could have got rid of thousands of pounds.

1842. Mr. Travers Jones.] I see from a return that the Board retained a number of men over 60 years of age and up to 70 years of age? Yes.

1843. On what principle did you deal with these men? That is easily explained. Certain persons over the statutory age of 65 years were deemed desirable to be retained in the Service for their special aptitude for their work. Take the cases of Mr. Whittingdale Johnston and Mr. Addison, the Stipendiary Magistrates. They were both considerably over the age. In the case of judicial officers, if a man's intellect is clear, he obtains, as years go on, a great amount of experience in judicial matters. The experience a magistrate obtains is of immense value to the State. That is how it was that in some cases we did not exercise our right to advise that they should not be kept in the Service. There may have been some cases where it was not convenient for us to put any one in their places.

1844. Where you found the men were capable, you retained them? Yes, except in cases like this: Supposing there were two men in the Service equally capable, and we only wanted one of them. In that case we should probably retire the older man, because it is only common sense that we should keep the man who has many years of service for the State before him.

1845. Chairman.] I wish to ask you about the case of Mr. Dalway Bell, who seems to have filled various positions in the Government Service. Mr. Bell states that if he had been allowed to remain in the Service for four months and a few days longer, he would have become entitled to a pension. He also states that he applied for the statutory leave, which would have covered the period in question. He appears to have been bundled out, and to have had his application for leave ignored until seven weeks after he was dismissed. By being put out of the Service four months before reaching his pension age, he was denied a pension to which he had been a contributor? I cannot remember the exact case, but the principle is very clear. There are a number of cases of that kind.

1846. What principle do you act upon? The principle is laid down in the case. We have no right to say a man should be kept in the Service in order to get his pension. The law lays it down as clearly as possible what we had to do. Section 8 states:—

And if the Board shall at any time find that a greater number of persons is employed in any Department than it may determine to be necessary for the efficient working thereof, such persons as are in excess may (if practicable) be transferred to any other Department which, in the opinion of the Board, requires additional assistance; and if the persons so found to be in excess cannot be usefully and profitably employed in any other Department, their services shall be dispensed with, subject to the provisions of section sixty hereof.

That is the clear direction of Parliament to us. When we found a man, in regard to whom it was the interest of the State to retire, we had to retire him. If we had taken into account the question whether we should retain him a few months longer, we should have taken upon ourselves functions which Parliament never intended we should exercise. Parliament has clearly laid down the principle to guide us, namely, that we should only retain those persons who could be usefully employed. The clearest line of action was laid down, and we followed it most carefully.

J. Barling.
2 Nov., 1897.

1847. If an employee was entitled to leave, was it, in your view, the intention of the Act that he should be denied the leave which had accrued to him? I might as well correct that first statement of Mr. Bell. He was not entitled to leave. It is a mistake to suppose he was. The Civil Service Act of 1884 does not state that a man is entitled to extended leave. The Act sets forth that he can have his three weeks' leave each year, but with regard to the extended leave it only states that the Governor "may" grant it. It is never looked upon as a right.

1848. Is not this a case of accumulative leave? Only up to two months.

1849. Is that on the Regulation? No; under the Civil Service Act; but I do not think even cumulative leave will apply in a case like that. We go into an office, and we find a person in it whom it is not necessary to have there. We say that he must go, in order that we may reorganise the Department. If we gave that man leave of absence we could not reorganise. His place would be there, and we could not fill it up; it would be hung up. No reorganisation could be carried out under such a system.

1850. You say his place could not be filled up, but you were discussing just now the case of men who were to be dismissed because their services were not required;—there would be no place under such circumstances to fill up? I am speaking now generally. There are plenty of cases of that kind where it would be so.

1851. Mr. Bell's further grievance is that in calculating the retiring allowance he received, some ten years of service were taken off because he appears to have had some eight months' temporary work, which I assume you would classify as casual work? No; in that particular case he was off altogether for some time.

1852. Perhaps I had better quote his evidence. He stated that he thought he had a claim under the 60th section of the Act for ten years and eight months during which he was in the Service from April, 1867, to November, 1897, which have been knocked off his service altogether. The question was asked him, "Was there any reason given to you?" He answered, "No; in 1876 the House reduced the Distillery Staff, and I went out of office; I was employed temporarily, with the exception of four months." Then, on account of that break of four months, you disallow any claim for gratuity for the previous ten years and eight months? It is not we who disallow it, but the law which disallows it. The opinion of the Attorney-General states:—

Resignation does not cancel service so far as its computation in addition to a new period of service may be concerned; that is to say, the continuous service which is terminated by the retirement is the only service contemplated by the Act.

1853. Whose opinion are you quoting? Mr. Barton's. He goes on to say:—

The Board have not any discretionary power by which they can decide whether the circumstances seem to indicate that the broken periods may be allowed to count. Such a discretion cannot be gathered from any part of the Act by implication—I might also add, even by surmise.

It must, however, be remembered that the allowance of these broken periods has been frequent, and that there are cases in which its refusal now will be a hardship. I refer to cases of retirement before the intimation of the opinion now given. Where it has been the practice to allow the reckoning of these broken periods within reasonable limits, it appears to me that it would be almost harsh to enforce the view that I take of the law against those who have retired or who have been retired while such a practice of computation prevailed, and was probably in the contemplation of both parties, or at any rate of the officer who voluntarily retires, or of the Government in prescribing retirement.

1854. What is the date of that? December, 1893.

1855. There have been several decisions of the Attorney-General since then;—have they all been of the same character? Yes. We had one as late as 19th September, 1896, because we thought it as well to ask if there were any modifications in the new Act. Mr. Colquhoun says:—

I am of opinion that a previously terminated service cannot legally be taken into consideration in computing the period of service for a gratuity under the Act.

Therefore, it is not our action at all, but the action of the law.

1856. I understand you deny Mr. Bell's right to six months' leave of absence? Absolutely.

1857. Under what section? Under section 40 of the Civil Service Act of 1884, which states that the Governor "may" grant leave of absence.

1858. You are denying Mr. Bell's right to receive leave upon sections of the Act which have been repealed? Yes; but the Act is kept alive to a certain extent by the new Act with regard to the annual leave. I say that no right had accrued under the Civil Service Act.

1859. Does not the Public Service Act reserve to persons in the public employ all the rights accruing to them under the old Act? Yes; but there are no rights under that Act accruing in regard to prolonged leave. Section 40 states:—

The Governor may grant to any officer of twenty years' service, leave of absence not exceeding twelve months on half salary or six months on full salary; or of ten years' service, for any time not exceeding six months on half salary or three months on full salary.

1860. I suppose you admit in Bell's case the Governor might have granted him six months? Yes.

1861. He did not lose any right to receive it at the hands of the Governor by the passing of the new Act? No, i.e., if he were kept in the Service.

1862. Did he not apply for it? Probably, like a great many did; and it would absolutely have defeated the reorganisation of the Service if the application had been agreed to.

1863. He applied in July, 1896? I assume that is correct.

1864. And he was retired on the 1st of August? Yes.

1865. And it was not until the 21st October following that his leave was refused? Practically, there was no refusal or otherwise—he was out of the Service.

1866. It was sent to him as a matter of fact? He was, I suppose, told he could not have the leave. He was out of the Service.

1867. It would appear, then, that Mr. Bell, notwithstanding the fact that he had applied for leave which it was in the power of the Governor to grant under the 40th section of the Act, was nevertheless discharged from the Service without any reply being sent to him until afterwards? I do not know. I cannot remember the circumstances of the case, but I will look the point up. I do not think it has any real bearing on the case—that is, from our point of view.

MR. O'REILLY.

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Peter Herbert recalled and further examined:—

1868. Chairman.] I understand you desire to add to your evidence? I would like to hand in the following explanation of the figures I placed before the Committee:— P. Herbert.

In addition to the evidence already given, I wish to invite the attention of the Select Committee to the action of the Public Service Board in loading the abatement from the pension with interest, or, in fact, any other charge. The 55th section of the Civil Service Act of 1884 contains no authority to charge the abatement with interest.

In my case the abatement to defray the debt to the Superannuation Fund, computed on the period selected by the Board, viz., from the 24th August, 1866, amounts to £8 17s. 11d. For this period the Board claim £16 14s. 5d., the loading being £7 16s. 6d.

The various officers entrusted with the computing of the amount due to the Superannuation Fund do not appear to have had any rule or law to guide them, and to have worked on a "go-as-you-please principle," as for instance—

The Comptroller-General of Prisons states the amount due to be.....	£187 17 9
True amount as from 1st March, 1865.....	140 9 6	as per law.

The Select Committee, Public Service Board—Retiring Allowances and Gratuities.

P. HERBERT,

8/11/97.

17 Nov., 1897.

James William Holliman sworn and examined:—

1869. Chairman.] You are Secretary for the Public Service Board? Yes.

1870. How long have you held that position? Since the 1st of February of this year.

1871. Were you in the office of the Board prior to your appointment as Secretary? I was acting Secretary for three weeks before being permanently appointed. J. W. Holliman.

1872. Were you there during the time Mr. Lyne was Secretary? No.

1873. Have you charge of all the papers? Yes.

1874. Do you know the cases of those who have been retrenched from the Service? I have a general knowledge of most of the cases, and an intimate knowledge of many of them. I have brought a number of the papers with me, and I am prepared to obtain the papers of any other case to which as the Committee may desire. For instance, I have the papers relating to the case of Mr. J. M. Sheehan.

1875. Have you any papers relating to the case of Dr. Waugh? No. I have the papers connected with the cases of Messrs. Beauman, Burns, Connelly, Doyle, Little, McNamee, Quinn, Rush, and Mason, who were retired from the Postal Department.

1876. Take the case of Mason—I suppose you are acquainted with the case of the late William Mason? I have perused the papers.

1877. Are you acquainted with the case apart from a perusal of the papers? No.

1878. Was Mr. Mason a contributor to the Superannuation Fund? Yes.

1879. Is it a fact that his retirement had been arranged to take place from the 31st of July last? I understand that the Department proposed to retire him, but his retirement was not actually effected. He died before the necessary steps could be taken.

1880. Did he resign, or was it proposed to retire him? He was in very bad health, and there appeared to be no chance of his being restored to health. I understand the Department proposed to retire him on that account.

1881. Did he die whilst he was a member of the Service? Yes.

1882. Was not his widow entitled to a gratuity? She would only be entitled under section 51 of the Act of 1884, relating to necessitous circumstances.

1883. Are we to understand that the Board did not consider her to be in the necessitous circumstances referred to in section 51? She made application for a gratuity under that section, and in the usual course she was asked to submit a statement of the assets of her husband's estate. The statement she submitted showed that there were net assets of £460.

1884. What was the nature of those assets? There was a house in Surry Hills, and four allotments of land.

1885. Where were the four allotments of land? At Rookwood. The Board did not consider that her circumstances were such as could be taken to be necessitous within the meaning of the Act.

1886. Did the Board make that representation to the Governor? No; they answered her to that effect.

1887. Does not section 51 give the power to the Governor to do that which the Board has taken upon themselves the authority of doing? The Governor acts only upon recommendations made to him, and the cases are usually referred to the Board for that purpose.

1888. But I think section 51 does not say anything of that sort? Someone must advise the Governor.

1889. Did the Board send the matter on to the Governor? They did not. They did not consider it a case in which they would be justified in making a recommendation to the Governor under section 51.

1890. Is the house referred to under mortgage? The declaration does not state that it is.

1891. Is it not a fact that she had eight children to support? She says, "I have eight children. One of them is 22, one 21, one 19, one 18, one 14, one 12, one 12, and one 6." I presume some of those are supporting themselves.

1892. Do the papers in the possession of the Board disclose the fact that Mrs. Mason was too poor to obtain probate of her husband's will for more than twelve months after his death? As far as I can see the papers do not disclose the fact. Perhaps it would be as well if I stated the rule which the Board have laid down in cases of this kind. The maximum gratuity which is allowed under the section is an amount equal to six months' salary of the officer concerned. The rule which the Board have laid down is this: Supposing the assets are nil, they recommend the full gratuity; if the assets are less than the amount of the maximum gratuity, they usually recommend a grant of the difference. 1893.

J. W.
Holliman.
17 Nov., 1897.

1893. Mr. O'Reilly.] Then this asset represented more than what Mrs. Mason would be entitled to? Very much more. It is very difficult to determine what are necessitous circumstances. The Board consider that Parliament showed what it meant by the expression by limiting the gratuity to a sum not exceeding six months of the salary which the officer was receiving at the time of his death. If the widow had nothing, that is the limit she would get. That being the maximum amount, the Board take that as the view of Parliament, and in case of any provision being left to the widow short of that limit, they make it up to that limit.

1894. Mr. Perry.] How did they come to the conclusion that that was the view of Parliament? I cannot say what induced them to come to that view. I presume they arrived at that conclusion after a consideration of all the circumstances of the case. They found it necessary to lay down a rule for their guidance. The old Civil Service Board had a rule very similar to that adopted.

1895. Chairman.] Mrs. Mason says that after her husband's death she received a letter to say that the Government were pleased to accept his resignation, which was to take place on the 31st July, and, of course, he dead and buried then;—is that a fact? I cannot say, because that is a letter which would probably come from the Postal Department. It would not be sent by the Board. If he had resigned and addressed his resignation to the head of his Department, no doubt that would be the course which would be taken. The head of the Department would accept the resignation, but the papers do not show that any such action was taken. I notice that there is a letter from him addressed to the Deputy Postmaster-General, in which he says he wishes to be retired.

1896. That would be, retired on a pension? Exactly; retired under the provisions of the Civil Service Act. Unfortunately, he died in the meantime.

1897. Is it not a fact that arrangements were made for his retirement on the 31st of July? I cannot say without reference to the Postal Department. Apparently the Department did propose to retire him because of the fact that he was ill and he wished to retire, but, unfortunately for him and his family, he died before the retirement could be effected. In any case, if he had retired on a pension and he had died shortly afterwards, the pension would then have lapsed.

1898. Have you the papers connected with the case of Herbert Cyrus Roland Doyle? Yes.

1899. Is it a fact that in May, 1896, he was granted eight weeks' leave of absence, and that during the continuance of that leave of absence he was dismissed? Mr. Doyle was retired with a number of other officers in connection with the grading of the Postal Department. I understand that he was granted leave of absence. There was no dismissal; he was retired.

1900. Was he retired during the continuance of his leave? I believe he was on leave at the time he was retired, but I do not think the Board were aware of it. A number of retirements were determined upon for the purposes of economy and with a view to increasing the efficiency of the Department, and Mr. Doyle was one of the officers who had to go. The retirements were effected at a certain date, and it was afterwards brought to the notice of the Board that at the time of Mr. Doyle's retirement he was on leave of absence which had not expired—leave which had been granted by his Department.

1901. And has not Mr. Doyle claimed that he was not legally retired in consequence of having, practically, a contract with the Government until the end of his term of leave? So far as I understand, Mr. Doyle afterwards made a claim that he was entitled—first, to the balance of the eight weeks' leave, which was unexpired to the date of his retirement; and, further, to six months' leave of absence under the permissive clause of the Civil Service Act.

1902. Was he paid for the period between the date of his retirement and the expiry of the leave which had been granted to him by the Minister? I believe he was not.

1903. Has he not to this day maintained that, seeing that he was granted leave of absence by the Minister up to a certain date, he could not be legally retired by the Board prior to that date? I cannot say that he has. I cannot see from the papers that that attitude has been taken up.

1904. At least, he has taken up the attitude that he was entitled to salary to the end of his leave? Yes.

1905. Can you tell us why his claim has been refused? The Board take this view: That, as his retirement was approved by the Governor, and gazetted on the 31st July, that is conclusive evidence of his retirement, and that legally, much as they would have liked to have recommended payment of the salary to him, they had not the power to do so. I may state that had the leave been taken at the time it was granted—on the 8th May—it would have expired before the date of his retirement.

1906. Are we to understand that as far as you are aware the Board did not know that Mr. Doyle had leave of absence granted to him by the Minister? As far as I am aware they did not know it.

1907. Therefore, I suppose the necessary corollary is that when the Board's proposal for retirement came before the Cabinet the Minister of the Department must have overlooked the fact? I cannot say he overlooked it. It would be impossible for the head of a large Department to know which of his officers was on leave.

1908. Then there appears to be some mistake in this case? I can hardly say that.

1909. Is it not a fact that a paper has been minuted by the Minister to the effect that Mr. Doyle ought to be paid up to the date of the expiry of his leave? I daresay the Minister may have made such a minute. I know the Department were favourable to the payment.

1910. Mr. Doyle has paid £119 into the Superannuation Fund;—can you tell us what he has had out of it? He received a gratuity of £329 14s., together with a refund of contribution amounting to £118 12s. 3d., making a total of £448 6s. 3d.

1911. And has he given an acquittance of his claim on the Government in respect of these payments? I cannot say, but I know the Treasury do not make any payments without receiving a proper acquittance.

1912. You do not know the nature of the discharge? No.

1913. Would it be the duty of your Department, or the duty of the Treasury, to prepare the discharges? The duty of the Treasury.

1914. I suppose that you are not in a position to give evidence as to the nature of the acquittance or the discharge given by the recipients of any monetary consideration in the cases which have come before the Committee? You will have to get that information from the Treasury.

1915. I believe Mr. Doyle made an application for six months' leave of absence which would have placed him in a superior position as regards length of service, had it been granted;—what is the reason for refusing to grant the leave which appeared to have statutory authority? In no case did the Board recommend recommend any extended leave of absence in the case of officers retired for the purpose of retrenchment, as Mr. Doyle was. They held that there was no actual legal right to the six months' leave of absence to any officer under the old Act—that it was a permissive right which was only exercised in a few cases. 1916. Is that so? The old Act says that the Governor "may" grant—not that an officer shall have leave of absence.

1917. Is it not a fact that in almost every instance these leaves were granted? I do not think so.

1918. What has been the practice? I can only speak of my knowledge of the Public Works Department. I was there for thirteen years, and I only recollect four or five cases in which extended leave of absence was granted. It was not looked upon as a right by any means, but as a favour.

1919. Did not you get it yourself once? Yes.

1920. And has not Mr. Vernon got it? I understand he got leave of absence as part of the terms of his engagement—not because it was recommended by the Board; it did not come before them.

1921. What about Mr. Allmann? He got it from length of service.

1922. Chairman.] Was not Mr. Doyle entitled to it from length of service? No man is entitled to it.

1923. Have you not used the word "entitled" yourself? I use it in this sense—that the officer may be entitled to leave by length of service if the Governor sees fit, on the recommendation of the head of his Department, to allow him to have it.

1924. Do you know of any case in which it has been refused? The Board has refused to recommend it in any case like that of Mr. Doyle. They hold that the intention of the Public Service Act was that officers who were retired on the grading of the Departments were to receive gratuities, to be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue. If leave of absence had been granted to those officers whose length of service might be held to entitle them to it, it would have meant that the majority of them would have been taken over the period of twelve months during which the provision for gratuities was in force, and they would have been thrown on the Superannuation Fund—an already insolvent fund.

1925. Mr. Perry.] What has that to do with the Public Service Board if they were entitled to it? The Public Service Board took this view: First that it was not the intention of the Public Service Act that leave of absence should be granted in such cases—that if leave were granted no scheme of reorganisation could ever be carried out, because an officer on leave of absence practically holds his position. If leave had been granted in all such cases the whole reorganisation would have been hung up indefinitely.

1926. But have you not given officers leave of absence on full pay, their retirement to date from the expiry of that leave? Not that I am aware of.

1927. What about the Agent-General? He is not retired by the Public Service Board.

1928. Chairman.] Mr. Doyle says, "I received a quotation from the Board to the effect that the Board are of opinion that the law does not permit them to grant salaries for leave of absence to retrenched officers. To that I replied that they have already paid Mr. David Howell, of the Customs Department, up to the middle of November. If they could do that in his case, why not in mine";—do you know anything of the case of David Howell? There is a distinct difference between the two. Mr. Howell was granted six months' leave of absence by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Board, three months before his retirement was decided on.

1929. Why was the Governor's intervention sought in a matter of leave of absence? That was given under the old Act, which provides that on the recommendation of the authorities the Governor "may" grant leave. Mr. Doyle's leave was simply granted by the Minister. The Board held that in the case of Mr. Howell, his leave having been granted by the Governor, any subsequent action by the Governor as to the retirement could only take effect at the expiration of the leave already granted.

1930. In the case of Mr. Muir, of the Post Office stores department—is it a fact that the Board altered the date so as to benefit Mr. Muir, and to enable him to get a pension;—did they alter the date of his retirement by some three months, although he was discharged at the same time as Doyle? I have not the papers in Muir's case, but I know Muir is not in receipt of a pension. He obtained a gratuity the same as the other officers who were retired at the same time.

1931. Mr. Doyle's whole contention appears to be that he was not legally retired, in consequence of his being, at the time of retirement, under contract of a leave of absence by the Minister. I suppose you are not prepared to say anything upon the legal aspect of that case? No.

James Powell sworn and examined:—

1932. Chairman.] You are a member of the Public Service Board? A deputy member.

1933. For many years you were Collector of Customs? Yes.

1934. I want to ask you a question with reference to some of the persons who were employed in the Department, and whose names have been forwarded to you. With reference to David William Mead, for instance, he appears to have commenced his career as a tide-waiter, and after serving in that capacity for some six years, he appears to have been employed for another six years as acting locker, leaving the Service finally in July of last year. He was only paid for the days on which he actually discharged service;—was he required at the Custom House every morning? Yes.

1935. And to sign as being in attendance? Yes.

1936. Was he supposed to be in attendance at the Custom House during the day, in case he should be required? No, he need not have been. It would be to his own interest to remain, in case of any work coming in. There were so many on turn that they generally arranged it amongst themselves. So many would remain, and others would go away.

1937. They were paid per day, or per night if employed overtime? Yes.

1938. Were the acting lockers employed continuously? Not continuously—whenever their services might have been required.

1939. Mead states that he was employed for five or six years on continuous duty, being paid monthly at a daily rate of 10s. 6d.? That statement is not quite correct. He was employed as an assistant locker from December, 1884, to January, 1886. He was then employed from July, 1891, to November, 1894, and again from the 1st January, 1895, to the 2nd July, 1896.

1940. Was there a vacancy between 1886 and 1891? During that time he was acting as a tide-waiter. Of course, he was always a tide-waiter, but he went on to casual employment from 1886 to 1891. From

1891

J. W.
Holliman.
17 Nov., 1897.

J. Powell.
17 Nov., 1897.

- J. Powell. 1891 to 1894 he was employed, and also from the 1st January, 1895, to the 2nd July. You will be able to read between the lines and see that these men were required when there were alterations in the tariff; there was an extension in the tariff, and then extra men were required.
- 17 Nov., 1897. 1941. Then Mr. Mead was not employed continuously for some six years, but he was employed from time to time as circumstances offered, and between times he did occasional duty as a tide-waiter? Precisely; he was always paid from the Contingencies Vote. He was an old man, and entered the Service in 1884 at 55 years of age, and he was only dispensed with when the tariff was very much altered.
1942. Take the case of Mr. Beard, who is alleged to have received a gratuity;—was he a tide-waiter? He was an examining officer holding a high position comparatively.
1943. But he was at one time a tide-waiter? Yes.
1944. Did the gratuity granted to him cover the time from which he commenced as a tide-waiter? I think I may say it did not. He was not paid for any temporary service at all. He was only paid for his permanent service.
1945. Do you know whether Mr. Bruton was a tide-waiter? He was.
1946. Did he receive any gratuity? He had thirty years' permanent service, for which he was paid. He was not paid for any temporary service, but for thirty years' service out of a total service of thirty-one years and eleven months.
1947. But not for any time during which he acted as tide-waiter? No. I may say it was an act of charity in Mead's case to give him employment as an acting locker.
1948. With regard to the case of Robson—he appears first of all to have acted as a tide-waiter, and then as Chinese inspector;—what are the duties of a Chinese inspector? To look after the landing of Chinese, and to take care that they do not illegally leave the vessels whilst they are in port.
1949. Is that an intermittent occupation? No. He was appointed. He entered the Service in 1880, and on the 1st August, 1886, he was appointed assistant locker as a permanent officer. On the 14th March, 1893, he was disrated by the Executive Government to the position of a tide-waiter, it having been reported that he was of intemperate habits and unfit for any service involving accuracy or discretionary conduct. He was acting as Chinese inspector during the early part of his time.
1950. What was the date on which he was disrated? On the 14th March, 1893.
1951. Was he called upon to show cause? He must have been, because he was removed by the Executive.
1952. Compensation has been refused him on the ground that he was a casual employee? He was allowed to return after his removal by the Executive;—is he asking for compensation for that time?
1953. He considers himself entitled to a fortnight's pay for every year of temporary service, and a month's pay for every year of permanent service, and a refund of his superannuation payments? He was a casual officer from the time he was removed by the Executive.
1954. Can you tell the Committee how the classification of "casuals" has turned up;—is there anything in the Act which provides for casuals? It has only very lately come about. I have only known of it during the past six months.
1955. Then this classification of "casuals" is a new thing? It is not exactly a classification. I think it is to be found in the memorandum which was forwarded to the Treasurer by the Public Service Board, in which they speak of these men as casual employees?
1956. Have you a copy of the minute? I think a copy has been handed in to you by Mr. Barling. The term used by the Board of Customs in England—and I have also met with it in South Australia—in reference to these officers is that they are called "Glut" officers. That is to say, they are redundant officers.
1957. Mr. O'Reilly.] We clearly understand that it was simply as a matter of retrenchment that he was retired; or were you influenced in any way by his character? He was removed from the tide-list simply because of his character.
1958. Chairman.] He was first of all retired from his permanent position on account of his character, but he was allowed to come in on the tide-list subsequently? Yes.
1959. Was his final removal from the Service on account of retrenchment or character? It could not be retrenchment, because they were only paid by the day. When the Public Service Board dealt with the Department Robson's name was omitted from the tide-list.
1960. Mr. Travers Jones.] Had his previous character anything to do with the omission of his name? I had to do with the recommendations, and I could not recommend him again. I may state that in the first instance I did not recommend him; he was sent to me for employment.
1961. Do you know anything of the case of Mr. Dalway Bell? Yes.
1962. I believe he was paid a gratuity and refused a pension? He took a gratuity. I do not know that he was refused a pension. I presume he was not entitled to it.
1963. If he had been allowed to remain in the Department a little longer would he not have become entitled to a pension? That might have been so.
1964. Was he in the Service twenty-nine years and eight months? His permanent service is put down as eighteen years and nine months—from the 1st November, 1877, to 31st July, 1896.
1965. Does that include his service in the Post and Telegraph Department? That includes his service in connection with the Customs and the Distilleries.
1966. But that does not include his service in connection with the Post and Telegraph Department? That was prior.
1967. But not included? Not included.
1968. Can you give any reason why it was not included? There were breaks in his service.
1969. Through any fault of his own? I cannot say.
1970. Then you are not in a position to say what the total length of his service was? I can only say, from the Public Service Board and the Superannuation Fund point of view, that it is eighteen years.
1971. You are not in a position to deny his sworn statement that the total period of his service was twenty-nine years and eight months? I am not prepared to say that. I only know it was not continuous service. He entered on the 1st June, 1873. He had a temporary service from the 7th September, 1876, to the 31st October, 1877.
1972. That evidently does not include the period during which he was in the Postal Department? No.
1973. That was a period antecedent to 1873? Yes, antecedent to 1877.
1974. Mr. Bell states that he was in the Service from March, 1867, to November, 1877, "which they knocked off my service altogether"? I know he had temporary service in 1876 and 1877. 1975.

1975. But I am dealing with 1867? In 1867 he was evidently in the Department. He was at Morpeth. He is not allowed for that. J. Powell.
1976. Then the dates antecedent to 1873 you exclude altogether? I exclude everything prior to 1877. That is in accordance with the Act and the opinion of the Crown Law Officers. 17 Nov., 1897.
1977. Why? On account of the period during which he was temporarily employed.
1978. Was not he entitled to a gratuity in respect of that temporary employment? No, because it was not continuous.
1979. What were the breaks? I cannot give them; I have not the papers, but there were some.
1980. He says, "I was temporarily employed with the exception of four months? Does he particularise the four months?"
1981. Altogether from 1867—that is the statement? There is a break in Mr. Bell's service from the 27th September, 1877. His service before that date was not admitted by the Board.
1982. Has his service been continuous since 1877? Apparently.
1983. What was the nature of the break? One of the reasons of his going out of active service for a time was the reduction of the distillery staff. That was a reason. Twice he left on that ground.
1984. Through no fault of his own? May I read his own statement?—On the 5th March, 1867, he was appointed telegraph master at Matta, at a salary of £105 per annum; on the 3rd July he was promoted to Morpeth, at a salary of £150. In 1869 he was appointed postmaster, in conjunction with telegraphs. On the 4th December, 1871, he was removed to Muswellbrook, and performed the duties until the 17th May, 1873, when he was appointed a distillery inspector. On the 5th February, 1874, he was sent to the Clarence River. On the 14th July, 1874, he was appointed by commission an officer of Customs. In 1876 the distillery staff was reduced by a vote of Parliament. On the 7th December, 1876, he left the Department. He still held his commission. That commission was not revoked until he was retired in July, 1896. From the 8th September, 1876, to the 2nd September, 1877, he was employed by the Distillery Department, doing temporary work. On 2nd November, 1877, he was appointed Customs locker.
1985. Then he has received no consideration in the way of gratuity for the temporary services which you have just named? No.
1986. Why? Because of the interpretation of the Acts by the Crown Solicitor.
1987. Evidently, prior to the temporary service, he was a permanent officer? Yes.
1988. Then he was temporarily engaged, and eventually became a permanent officer again? Yes.
1989. Are we to understand that the law is so read that the fact of a permanent officer doing temporary duty disqualifies him from receiving any allowance as a temporary officer;—I take it from your evidence that the doing of temporary work is regarded as a break of service? I do not think you have put it as you mean it, because a temporary officer could not be doing permanent duty, and a permanent officer could not be doing temporary duty.
1990. It seems that Mr. Bell was at one time a permanent officer; he ceased to be a permanent officer and did temporary work; after that he became a permanent officer again? He had a break of four months, by his own showing even, doing temporary work.
1991. Is it on account of that four months' break that you deem he is not entitled to any more consideration than he has received? I do not deem it at all. It is the reading of the Act by the Crown Solicitor.
1992. It comes back to the question I have put to you,—that on account of a man who has been a permanent officer up to a given date ceasing to be a permanent officer and doing temporary work, and coming on again to do permanent work, that period of temporary employment is reckoned as a break in his service, disentitling him to consideration for his former permanent service? That is exactly the case as put by the law officers.
1993. Was it through any fault of his own that he became a temporary officer? Altogether apart from that, if he is a temporary officer it is fatal to him.
1994. How did the four months' break come in? I cannot say, unless the Distillery Department suspended operations for a time, and he was not required.
1995. Are we to understand that the law authorities read the Act so that a man who has been at one time a permanent officer, and subsequently becomes a permanent officer, and does temporary work between those periods of permanent service, is not entitled to any gratuity in respect of that temporary service? When I had the pleasure of sitting with you as a member of the old Board, that was the opinion given by Mr. Barton. I know some of the members of that Board were of opinion that the whole of a man's permanent service, even though there should be breaks, should be counted to his benefit.
1996. But I am now asking you a question with reference to the Public Service Act which provides allowances for temporary as well as permanent officers. This man at one time was a permanent officer. He ceased to be a permanent officer, and became a permanent officer again, meanwhile doing temporary work. He is refused any gratuity in respect of that temporary work? That is so, because there was a break in service.
1997. Mr. Travers Jones.] And that might happen to any officer? It has happened to many of them, and they have my very hearty sympathy.
1998. It is a cruel interpretation of the Act? We are bound by it.
1999. Chairman.] Did Mr. Bell apply for leave of absence, so that he might reach the pension age? I do not know.
2000. Have you any knowledge of his holiday leave application? I do not think it will be with the papers. He would apply to the Treasury for leave.
2001. Would not leave of that kind come before the Board? An extended period like that would be referred to the Board, but I do not see it amongst the papers.
2002. Do you know anything of the case of an old tide-waiter named Joseph Matthews? Yes. In the first instance he was employed as a tide-waiter. Afterwards he became a night-watchman. As a night-watchman he was a permanent officer for a time.
2003. After that he became a locker? He was employed, from being a tide-waiter, as a locker. He resigned as a night-watchman and returned to the tide-list, and was put on to act as a locker.
2004. It seems that he was sent with a letter to you and you appointed him as locker? I found work for him. The word "appointment" carries with it official sanction, which I had not.
2005. He says in his evidence that as acting locker he was paid at the end of every month. He was paid during

J. Powell. during short periods of illness or holidays, and he did not lose a day in ten years ;—do you think that would be an accurate statement? It is quite accurate; but it differs in no way from his employment as a tide-waiter.

17 Nov., 1897.

2006. Still, during the ten years he acted as locker, he was in continuous employment ;—as a matter of fact, he was paid for continuous work? He was first appointed as a tide-waiter on the 6th July, 1876. He was then 59 years of age. He was suspended from duty from the 31st January to the 28th February, 1877. He was then employed as a night-watchman—there was nothing against his character in any way. From 1st September, 1884, to 1896 he returned to the tide-list. You will see at that time—1884—he was 67 years of age, and out of consideration for the man I got him the place as night-watchman. Then he resigned that and went back to the tide-list. He found that the night-work did not agree with him. I found work for him as an assistant locker until the tariff changes in 1896. He was then removed on the ground of age and deafness.

2007. Then for ten years he was acting as an assistant locker? Yes.

2008. The point I want to get at is whether he received payment for regular service during those ten years? I think he received 10s. 6d. a day during the whole of that time.

2009. He was paid monthly? As a tide-waiter. They were all paid monthly. The Auditor-General's statement is that he was paid 10s. 6d. a day when employed.

2010. Was he employed the whole of the time or not? He was employed from 1877 to 1896.

2011. Then his statement that during a period of ten years he rendered continuous service you do not challenge? No.

2012. But as he was classified as a tide-waiter, and as the Board have classified tide-waiters as casuals, he has been refused any allowance? I do not think the Board have classed them as casuals.

2013. Put it in your own way? I think the word "casual" is offensive to a man; they do not like it. It is casual employment.

2014. Is it not a fact that the Board have practically called these people "casuals"? No.

2015. How have they classified them? As tide-waiters. If you talk about casuals you connect them with workhouses.

2016. As he was, notwithstanding his work as assistant locker, classified as a tide-waiter, he has been refused a gratuity? It was because he was not an appointed officer.

2017. Appointed by whom? By the Governor and Executive Council.

2018. Are there not many persons in the Government employ designated as temporary officers who have not been appointed by the Governor-in-Council? Yes; there are officers appointed by Ministers and gazetted.

2019. The tide-waiters were not appointed by Ministers? In some instances they were, but they are not gazetted officers.

2020. But temporary officers are not gazetted officers? Some of them are; I think you will find them named in the Act of 1884.

2021. Did the names of the tide-waiters, when acting as lockers, appear in the Blue Book? No.

2022. Notwithstanding that they were doing duty for such lengthened periods? No; they were only paid from the tide-waiters' vote. Their names never appeared in any abstract or paper except the pay-sheets. Of course this matter has been referred to the Government, and if they think fit to allow these men for the time they were temporarily employed, I am sure we shall all be very glad to know it. But we think we have no power to deal with them under the Act.

2023. The minute which has been referred to deals with the question as to how these persons so employed came to be considered by the Board as being more or less outside the provisions of the statute? Yes.

2024. Mr. Travers Jones.] Did you employ any one yourself? Not without the Treasurer's sanction.

2025. How were they classified? They were all temporary men.

2026. There is no such classification as "casual"? No.

2027. Chairman.] It comes to this: That had these lockers been appointed by the Treasurer of the day instead of by you, with the sanction of the Treasurer of the day, their position under the Act would have been different? It would have been the same.

2028. Seeing that Matthews and others, who have discharged the duties of lockers or assistant lockers whilst nominally on the tide-waiters' list, have been appointed with the knowledge and approbation of the Minister, does not their claim to consideration as temporary officers, so far as relates to the method of their appointment, stand very much in the same position as that of persons who have been appointed with direct Ministerial authority? I think we have said that in the minute of 21st April, 1897.

TUESDAY, 23 NOVEMBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE,

MR. PERRY.

MR. JESSEP,

JOHN CASH NEILD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

James Powell recalled and further examined:—

J. Powell. 2029. Chairman.] Did you appoint Mr. Byron Belmore Thomas as a tide-waiter? No; he was appointed by Mr. See, Colonial Treasurer, on 10th August, 1892.

23 Nov., 1897.

2030. Was he in June, 1893, appointed to act as a clerk in the warehousekeeper's room? I put him there to assist in the work when there was a change in tariff matters.

2031. When he became a clerk I suppose he had continuous work, and not intermittent work as a tide-waiter? He was always a tide-waiter.

2032. At the same time he was paid monthly? He was paid as all other tide-waiters are paid—on the monthly abstract.

2033. Was he not classified as a tide-waiter, although not doing tide-waiter's work? He was doing any work which a tide-waiter might be found fit for. He was a kind of extra man, who might be put on to any work.

2034. Are we to understand that tide-waiters are not necessarily persons doing tide-waiter's work, but persons employed temporarily in any duty which may be required of them in the Customs Department? A tide-waiter may be put to any work; he may be an assistant locker or an assistant clerk, or do any work he is found fit for. J. Powell.
23 Nov., 1897.
2035. Then he is not necessarily engaged in discharging ships? No.
2036. Has that been the rule of the Department? All through. They do all kinds of work.
2037. And doing work of that character, the Public Service Board have not graded them as temporary officers? No; they are not graded at all.
2038. Have they been treated as casual employees? Treated as extra tide-waiters.
2039. But have they not been casual employees when the Public Service Board have dealt with them in reference to retiring allowances? The Secretary's letter says, "They are considered as casual employees."
2040. What letter is that? The letter of the 10th March, addressed by the Secretary of the Public Service Board to the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.
2041. Mr. Thomas states that he was informed by the Board that the position of a tide-waiter was a casual labourer's position? I suppose I may not say anything about his character. I have read his evidence, and it is a tissue of shameful lies.
2042. Have you had supplied to you a copy of Mr. Thomas's evidence? I have seen a copy of it.
2043. Have you been supplied with a copy? No.
2044. May I ask you how it came under your notice? I do not think I can answer that; I saw it.
2045. Do you decline to say how you received it? I do not think I should say how I received it. I only know I saw it.
2046. Do you decline to say under what circumstances you saw it? I know the circumstances under which I saw it.
2047. Do you decline to describe the circumstances? If I describe the circumstances you will be no wiser. I saw it in a certain place.
2048. Under the circumstances, I must ask you where you saw it? I saw it in my office in Young-street.
2049. Did you apply for a copy? No.
2050. How did you come to receive it? Really, I cannot tell you. I only know I saw it.
2051. Mr. Hoque.] Did you seek for a copy of it? No; I never sought for it. It was purely an accidental circumstance that I saw it.
2052. At any rate, you read it? Yes.
2053. And you describe the evidence as false from beginning to end? Yes; shamefully false.
2054. Chairman.] What part of the evidence do you refer to? I will take it question by question. Take Question 964, to begin with.
2055. That is a question in the answer to which Thomas states that in June, 1893, he was appointed to act as clerk in the warehouse-keeper's room? The answer is that he never was appointed as a clerk. He was a tide-waiter only, acting as a clerk.
2056. That is only a difference of terms? Then take Questions 985 or 988—
2057. What about Question 985? The question was, "Has the work you were doing still to be done?" The answer was, "Yes."
2058. Do you say the work is not required? No; the abolition of the ad valorem duties rendered his work unnecessary.
2059. What about Question 988, which is as follows:—
- When you were in the Service the work was discharged, I believe, by Mr. Harker, at £265, and yourself at £160 6s. 6d. per annum, making a total of two officers whose salaries amounted to £435 6s. 6d.; since you were retired the work has been rearranged, and is now discharged by Mr. Trouton at £200 a year, Mr. Woods at £150, and Mr. Hill at £100, making a total of three officers whose salaries are £454 per annum? Yes.
- ? That is absolutely untrue. Mr. Trouton had £200, does Harker's former work, effecting a saving of £58 10s. per annum. Thomas's late work is done by Brown and Hill. Woods is a locker, and is occasionally employed on clerical work indoors. His duties are chiefly at the Bond. That has nothing whatever to do with any of Thomas's late work.
2060. Mr. Perry.] What do Brown and Hill do? They are clerks in the office.
2061. Are there three men where there were formerly two? Trouton, at £200, does Harker's work. Thomas's late work is done by Brown and Hill. It is distributed between the two. There are not two more clerks.
2062. Mr. Jessep.] Are those two clerks tide-waiters also? No; they are permanent clerks.
2063. I understand, then, that they do other work besides that which was done by Thomas? Yes; and do Thomas's work as well.
2064. As a matter of fact, his work is divided between the two? Yes.
2065. Chairman.] When Thomas was in the employ of the Department, did he discharge his duties satisfactorily? He did his work very well indeed.
2066. You say his evidence is absolutely false and unreliable? I do. There are about twenty questions to which I have replies—not replies of my own, but of the officer of the Department under whom he was placed.
2067. Mr. Jessep.] I presume the officer in question also had access to the sworn evidence? He saw it with me.
2068. Did he, in consequence of having seen the evidence, prepare the answers? Yes; in one part of his evidence, Thomas says he can do the whole of the work of the place with a man and a boy.
2069. Have you an answer prepared to the statement made in connection with Question 995? Yes. The question was—

Did Mr. Trouton pass an examination? No; I do not think he did. He tried four times, and I think he gave it up as a bad job.

The answer to that is, that Trouton failed once in March, 1894, but he passed well in every subject in June, 1894—three months afterwards. Thomas failed in 1892, and passed in 1893.

J. Powell. 2070. There are some very grievous charges made in connection with Questions 999 and 1000, which are as follow :—

23 Nov., 1897.

And Mr. Hill? He passed the junior examination with honors. I consider I am entitled to a gratuity. I was forced out of the Department to make way for men who had embezzled money from monetary institutions here. The position I ought to have had in the Land Tax Department is now filled by a liberated criminal, or a man who embezzled money out of one of the monetary institutions here. There is a man there who embezzled some hundreds of pounds, and he is now drawing at least £200 a year from the Department, with overtime.

Mr. Perry.] Have you any objections to give the name? I will ask my solicitor whether it is advisable. Another man there has served five years in gaol. Another was a co-respondent in a divorce suit, and another is a wife-beater. These men could get positions, but I, with a wife and two children, was turned into the street.

? That is a matter which ought to be answered; but it is in the Land Tax Department, and I had nothing to do with it.

[Witness withdrew.]

John William Holliman recalled and further examined :—

J. W.
Holliman.
23 Nov., 1897.

2071. Chairman.] Have you seen a copy of the evidence of Mr. Byron Belmore Thomas? Yes, I have.

2072. Was it in a printed form, or was it type-written? In a printed form.

2073. Mr. Thomas was examined on two occasions, the 7th and the 12th October;—did you see the evidence he gave on each of those occasions? Yes.

2074. Did you see the evidence of any of the other witnesses? Yes; I saw the evidence of some others.

2075. I suppose, as a matter of fact, you have seen the whole of the evidence? I do not know that I have seen the whole of it. I saw some.

2076. How many witnesses' evidence did you see? I could not say. I did not take much notice. There were several witnesses.

2077. Mr. Jessep.] Did you see the evidence of Mead and Robson? Yes; I think that evidence was part of it.

2078. Chairman.] Did you see the evidence of Mr. Sheehan? Yes.

2079. And Mr. Greville's evidence? I do not remember.

2080. And of Mr. Francis Oakes Byrnes? Yes.

2081. And the evidence of Mr. Edwin Rupert Pope? Yes.

2082. Did you see the evidence of Mr. John Lynn Little, of the Post Office? I think so.

2083. And of Mr. Edward Quinn, letter-carrier? I do not remember.

2084. Under what circumstances did this evidence come into your hands? A copy was shown to me in confidence.

2085. By whom? I am not at liberty to say. It was shown to me in strict confidence, and I must respectfully decline to say who showed it to me.

2086. Do you understand that the evidence is strictly the property of the Committee? I did not know that the evidence was of a confidential character; in fact, I expected for some time that the Board would receive a copy of it.

2087. Mr. Jessep.] As a matter of fact, have you not been supplied with it? No. I was shown a copy in confidence.

2088. Mr. Hogue.] You have heard the evidence given by Mr. Powell to the effect that a copy of some evidence was placed before him and that he saw it? Yes.

2089. Chairman.] I would draw your attention to Standing Order 367 of the Legislative Assembly, and will explain to you that the Standing Orders of Parliament, having received the indorsement or assent of His Excellency the Governor, have the full force of the ordinary law of the Colony. The Standing Order is in these words :—

The evidence taken by any Select Committee of the House, and documents presented to such Committee which have not been reported to the House, shall not be disclosed or published by any Member of such Committee or by any other person.

I have asked you the name of the person who showed you this evidence. You have admitted having seen the evidence of a number of persons, showing plainly that the bulk, if not the whole, of the evidence taken before the Committee must in some form or other have been in your office. I wish to draw your attention to section 7 of the Parliamentary Evidence Act :—

If any witness so summoned or attending to give evidence shall refuse to answer any lawful question during his examination he shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of Parliament, and may be forthwith committed for such offence into the custody of the Usher of the Black Rod or Sergeant-at-Arms, and, if the House so order, to gaol, for any period not exceeding one calendar month, by warrant under the hand of the President or Speaker, as the case may be. Such warrant shall be a sufficient authority for all gaolers and other officers to hold the body of the person therein named for the term therein stated, and no person acting under the authority of this section shall incur any liability, civil or criminal, for such act.

I ask you, having heard that read, for the name of the person who showed you the copy of the printed evidence taken before the Committee? [No answer.]

2090. Mr. Hogue.] It seems that whoever gave Mr. Holliman the information gave it to him in confidence? It was in confidence.

2091. There may be occasions, however, on which a man is not obliged to maintain confidence? I would not like to answer the question which has been asked me without consulting the person who gave the evidence to me.

2092. Chairman.] I have not asked you the question. I have already put in the form of a threat; but I have explained to you the legal conditions of the case, and I now simply repeat the question as to whether you are or are not prepared to give the name of the person who showed you the printed evidence referred to? I must respectfully decline to do so, until I have consulted with the person in question.

2093. Mr. Perry.] Knowing what you do with reference to evidence, cannot you see that the whole of the ten members of the Committee, as well as the officers of Parliament, and the Government Printing Office staff are lying under the suspicion of having divulged the evidence? Would the Committee allow me a little time to consider the matter? I should like the Committee to understand that at the time I saw the evidence I was not aware that I was guilty of any impropriety.

2094. Chairman.] I do not say now that you are guilty of any impropriety? I certainly was not aware of the Standing Order of which you speak. I have been accustomed to see evidence of Select Committees and of Parliamentary Standing Committees. You can easily understand, seeing that the evidence was shown to me in confidence, that I feel myself in a very delicate position.

J. W.
Holliman.
23 Nov., 1897.

[Witness withdrew.]

James Powell recalled and further examined:—

2095. Chairman.] The Committee having deliberated, I have to ask your attention to Standing Order 367 of the Legislative Assembly. I have no doubt that, with your large knowledge of public and official affairs, you are aware that Standing Orders of the Assembly, approved of by the Governor, have the full force of law. The Standing Order in question is as follows:—

J. Powell.
23 Nov., 1897.

The evidence taken by any Select Committee of the House, and documents presented to such Committee which have not been reported to the House, shall not be disclosed or published by any such member of such Committee, or by any other person.

The Committee understand that a considerable portion, at any rate, of the evidence taken has been in the office of the Public Service Board. Under the circumstances, members of the Committee, officers of Parliament, and the staff of the Government Printing Office are, to a certain extent, implicated in an unlawful disclosure of the evidence. It therefore becomes my duty to ask you from whom or through whom you received the evidence? What penalties am I subject to?

2096. I have asked you a question? I do not come here to discuss points of order.

2097. I have asked you the question, through whom or from whom you received a copy of the evidence which you say came into your hands? What evidence?

2098. The printed evidence of this Committee? Which evidence?

2099. The evidence, for instance, given by Mr. Byron Belmore Thomas? I received it under cover.

2100. Do you know by whom it was sent to you? I can suppose; I do not know. I do not want to shelter myself in any way. I do not think I ought to give it, and I decidedly will not give it, whatever the penalties may be, even if I have to go to Darlinghurst Gaol.

2101. You will not give what? The answer you require. I consider the evidence you refer to is a tissue of falsehoods. If you garble what I say I will get up and withdraw.

2102. I ask you to withdraw the expression about garbling or to leave the room? I will leave the room and not come here again. I am not here to be insulted by any man.

2103. I want to know the source of the information which has reached your hands, and your answer is that you decline to state it? Yes; but you went beyond that. I asked you what penalties I was subject to.

2104. I have asked you how the evidence came into your hands;—did it not come to you unlawfully? I do not say it did.

2105. Mr. Jessep.] Apart from Mr. Thomas's evidence, did you receive on any previous or subsequent occasion copies of evidence taken in connection with this Select Committee? I received evidence once, and once only.

2106. Is Mr. Thomas's evidence the only evidence you received? I would rather not answer that.

2107. If it were sent to you under cover on one occasion, copies of other evidence might possibly have been sent to you under cover? I received a copy of evidence on one occasion.

2108. Apart from this particular instance? I had rather not answer that question.

2109. I want to know whether you received any other evidence at any other time in a similar way? I received the evidence of every man connected with the Customs House, and I prepared my answers on that evidence?

2110. And you received that evidence under cover? Yes.

2111. Chairman.] I want you to see that you are perfectly wrong in supposing that anyone has threatened you in any shape or form, or that there is the smallest attempt to garble your evidence? Not my evidence, but my statement.

2112. The Committee will not proceed with any further evidence this afternoon, and in order that you may not have any excuse for supposing that you have been threatened, I shall not draw your attention to the 7th section of the Parliamentary Evidence Act, but I will ask you, after you get back to your office, to look it up. Kindly read it? I shall not read it. I consider the evidence came to me under a bond of secrecy, and no power on earth will ever induce me to divulge what you ask.

John William Holliman recalled and further examined:—

2113. Chairman.] Having had time to consider the matter, are you prepared to disclose the source from which you obtained or saw the evidence taken by the Committee? If the Committee will kindly allow me—considering the very awkward circumstances in which I am placed—to consult the person who showed it to me, I will, if he has no objection, give his name on the next sitting day.

J. W.
Holliman.
23 Nov., 1897.

2114. I take it that you are not on the present occasion prepared to disclose the name? As a matter of honor I do not feel that I can do so. I was not aware of the Standing Order which provides that the evidence is confidential. Possibly the person who showed it to me was not aware of it. I feel under the circumstances, that, as a matter of honor, I cannot disclose the name to-day.

2115. Mr. Jessep.] Did you receive this communication officially, under cover? No, it came to me in an envelope without any accompanying letter; but I have an idea from whom it came.

2116. Mr. Hogue.] Could you say positively? I could not.

2117. Are you not able to swear as to whom it came from? Positively I could not swear whom it came from.

2118. Then whom do you propose to consult? The person who, I believe, sent it to me.

2119. You were going to consult somebody? A gentleman spoke to me about the evidence, and afterwards I received a copy of it under cover. I do not know where it came from. But I coupled it with the conversation I had with him. Therefore, I thought it must have come from him.

2120. Will you swear that you know from whom it came? No, I cannot. Of course, I have a strong impression, but as a matter of fact I cannot swear whom it came from.

2121.

J. W.
Holliman.
23 Nov., 1897.

2121. Chairman.] You say the evidence reached you in a blank envelope—addressed to you? Yes.
 2122. I suppose you recognised the handwriting? I do not know that I looked at it particularly.
 2123. Mr. Perry.] Did you speak to more than one person with reference to getting a copy of the evidence? I did not ask for a copy.
 2124. Did you have a conversation with anyone else? I do not remember more than one person.
 2125. And that person suggested that he should send you the evidence? I think he asked me if I would like to see a copy, and I afterwards received a copy of the evidence from some quarter, and I coupled its receipt with that conversation, but I could not swear it came from that person; it is possible he may have sent it to me.
 2126. Some person asked you if you would like to see a copy of the evidence taken before the Select Committee? I could not give the exact words. We had a conversation about it.
 2127. But it amounted to that? Practically, it did.
 2128. And subsequently some person sent you a copy? A copy of some portion of the evidence. I do not know whether all came.
 2129. Mr. Perry.] What date was this? Some weeks back.
 2130. Mr. Jessep.] Have you received copies of evidence of other Select Committees whilst such Committees were in progress? No.
 2131. Chairman.] What have you done with the copy you have received? I have it now.
 2132. Did you show it to anyone? I showed it to Mr. Powell.
 2133. Mr. Powell's evidence is that he had copies sent to him direct? He may have had.
 2134. Mr. Hogue.] Yours, as a matter of fact, was addressed to you? Yes.
 2135. To you personally, or as Secretary to the Board? As Secretary, I presume, but I did not notice the cover much.

WEDNESDAY, 24 NOVEMBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. GRIFFITH,	MR. JESSEP,
MR. LYNE,	MR. PERRY,
MR. O'REILLY.

JOHN CASH NEILD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Dowell Philip O'Reilly sworn and examined:—

D. P.
O'Reilly.
24 Nov., 1897.

2136. Chairman.] You are a Member of Parliament for Parramatta, and a member of this Select Committee? Yes.
 2137. Are you willing to give evidence before the Committee? Yes.
 2138. I believe you received a letter asking you to attend to-day? Yes.
 2139. A report has appeared in the Daily Telegraph of a speech alleged to have been delivered by you, in which you make reference to the proceedings of the Committee. It is in reference to that report that I wish to ask you a question. You are reported to have said:—

Speaking as a member of the Select Committee appointed to hear grievances of disgraced or dismissed civil servants, he was more than ever convinced by the characters of the aggrieved persons that the Government had done the right and proper thing to the country.

All I want to ask is whether those words fairly represent the substance of what you said with reference to the proceedings of the Committee, and will you let me, in all friendship, add that this question has to be viewed in the light of the fact that the inquiry was still proceeding? Just so. I fully understand the immense gravity of the position—I mean, gathering it from the tone of your voice—and I may say at once that I spoke for two hours in Parramatta, and it stands to reason that any brief report of this sort must be very imperfect, and to a certain extent garbled. I distinctly remember saying that it would be out of place for me to publicly go into details of a matter which had not been placed before the House; but I can say frankly that this report does not convey exactly what I said, and intended to say, to that public meeting. I may say that, as a member of the Committee, I wish to make a statement out of courtesy to you, as Chairman, and to the members of the Committee. I was about to say, when we launched out upon the question of the public meeting at Parramatta, that I was not in town yesterday. I very much regret that I was not at the meeting of this Committee, and subsequently in the Legislative Assembly, because then I could have thrown some light upon what was obviously an error of judgment, and a mistake upon my part. I was not aware of the 367th Standing Order at the time, and I daresay older politicians than myself are not acquainted with all the Standing Orders. When this Committee first met I felt that it was an injustice that the other side should not know the charges which were being made against them, and, utterly unsolicited by anyone, I voluntarily forwarded to the Secretary of the Public Service Board my copies of the evidence as soon as I had read them. I did that solely because I wanted the Board to have what you, Mr. Chairman, and every member of the Committee wishes to have, fair play. I wanted it to have the same fair play that I believe was accorded to the honorable member for The Hume, Mr. Lyne, who is a member of this Select Committee, when charges, which I am glad to remind the Committee were utterly unsubstantiated and unproved, were made against him with reference to the Woolloomooloo Bay resumptions. On that occasion Mr. Lyne was allowed, and very properly allowed—and he availed himself of the privilege—to attend the Select Committee and hear the evidence which was brought against him.

2140. Mr. Lyne.] I asked permission—through the House—to attend the Committee, and it was granted? And properly granted too; and I only wished to place the Public Service Board in the same position to this Committee that Mr. Lyne, by that concession, was placed in with regard to the Select Committee inquiring into the alleged short-comings on his part. I am so convinced that, however much I may have transgressed the letter of the law, I was in accord with the spirit of it, that I proposed to move, and I am quite sure the Committee will be with me, having the same wish for fair play which must actuate any judicial body of Parliament, that at all future meetings of the Select Committee a representative of the Public Service Board be allowed to be present. I feel quite sure that, neither you, Mr. Chairman, nor any member of this Committee will object to a proposal which is so obviously in the interests of justice.

Joseph

Joseph Barling recalled and further examined :—

2141. Chairman.] From what transpired yesterday some of the members of the Committee are under the impression that you, and the other members of the Public Service Board, must be aware that it would be quite within the proprieties for the Board to be represented at sittings of this Committee, and the taking of evidence. If such be the case, and you desire to have a representative present—either one of your own number, your Secretary, or a legal representative—upon preparing the customary short form of application to the Assembly for such permission, either myself or any other member of the Committee or Member of Parliament would be very pleased to obtain from the House the authority to allow such representative to be here? I thank you for your remarks. I may say that as far as I am aware, we have not discussed that particular feature of the case. Certainly we have no desire to be represented by counsel, but we do think we should have had a copy of the evidence supplied to us. Being parties in the matter, we thought a copy of the evidence would have been supplied to us as a matter of course.

2142. Mr. Griffith.] But that is contrary to the Act? We looked at the matter in this way: Most damaging statements have been made against the Board, and we thought it was only common justice that we should be able to see the accusations. But we have made no complaint about it. As the Chairman has been good enough to explain the position, I merely make that remark.

2143. Chairman.] As a matter of fact, the Board has received copies of the evidence, or most of it? I am not sure that we have received all. I know, speaking for myself, that I have hardly looked at it. I may mention that, as I happen to be Chairman this year, my time is mostly taken up with general business. We came to an arrangement whereby Mr. Powell should take up one part of the case and Mr. Wilson the other, and they have carefully prepared themselves. They are prepared to give the most complete evidence. I understand that there has been some question as to the element of character coming in. We say that that is a most important element in some of the cases. If you look at section 11 of the Act you will see that the Board may recommend certain gratuities. The section states :—

Provided that as to officers temporarily employed at the commencement of this Act, whose services are dispensed with, the Governor shall, on the recommendation of the Board, grant out of moneys provided by Parliament for the purpose a gratuity to each such officer at a rate not exceeding a fortnight's pay for each year of such service prior to the commencement of this Act.

If we found from the records that an officer had been a dishonest and unworthy officer we thought we should be recreant to the trust upon us if we recommended the maximum provided under the section. I only mention that to show that the element of character is an important one.

2144. Are you aware that the question of the amount of the gratuity granted or offered by the Board has only arisen perhaps in one or, at the most, two cases? I may say it applies in other cases.

2145. The point you refer to as the character of employees is hardly the question;—where you have refused a gratuity it has been refused on well-defined grounds of a legal character? Undoubtedly in a great many cases.

2146. There is only one case upon which we should like a little information, that is the case of Sheehan. I do not think in any other case any matter has arisen which would involve the question of character; therefore it would be rather outside the scope of the inquiry to investigate the characters of persons who have been refused gratuities simply on express legal grounds? I know there have been such cases. I think there have been more than one of those cases.

2147. I do not think there has been more than one before the Committee? Perhaps not; but I have not the papers with me. There is one thing which the Board have borne in mind all through: they have no wish to inflict any more hardship on individuals than is possible. Directly the Board have done with the man, they like to throw a complete veil over his misdoings if there are any. In our annual report, which is nearly ready, we are compelled to give the cases which we have dealt with in the way of investigation, but we have studiously omitted names. We do not wish to inflict any more hardship than is possible. If a person has made a mistake we do not keep his name before the public any longer than we can help. We have rather suffered all kinds of indignity and misrepresentation than expose persons to, perhaps, contempt and injury after we have once dealt with them. Parliament, of course, can demand the names, but we think Parliament will respect our motives and not ask for them.

James Powell recalled and further examined :—

2148. Chairman.] Yesterday you were asked to give the source of the receipt by you of certain evidence taken by the Committee. You then declined. The Committee reported the matter to Parliament, and took no further action. The Committee has been informed this afternoon, by one of its members, that he was the party responsible for the sending of the evidence to your office in ignorance that in so doing there was any breach of decorum. That being the case, and the matter having been adjusted, the Committee think there is no further reason to press you to answer the question? In that case the Committee apologise.

2149. Mr. Griffith.] What for? For the position they took up with regard to me.

2150. For asking questions? For pressing me to give the information.

2151. Chairman.] We understand that that remark is jocular? You may take it as you will.

2152. The object of asking for your attendance to-day was to obtain that information. The information has been obtained without it being necessary to question you further on the subject, therefore it is not necessary to pursue the matter further? If you wish it I shall be glad to go on. I may say I am legally right. I have had the best opinion I can get.

THURSDAY, 25 NOVEMBER, 1897.

Present:—

MR. HOGUE.

MR. WADDELL,

JOHN CASH NEILD, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

George Alexander Wilson, Commissioner, Public Service Board, sworn and examined :—

- G. A. Wilson. 2153. Chairman.] Can you give us any information with regard to the case of John Michael Sheehan, who was Clerk of Petty Sessions and Mining Registrar in a number of country localities, and who appears to have been retrenched, and who was offered a gratuity of £1, which is at the rate of 1s. for each year of service;—is that a fact? It is a fact.
2154. You also offered him a refund of the amount he had contributed to the Superannuation Fund? Yes; that was modified afterwards to some extent, as I will explain. The Public Service Act, in dealing with officers retiring, expressly excludes those who are retiring for offences from participating in gratuities. Section 62, referring to the electing to discontinue, says, "in which event he shall be entitled to receive so much for any cause other than an offence." Further on, in the same section, it also speaks of "otherwise than for an offence." The best way I can deal with Sheehan's case is to read a summary of his career. He was Clerk of Petty Sessions at Armidale in 1889. His office was inspected by Mr. Williams, a Treasury Inspector. The result of his inspection was that there were forty-three omissions to enter certain sums of money received, totalling £12 17s. Sheehan was called upon to pay. At the same place, in 1890, he was inspected by Mr. Hinchy. There were thirty-six omissions and irregularities, and a deficiency of £21 1s. 10d. He was fined £10 and severely reprimanded. At the same place, in 1891, he was inspected by Mr. Riley. There were forty-two omissions, and a deficiency of £14 3s. 4d. At the same place in the same year, he was inspected by Mr. Riley, who reported a detention by Mr. Sheehan of a £30 fine. He was suspended, afterwards reinstated at a reduced salary. At Nowra, in 1892, he was inspected by Mr. Lockyer, who reported that his work was very unsatisfactory. In 1894 he was inspected by Mr. Hanson; deficiency, £5 4s. In 1894 he was again inspected by Mr. Williams; very unsatisfactory, and advised removal. In 1895 he was inspected by a relieving C.P.S.; deficiency, £16 16s. Suspended and fined £20. He there handed in, for his deficiency, a cheque of his own, which was afterwards dishonoured.
2155. Subsequently paid, I suppose? Subsequently paid, I think, by his successor, who was out of his money for some time. In 1896 he was inspected by Mr. Husband; deficiency of £5 3s. Irregularities with respect to mining calls—falsifying the butts of receipts; recommended that it was undesirable that he should be retained in the Public Service. In May, 1896, at Scone, inspected by Mr. Ellis; a cash deficiency of £28 4s. 4d. The Public Service Board after a careful perusal of the Act, and also from the point of view that gratuities were not intended for such men, therefore, fixed a nominal amount of £1.
2156. Was he dismissed or retired? He was left out of the grading.
2157. What is the effect, according to your regulations or practice? I do not think there is any regulation; but I presume the Department in other cases advised officers of their names being left out. We do not advise them.
2158. Then, apparently, you did not dismiss Sheehan for misconduct? No; we retired him, having in view his misconduct. I may say that after this £1 gratuity was passed we agreed to refund his contributions. We looked upon them as his own money.
2159. Is that contribution with or without interest? With interest.
2160. Did he accept those terms? I am coming to that. One day on leaving the office, I met the Chief Inspector, Mr. Brodie. He said that since he had communicated with us with regard to Sheehan he had discovered other defalcations. I went back to the office, and I noted that the payment was to be suspended pending a payment of the deficiency. That is to say, the deficiency was to be set against any payment which was coming to Sheehan. The Treasury were instructed to that effect.
2161. Then I suppose the matter is still pending adjustment? We had finished with it then. Of course it then became a matter for the Treasury. If there is any surplus it will go to Sheehan. The Board supposed gratuities were for honest and faithful service.
2162. Are there any other persons who have been retired by the Board for reasons similar to those which actuated you in Sheehan's case? Yes; there is the case of Charles John Horsley, of the Attorney-General's Office, for instance.
2163. Horsley appears to be at present employed as a temporary hand in the Taxation Department? Yes; I may say that if the Board had known what they know now they would not have employed him in the Taxation Department.
2164. I think he has been refused a gratuity? No; he applied in November in terms of section 60 of the Public Service Act. He was at the time temporarily employed in the Taxation Department, and was informed that the payment of his retiring allowance must be deferred until his final retirement from the Service.
2165. Then the question of gratuity in this case is standing over? Yes; but I do not know how the Board will look at the question of gratuity now that they are in full possession of his record.
2166. Has the case of Mr. George Herbert Greville, of the Mines Department, been settled? Yes; his case was settled.
2167. He has received an allowance? Yes; a gratuity.
2168. He received a gratuity, about £450; and his particular grievance seems to me that he was entitled to some leave rights which had not been considered? I do not think he had a claim.
2169. Apart from any question relating to leave of absence, he has had the full gratuity? Yes.
2170. What about the case of McNamee? The trouble in his case appears to be that he was under suspension for three or four months, and the Board regarded that as a break of service? He was tried at the Police Court for destroying letters, the property of the Postmaster-General.
2171. Was he not reinstated? If he were reinstated, he must have been out of the Service.
2172. Was he suspended or was he out of the Service? He was called upon to resign. I have a minute, "Appoint McNamee to one of the vacancies." That is dated 1889.
2173. He states that in the early part of 1889 he got excited over an election; became the worse of liquor, and was suspended? I do not know that it had anything to do with an election. I know that he had had a lot of letters which he went scattering about the streets. I have many other complaints against G. A. Wilson. him here.

2174. From his evidence it would appear that he was suspended, and I want to know whether the records show whether he was suspended or dismissed and reappointed? If it is a question of record the record is clear enough. This is from a Departmental record dated 1889, "If reappointed, he could, in the meantime, be paid from contingencies." 25 Nov., 1897.

2175. Is that a printed paper in McNamee's case? Yes.

2176. He seems to have been called upon to resign, and then it appears that Mr. D. O'Connor, as Postmaster-General, wrote this minute:—"After carefully considering McNamee's case I have come to the conclusion of reducing him to some position at the head office at a low salary. I am fully convinced of the heinous offence committed by McNamee, but there was strong palliating evidence in his favour. Moreover, it was the dying request of the late Hon. John Sutherland, who knew McNamee for thirty years, and thought highly of him, that he should get another chance to retrieve himself." McNamee was off duty from the 1st January to the 8th July without pay. There is a break there.

2177. On the other hand, Mr. Lambton's memo. is: "I presume he will not be paid salary during his suspension." Evidently both the Postmaster-General and the Deputy Postmaster-General treated it as a suspension.

2178. Mr. Hogue.] Then why do they say, "If we appoint him";—if officers are reinstated, is it not the invariable rule to pay them for the periods pending the suspension? No. If we try an officer for an offence, and he is found guilty, if we do not dismiss him we fine him a month's or a fortnight's salary.

2179. I think that was the rule formerly? He would be presumably innocent then.

2180. What guide had you in connection with the interpretation of section 60 of the Act—I refer to the retiring allowances to persons whose services have been dispensed with;—the section says that they shall receive a gratuity not exceeding one month's salary for each year of service from the date of the appointment? We have legal opinion on that.

2181. Do you interpret the words "not exceeding" as giving you a discretionary power? Yes, which we have exercised in Sheehan's case.

2182. Where a person has been in permanent service for a length of time, and is retired because he is of a certain age, would he not then receive a month's retiring allowance? I think so, if he were permanently employed and there was nothing against him.

2183. Edward G. Wilton was employed in the Government Printing Office, and it was clear that he was entitled to consider himself a permanent hand, because in the notice in the Gazette, signed G. H. Reid, he is referred to as a permanent officer;—would what we consider a mistake in that announcement make him a permanent officer? We contend he was not a permanent officer.

2184. He has been described as a permanent officer in a public document produced in the form of a return ordered by the House to be printed. He is described as a permanent officer, and his date of promotion to the permanent staff is June, 1883. He only received a fortnight's pay for each year of service in the same way as did Frederick McDermott? I think there were four on the same footing.

2185. There was also also the case of Frederick Shettle? I remember the case, and I know the difficulty.

2186. Do you remember the case of Samuel Hegarty? No; I have not looked into the Printing Office at all.

2187. Then you will not know that he received a month's pay for each year of service, whilst others only received a fortnight's pay for each year of service? I do not know the particulars at all.

2188. You are of course familiar with the provisions of section 11 of the Act that persons who may have been employed, and whose services shall not have been considered as permanent, may be considered permanent servants for the purposes of section 60? It appears to the Board that there is a doubt about some of those cases, and this we have asked the Government to solve.

2189. Is it possible for cases of this kind to be reopened? Yes.

2190. They were old men, and considered themselves properly retired, the only point being that they considered that they were permanent officers? That question is still open. We have asked for advice on the point. Of course, when there are any doubts in matters of this kind we must give the Treasury the benefit of them.

2191. If there is a doubt the law can be set in motion against the Treasury? Undoubtedly.

2192. Chairman.] Mr. Peter Herbert, the late governor of the gaol, considers he is entitled to a larger pension than he is drawing;—is that matter still pending settlement? That is still open.

John William Holliman recalled and further examined:—

2193. Chairman.] With regard to the case of Love, is that a matter which has been settled? Yes, so far as the Board is concerned. He was only partially employed by the Government, and was paid £30 a year for acting as a Warden's clerk at Barmedman. He was not an officer within the meaning of the old Civil Service Act. J. W.
Holliman.
25 Nov., 1897.

2194. And on that ground the Board did not consider him a fit subject for a gratuity? Just so. I may say that in order to definitely settle the question the Board propose to refer the matter to the Attorney-General for advice as to whether persons whose services are only partially at the disposal of the State are entitled to the benefits of section 60.

PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD—GRATUITIES AND ALLOWANCES.

APPENDIX.

[Appended by the Committee.]

STATUTORY DECLARATION.

I, JAMES HARVEY, of Lucky Hit Mine, Tuena, do solemnly and sincerely declare that on the 16th July, 1896, I wrote to the Under Secretary for Lands, requesting to be allowed to remain at my duties—the compilation of parish maps—as I had a large amount of urgent work on hand in an incomplete state, and, if my services were retained until next February (1897), I would be enabled to complete the greater portion of it, and would also have then served twenty years in the department. If it were intended, however, that I should be retired from the Service, I would expect six months' leave of absence on full pay at the end of the ensuing month (August), under the provisions of the Public Service Act of 1895 (as a matter of fact I would only have eleven days longer to serve, as I entered the Service on 11th February, 1877, when the Public Service Board could have retired me with the six months' leave of absence on full pay as aforesaid, namely from 11th August, 1896); on 12th August, Min. 96-9,085, I was informed by the Acting U.S. for Lands, "That the Public Service Board cannot alter their decision in your case, nor can they grant the leave applied for;" I appealed against this decision on the 14th December, 1896, showing that, in addition to the six months I applied for, there were three months' leave of absence due to me after ten years service, of which I never availed myself—Civil Service Act, 1884 (copy of this letter sent to J. C. Neild, Esq., M.L.A., marked A); to this letter, and another of same date, asking to be allowed to appear personally before the Public Service Board, I received a reply on 30th December, 1896, marked B (copy also sent to Mr. Neild 16th August, 1897), refusing me the right of appearing before the Board or to re-open my case; I then appealed to the Minister for Lands, 6th February, 1897, giving a précis of the case, and enclosing copies of my credentials from the Department, marked C (also sent to Mr. Neild); lastly, on the 23rd February, I received a letter from the secretary of the Public Service Board requesting me to call on him; at the interview Mr. Holliman stated that the Public Service Board intended no disrespect to me by declining to grant a personal interview at the hearing of my appeal, and that if the Board granted me the leave others would also apply. And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and in virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intitled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of oaths and affirmations taken and made in various departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of Voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

STATUTORY DECLARATION.

I, THOMAS LOVE, of Barmedman, in the Colony of New South Wales, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare as follows: That I was appointed Mining Registrar and Warden's Clerk at Barmedman in the month of November, 1886, at a salary of £20 per annum, a sum totally inadequate to compensate for the time and attention necessary to be devoted to the duties of the office; I accepted the position in the hope that when time, good conduct, and attention to the duties would justify it that I would receive promotion; I held the office from November, 1886, to March 3, 1897; the first intimation I received of my compulsory retirement was a notice in the Government Gazette, which stated that Mr. H. B. Copeland, the local Crown Lands Agent, had been appointed to the position held by me; I claim that my compulsory retirement without notice was not justified, as nothing in my conduct during the ten years called for such action; I submit that the special knowledge of mining matters obtained during the ten years was lost, both to myself and the Department, by such retirement; for the reasons herein stated, and in common justice for such harsh action, I claim that I am entitled to compulsory retirement allowance. And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intitled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of oaths and affirmations taken and made in various departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

STATUTORY DECLARATION.

I, HENRY EDWARD WELLS, of Mudgee, in the Colony of New South Wales, late Warden's Bailiff at Mudgee, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare as follows:—1. That up to the 28th day of February last I was employed in the Public Service as Warden's Bailiff at Mudgee, which appointment I had previously held for over twenty years, as the records in the Department of Mines will show. 2. On the 27th February, 1897, I received a notice of my dismissal therefrom, which notice I annex, marked A. 3. That my salary up to the 1st April, 1881, was only £15 per annum, and on the 13th May, 1881, my salary was reduced to £10 per annum, as per letter marked B. 4. That no complaint being made against me, I feel aggrieved at such compulsory retirement without any gratuity or offer of other employment, and at such a remarkably short notice. 5. That I had to perform other duties in connection with my late appointment, such as reporting on, and the measurements of, aid granted under Prospecting Vote, and had to keep a horse. 6. That I am advised that my summarily dismissal was illegal; that I, being employed at a yearly salary, I was entitled at the least to a longer notice of being retired. 7. I therefore respectfully claim that I am entitled to either a gratuity, or for some compensation for being retired at such a short notice, my appointment being an annual one, and I having lost my chance of promotion, which my length of service entitled me to, if qualified. And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of her present Majesty, intitled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of oaths and affirmations taken and made in various departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths and affidavits."

STATUTORY DECLARATION.

I, JAMES BRYANT, of Orange, in the Colony of New South Wales, do solemnly and sincerely declare : On or about the 12th day of May, 1883, I entered the service of the Government upon the recommendation of John Tom Lane, Esquire, lately Police Magistrate at Orange, and discharged the duties of messenger for the Court and the Court officials, including the payment of public moneys to the Public Account at the Bank, and obtaining from the Bank the moneys necessary to pay jurors and witnesses, for which I received £60 a year and house residence and fuel assigned to me ; during the period of my service I supported my wife and myself, and for part of that time my daughter, now married ; on or about the 1st day of February, 1897, I was retired from the Service on the recommendation of the Public Service Commissioners ; I was advised to give notice of my retirement, which was accepted ; I am now 74 years of age ; I have during the period of my service discharged all the duties required of me to the satisfaction of officials and others, and have never had any complaint made against me ; I have of late years suffered much in health, and have had several severe illnesses ; owing to my advanced age and the ill-health referred to, I am now unable to do any work for the support of myself and my wife, who is now old and unable to do any work except household duties. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

I, HENRY STONE, do solemnly and sincerely declare that I entered the railway service in the year 1870, where I remained until the year 1882, when I was appointed mail-guard, which position I held until 1896, when I was retired by the Civil Service Board, with a gratuity of £77 9s. 6d., whereas by the Act I believe that I am entitled to one months' pay for every year of service ; as I was in receipt of £170 per annum for the last four or five years previous to being retired, the amount to which I am entitled is £368 6s. 8d., less the amount I have already received. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled, "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

STATUTORY DECLARATION.

I, FRANK LENG, of Gunnedah (late Crown Lands Agent), do solemnly and sincerely declare that I have been employed in the Civil Service of New South Wales for a period of thirteen and a half years, during which time I have performed the duties of Crown Lands Agent for ten and three quarter years, viz., at the following places :—Wilcannia, four and a quarter years ; Cootamundra, one year ; and Gunnedah, five and a half years ; I have contributed towards the Superannuation Fund since the 1st January, 1885 (Civil Service Act of 1884), up to the date I was suspended from duty (26th March, 1896), and have applied on several occasions to the Public Service Board, the Honorable G. H. Reid (Premier), and the Lands Department for the amount contributed by me towards the Superannuation Fund, also arrears of salary from the date of my suspension up to the date of my retirement from the Public Service, during the month of June, 1896, which was refused ; I was suspended from duty upon the report of Mr. Freeman (Chairman of the Land Board at Tamworth), to the effect that I was absent from my office one whole day, owlishly drunk (13th February, 1896), which led to an inquiry by the Public Service Board, and upon furnishing an explanation of my conduct, which appeared unsatisfactory to the Lands Department, I was called upon to tender my resignation under section 49, sub-section iv, Public Service Act of 1895 ; I admitted the charge of being intoxicated, as stated in my previous correspondence to the Lands Department, Public Service Board, and the Honorable G. H. Reid (Premier), but deny the statements made by the Chairman at the inquiry, viz., being owlishly drunk, a scandal in Gunnedah two years prior to my suspension from duty, also that I deterred persons from applying for land at the Lands Office, Gunnedah, and that I made more than the average number of errors ; on the 13th February, 1896, during the hearing of the "Mercadool Cases," being the day which I was absent from my office, a number of documents and books were left in my charge, and during my absence the office was locked, as the side entrance to the Court-house adjoining, and which leads to the back entrance of the Lands Office, would have been accessible to the public (if the office had been kept open), who might have overhauled the documents referred to, should they have been inclined to do so ; on the abovenamed date no person was put to any inconvenience through the office being closed, with the exception of the Chairman, who required a map or document from the office, which he obtained ; it would appear that Mr. Chairman Freeman had some animosity or grudge against me, as he never informed me that he would report me ; moreover, upon every occasion that he had to visit Gunnedah to adjudicate in Land Board cases, I was always courteous and obliging to him, and have almost on every occasion furnished him with ink, foolscap, or any stationery which he might require, and also permitted Mr. Cleary, deposition clerk, and a clerk named Hall, to utilise part of my office for several days copying depositions in connection with the Mercadool cases ; during my career in the Public Service, I have always proved myself an efficient officer, and have always acted in a strictly honest and upright manner in the performance of my official duties ; moreover, I have never allowed my work to get into arrears, which can be testified to by the Lands Department, the Treasury, Audit Office, and the books, records, &c., in every country town in which I have held the position of Crown Lands Agent ; my case being an exceptionable one, inasmuch that I have always acted honestly and in a straightforward manner ; I think the Public Service Board have treated me in an unfair manner, by not granting to me my just superannuation allowance and arrears of salary ; furthermore, the Board should not have brought my case under section 49, sub-section iv, Public Service Act of 1895, thereby classing me with criminals, habitual drunkards, &c. ; I have never been an habitual drunkard during my life, my fault being on some occasions by being too easily led away by others to indulge in too much liquor, as in many cases in small country towns a single man is at a loss for want of society equal to his position ; since my retirement from the Civil Service I have not been successful in procuring a situation, and am left as it were penniless in the world, and have been existing for some time past on the bare necessities of life. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and in virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of Her Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

STATUTORY DECLARATION.

I, EDWARD STEPHENSON RUSSOM, of Manly, in the Colony of New South Wales, do solemnly and sincerely declare—That I have been in the unbroken service of the Government for a period of 13½ years, viz. :—

Mines Department.—1st May, 1883, to 12th May, 1886.—Rabbit Inspector, salary £300 per annum, on Permanent Staff, with monthly deductions of 4 per cent. for Superannuation Fund.

Lands Department.—12th May, 1886, to 1st August, 1890.—C. P. Inspector, on Temporary Staff, paid by fees, appointed by letter (copy herewith), No. 86-3,104, dated 30th April, 1886, when relieved of papers, money, &c., as Rabbit Inspector at Deniliquin; immediately went to Hay (80 miles), as therein instructed. 1st August, 1890, to 1st January, 1893.—C. P. Inspector, on Permanent Staff, salary, £300 per annum. 1st January, 1893 to 31st July, 1896.—C. P. Inspector, on Permanent Staff, salary, £290 per annum; with 4 per cent. deduction for Superannuation Fund.

All payments to Superannuation Fund have been returned to me. On 31st July, 1896, I was retired by Public Service Board, after being in the employ of the Government for the unbroken time, 1st May, 1883, to 31st July, 1896. After receiving notice, dated 15th December, 1896, that £132 3s. 1d. had been paid to my credit as a gratuity, I wrote to the Public Service Board, asking to be informed upon what grounds my gratuity had been calculated, they refused to inform me as per letter herewith. I believe I have been unjustly deprived of a gratuity allowed by law, for a period 7½ years service, viz., from 1st May, 1883, to 1st August, 1890; and I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled, “an Act for the more effectual Abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra judicial Oaths and Affidavits.”

The Commissioners of Taxation to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

MEMORANDUM.

THE Commissioners of Taxation desire to bring under notice the urgent necessity for some more expeditious method of dealing with their legal business than that at present provided.

Under existing conditions all matters remitted for the consideration of the Crown Solicitor have, perhaps necessarily, to take their place and turn with the business submitted by other public departments, and this involves undesirable and vexatious delay.

Mr. J. L. Campbell, barrister-at-law, is of opinion that the services of a solicitor, competent to deal promptly with all necessary requirements of the Department, may be obtained at a remuneration of £300 per annum.

If a thoroughly capable man may be obtained for the amount quoted, his appointment would prove of the greatest convenience and advantage.

In submitting this matter for the favourable consideration of the Honorable the Premier and Treasurer, the Commissioners desire to express their appreciation of the uniform courtesy and attention extended to them by Mr. Colquhoun, the Crown Solicitor. They understand that press of business is alone responsible for the delay above referred to.

N. LOCKYER.
L. S. SPILLER.

I think this matter should be referred for the consideration of the Public Service Board. I may state that the delay in settling legal questions causes great inconvenience to the Taxation Department.—F.K., 30/12/96.

The Public Service Board may perhaps in the first instance make inquiry, in view of ascertaining the necessity for the proposed appointment.—J.N.B., 30/12/96. The Secretary, Public Service Board.—F.K., 30/12/96.

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 29 January, 1897.

PROVIDED that he is a natural born or naturalised subject of Her Majesty, and that he pass the prescribed medical examination, the Public Service Board approve of the appointment, on probation for six months, of Mr. Norman Charles Lockhart, as solicitor to the Land and Income Tax Department, with salary at the rate of £350 per annum, upon the understanding that he carries out the legal business of any other Department which may be remitted to him. In accordance with the provisions of sections 28 and 29 of the "Public Service Act of 1895," the Board certify:—

1. That such appointment is required.
2. That there is no person in the Public Service fit or qualified and available for such appointment.
3. That a competitive examination under the provisions of the "Public Service Act" has been held, and that the person named is the third candidate on the list, the first and second having already received appointments.

No. 3.

Mr. N. C. Lockhart to The Secretary, Public Service Board.

Sir,

George and King Streets, Sydney, 23 September, 1896.

I have the honor to submit myself for the examination to be held on Saturday, the 26th day of September instant, for the position of Chief Clerk of the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

I am 28 years of age, and at present managing Common Law Solicitor to Messieurs Fisher and Macansh, solicitors, Sydney, having previously acted as Manager in the office of Messieurs Street and Paterson, solicitors, Bond-street, Sydney.

I am a solicitor of the Supreme Court of New South Wales, having been admitted in 1892.

I enclose the requisite certificates, namely:—Medical certificate of health, and two certificates as to character, one by Mr. A. B. Paterson, of Sydney, solicitor, of the firm of Street and Paterson, and the other by Mr. R. D. Moffitt, of Messieurs McDonell and Moffitt, solicitors, Sydney. I also enclose Treasury receipt for payment of 10s. examination fee.

I have, &c.,

NORMAN CHARLES LOCKHART.

[Enclosures.]

24, Bond-street, Sydney, 22 September, 1896.

I HEREBY certify that I have known Norman Charles Lockhart, of Sydney, solicitor, for three years, during two years of which period he worked in my office as manager, and since that time he has been managing the Common Law Branch of Messrs. Fisher and Macansh's office.

I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Lockhart is thoroughly fitted for the Chief Clerkship of the Supreme Court.

A. B. PATERSON.

353, George-street, Sydney, 22 September, 1896.

I HAVE known Mr. Norman Charles Lockhart for the past twenty-five years, and have come closely in contact with him during that time, and can with confidence speak both as to his integrity and ability, and I consider him a fit and proper person to occupy the position of Chief Clerk in the Supreme Court.

ROBERT D. MOFFITT.

"Frang," Oxford-street, opposite Point Piper Road.

I HEREBY certify that I have examined Mr. Norman Charles Lockhart. He is of sound constitution, and in good health.

No. 4.

The Honorable the Attorney-General to The Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

Appointment of Mr. Lockhart as Solicitor to the Commissioners for Taxation.

10 February, 1897.

I DESIRE to draw the attention of the Premier and Colonial Treasurer to the enclosed Gazette notice, purporting to issue from the Treasury, and to request its immediate cancellation. Some time ago when an appointment was being made, which affected this Department, I pointed out to the Public Service Board, that I should expect to have the names of any intended appointees, together with the terms of their respective offices, submitted to me, as the Minister in charge of the Law Offices, before any recommendations were made in pursuance of the provisions of the Public Service Act. This the Board assured me would be done, as it undoubtedly should in all cases.

If this appointment of Mr. Lockhart were to stand, it would be reducing a Minister's position to a farce, and while he would be responsible for his Department, he would be the mere puppet of an irresponsible body.

The

The Board are assuming and exercising a power in this case (and I am afraid in others) which they do not possess under the Act, and which it was never intended they should possess, and I must, at once, protest against any attempt on their part to interfere with the duties of a Minister of the Crown—such a course would be fraught with danger to the Ministry, and would be reducing a Minister's position to that of a servant of the Board. The notice making the appointment has only to be read to recognise its absurdity, for, by it, Mr. Lockhart is gazetted as solicitor to whom all law matters of every Department are to be submitted. What, then, is the use of the Crown Solicitor or the Attorney-General? As a further proof of its mischief, I may mention that immediately after Mr. Lockhart's alleged appointment, that gentleman called at the Crown Solicitor's Office and asked for the papers in a most important Equity suit, now pending, to test the validity of the whole proceeding of the Taxation Act, at the same time stating that "he had been appointed solicitor to the Land and Income Tax Department."

I yield to no one in my admiration of the fearless and loyal manner in which the Board have done their work, but I must certainly complain of this attempt to interfere with a Minister's province, and, further, that it should have been done during my absence and without consulting me in any way.

When this Gazette notice is cancelled I shall be glad to give the Board any assistance in bringing about what they apparently desire, and which, when properly worked out, may prove satisfactory.

It may be said that the appointment above referred to is in connection with the Treasury, but a moment's consideration will show that it is really directed at and affects the Law Officers of the Crown.

J. H. WANT,
Attorney-General.

Recommendation by the Public Service Board.

MINUTE PAPER FOR THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

Subject:—Appointment, on probation, of Mr. Norman Charles Lockhart as solicitor to the Land and Income Tax Department.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 2 February, 1897.

THE Minister acting for the Colonial Treasurer submits, for the approval of His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council, the accompanying recommendation of the Public Service Board, that Norman Charles Lockhart, Esquire, be appointed on probation for six months as solicitor to the Land and Income Tax Department, with a salary at the rate of £350 per annum, upon the understanding that he carries out the legal business of any other Department which may be remitted to him, and provided that he is a natural born or naturalised subject of Her Majesty, and that he pass the prescribed medical examination.

The Board certify, in accordance with the provisions of sections 28 and 29 of the Public Service Act:—

1. That such appointment is required.
2. That there is no person in the Public Service fit or qualified and available for such appointment.
3. That a competitive examination under the provisions of the Public Service Act has been held, and that the person named is the third candidate on the list, the first and second having already received appointments.

JAMES N. BRUNKER.

The Executive Council approve of the appointment recommended, upon the terms herein set forth.—ALEX. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Min. 97-6, 2/2/97. Confirmed, 9/2/97. Approved.—FRED. M. DARLEY, L.-G., 2/2/97. The Secretary to the Honorable the Attorney-General.—F.K., 18/2/97.

Minute by The Public Service Board.

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 15 February, 1897.

THE Public Service Board have carefully considered the minute of the Honorable the Attorney-General in regard to the appointment of Mr. Lockhart as solicitor to the Taxation Department, and are disposed to think that the minute would not have been penned had the facts of the case been properly placed before him.

In the first place the Board desire to remove the misapprehension that the idea of providing the Taxation Department with direct legal advice originated with them. On the contrary, they would not have moved in the matter at all were they not expressly invited to do so. The Board recognise as clearly as the Honorable the Attorney-General himself that the appointment of a solicitor to any Public Department is one purely of policy, to be initiated by a Minister of the Crown, and is not a matter in any way coming within the functions of their office. In the case under consideration it will be found that the Commissioners of Taxation applied to the Treasurer for the appointment of a solicitor. The request was transmitted by the Minister to the Board, as provided by section 28 of the Public Service Act, the object of such reference being that no appointment of the kind would be lawful in the absence of a certificate from the Board that it was required.

It will be seen that the policy of the appointment having been affirmed by competent authority, it became the duty of the Board, after satisfying themselves of the necessity for such an appointment, to take the necessary steps to procure a qualified person to fill the office. If the Board had refused (or neglected) to do this, they would have arrogated to themselves a power they do not possess, and have justly laid themselves open to censure.

As inferentially suggested, the Public Service Act has taken from Ministers a large share of the power formerly enjoyed by them in regard to appointments, and a knowledge of this makes the Board all the more anxious that such powers as yet remain to individual Ministers should be scrupulously respected. It may be that the policy of appointing a solicitor to the Taxation Department is unsound. With this the Board have nothing to do. Their functions do not extend to the criticism of the acts or policy of responsible Ministers, and they conceive they have no more right to say to the Treasurer, "You shall not have a solicitor" than they have to say, "You shall not have an Under Secretary."

The

The Board do not wish to introduce what might be thought extraneous matter, otherwise they would be disposed to reply at length to the suggestion that they have, in other instances, interfered, or attempted to interfere, with the duties of Ministers of the Crown. That a contrary view seems to prevail is unfortunate, and such could only have arisen from an imperfect acquaintance with the large and extraordinary powers entrusted to the Board by the Public Service Act.

With regard to the wording of the Gazette notice, the Board thought that, in the event of the taxation work proving insufficient to keep a special officer fully employed, his services ought to be available for general work, but they freely admit, on reviewing the matter, that the intention, which they think the Honorable the Attorney-General will admit was a wise one, would have been better carried out in another way.

No. 7.

The Honorable the Attorney-General to The Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

Appointment of Mr. N. C. Lockhart as solicitor to the Land and Income Tax Department.

24 February, 1897.

Now that all the papers in this matter are before me, I see that the appointment of Mr. Lockhart did not, according to the correspondence, originate with the Board, and that the creation of the office was not effected "at the instance of the Board."

There remains, therefore, only two other ways under section 28 by which the appointment referred to could have been made, i.e., "on the written request of a permanent head of a Department to the Minister, to be transmitted by the Minister to the Board, or upon the written request of the Minister addressed to the Board." Neither of these courses has been followed, and I therefore repeat my previous assertion, that the Board, in dealing with Mr. Lockhart's appointment, had exercised a power which they did not possess.

There was a request made by two officers in the Taxation Department, addressed to the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, and that officer very properly only minuted the same on to the Minister (Mr. Brunker). The Chief Secretary, acting for the Treasurer, carefully and properly in such an important matter, abstained from making any written request, but, on the contrary, asked the Board to make inquiry with a view of ascertaining whether there was any necessity for such a step.

The Board then, without making any inquiry—not, at least, from the only source to which they ought to have appealed, viz., the Law Officers of the Crown—and without, as a body or individually, making any response to Mr. Brunker's request, proceeded themselves to make the appointment, or more correctly speaking, to make the recommendation for the appointment which was subsequently made.

I am not disposed to discuss the question as to whether my fears of the Board having in other cases exercised, or sought to exercise, powers which they did not possess, "could only have arisen from an imperfect acquaintance with the large and extraordinary powers entrusted to the Board under the Public Service Act." While I hold the office of Attorney-General my construction of the Act will have to be accepted, perfect or imperfect.

The other cases to which I alluded were before me for opinions when the papers rightly or wrongly alleged that the Public Service Board were claiming to exercise rights which they did not possess. One matter was referred for advice from the Department of the Minister for Mines and Agriculture, the other from that of the Chief Secretary, and, at the time, I was further aware that the Postmaster-General and the Minister for Public Works had similar complaints.

Any suggestion to make a transfer of Mr. Lockhart from the Taxation Office to this Department cannot be acceded to for more reasons than one, but particularly because the appointment of the gentleman mentioned has not only been improperly made, but, for a stronger reason, because it is illegal.

The Board have certified that the appointment is made under sections 28 and 29:—

- (1.) "That there is no person fit or qualified and available for such appointment."
- (2.) "That a competitive examination under the provisions of the Public Service Act has been held, and that the person named is the third candidate on the list, the first and second having already received appointments."

There are two gentlemen in my Department fit and qualified and available for the position to which Mr. Lockhart has been appointed, while that gentleman has not passed the examination for such position for which, indeed, no examination has been held.

There is only one road out of the difficulty—cancel the appointment and commence de novo. I can then discuss the matter with the Board, and, if found necessary, Mr. Lockhart can be appointed, under subsection (d) of section 29, as an extra clerk in the Crown Solicitor's Office. His duties could then be apportioned so as to include the work required of him by the Taxation Department, and I am sure that the Crown Solicitor would welcome Mr. Lockhart as a valued addition to his staff.

J. H. WANT,

No. 8.

Memorandum by The Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

MINUTE PAPER FOR THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

Subject:—Resignation of Mr. Norman C. Lockhart as solicitor to the Commissioners of Taxation, and re-appointment to the position of an officer of the Land and Income Tax Department.

The Treasury, New South Wales, Sydney, 18 March, 1897.

THE Colonial Treasurer submits herewith, for the information of His Excellency the Governor and the Executive Council, a letter from Mr. Norman C. Lockhart, addressed to the Commissioners of Taxation, Sydney, resigning his position as solicitor to the Commissioners, and recommends that such resignation be accepted.

The

The Colonial Treasurer further recommends that Mr. Lockhart be now appointed an officer of the Land and Income Tax Department at a salary of £350 a year, the work which he has to do being urgently required, and the Public Service Board having reported, in terms of the 30th section of the "Public Service Act," that there is no one in the Public Service available for the purpose and capable of performing the duties.

Mr. Lockhart will be an officer of the Professional Division.

G. H. REID.

The Executive Council approve of the acceptance of Mr. Lockhart's resignation of the office referred to. The Council also approve of Mr. Lockhart's appointment as herein recommended.—A. C. BUDGE, Clerk of the Council. Min. 97-14, 18/3/97. Confirmed, 23/3/97. Approved.—HAMPDEN, 18/3/97. Gazetted, 26/3/97.—C.E.F.R.

For the information of the Commissioners. Please return.—F.K., B.C., 26/3/97. The Commissioners of Taxation. Noted and returned. It is pointed out the salary should be £400—not £350, as herein.—N.L., 29/3/97. The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade. Examiner.—F.K., 31/3/97. If salary at the rate of £400 per annum is to be paid in this case, it will be necessary to obtain further Executive authority.—A.P.P., 1/4/97. Submitted.—F.K., 2/4/97. I cannot find any authority for the £400 referred to.—F.K., 24/4/97. The Collector of Customs.

I understand that the Premier mentioned £400 as the amount of Mr. Lockhart's future remuneration, but difficulties have since arisen in the matter, and I propose to defer the question of increase until a later date.—N.L., 18/5/97. The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade. Examiner.—F.K., 19/5/97. Noted.—F.H.G. Records.

No. 9.

The Secretary to the Attorney-General to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

My dear Mr. Kirkpatrick, Attorney General's Department, Sydney, 18 February, 1897.

The Attorney-General has asked me to request you to be good enough to let him see all your papers relating to the recent appointment of Mr. Lockhart. The matter is, as you know, urgent.

I am, &c.,

HUGH POLLOCK.

Registrar.—Papers please.—F.K., 18/2/97. I think Mr. Pollock has seen the Under Secretary in respect of this matter.—C.E.F.R., 22/2/97. The Under Secretary. Records.

No. 10.

N. Lockyer, Esq., to The Honorable the Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

MEMORANDUM.

Subject.—The appointment of a solicitor, Department of Taxation.

Land and Income Tax Department, 9 March, 1897.

THE Commissioners recommended the appointment of a solicitor to the Department after very careful consideration. They found that the initiatory work, the details of management, and the demands of the public for interviews, rendered it almost impossible to bestow the time for research into established practice necessary for the careful consideration of the numerous important matters presenting technical and legal difficulties. It is hardly necessary to emphasise the many difficulties which are inseparable from the administration of a new enactment, particularly one which forms the subject of such close criticism and opposition on the part of an important section of the community.

Experience has already shown that full advantage has been taken of the weak and doubtful portions of the Acts they were administering, and although the Commissioners were fully alive to their own responsibility, and with no intention of delegating their power or authority, they considered it imperative the Department should have the personal assistance of a qualified solicitor.

Apart from the economy and expedition which such an appointment would ensure, there are serious objections to the legal work being done outside the office, and the Commissioners are of opinion that, as far as practicable, and whenever it can be avoided, the confidential documents entrusted to their care should not leave the Department.

The solicitor should have an intimate acquaintance with the details of management, and he should be in a position to acquire an expert knowledge of income and land tax practice. The questions arising which require legal investigation are almost of daily occurrence, and it is indispensable that the Commissioners should be in immediate communication with their solicitor, and that they should be daily informed of the progress of their business.

In addition to matters of principle (where the interpretation of the Act is questioned), and the conduct of the Commissioners' cases on appeal, it is proposed in all instances of minor importance, evading the provisions of the Act, &c., the solicitor may conduct the prosecutions in the country which may thus be effected, at less cost and with more efficiency than by local men of little or no experience in the practice.

The Commissioners earnestly hope that no alteration may be made in the present arrangement. They are satisfied with the selection of Mr. Lockhart, who comes highly recommended, and of whose industry and work they have already formed a very good opinion. All cases of exceptional importance are reserved for counsel's opinion.

N. LOCKYER.

Mr. Lockhart has resigned his position as solicitor to the Land and Income Tax Department, and is willing to remain in the Department on the clerical staff, and give the services which he would have been capable of rendering as solicitor on the internal business of the Department. I propose to appoint him under the provisions of section 30 of the Public Service Act.—G.H.R., 17th. The Chairman, Public Service Board.

No. 11.

Mr. Norman C. Lockhart to The Commissioners of Taxation.

Gentlemen,

Land and Income Tax Department, 17 March, 1897.

In view of the difficulties that I am informed have arisen in connection with my appointment, and with a desire to relieve the Government therefrom, I beg to resign from the position of solicitor to the Commissioners of Taxation, which I have now the honor to fill.

I have, &c,

The Public Service Board to The Honorable The Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

Appointment of a Clerk for Special Duty in the Taxation Department.

Public Service Board, 50, Young-street, Sydney, 18 March, 1897.

THE Honorable the Premier having informed the Public Service Board that it is necessary, for reasons set forth in the Minute of the Chief Commissioner of Taxation forwarded by him on 17th instant, to appoint an officer having special legal qualifications to assist the Commissioners in the administration of the Land and Income Tax Act, the Board report that in its opinion there is not any person in the Service capable of filling the position to which it is proposed the appointment shall be made. The officer should be appointed to the Professional Division.

Printed under No. 15 Report from Printing Committee, 12 August, 1897.

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated the 13th July, 1897, That there be laid upon the Table of this House, a Return showing,—

- “(1.) How many clerks are now employed at the Land and Income Taxation Department.
“(2.) How many of the number, whose services have been continuous since the passing of the Public Service Act, have been transferred from other Government Departments.
“(3.) If the remaining clerks are engaged only temporarily, under section 37 of the Public Service Act.
“(4.) If the persons referred to in paragraph 3 are engaged under section 37 of the Public Service Act, and have completed their term of nine months’ service yet.
“(5.) Whether, in the cases of those temporarily employed under section 37, the Ministerial head of the Department has obtained the sanction of the Public Service Board for their re-engagement for two further terms of three months (vide subsection of section 37).
“(6.) Whether, in cases where temporary officers have been employed for nine months, it has been intimated, in accordance with section 38 of the Public Service Act, to the Public Service Board the desirability of continuing such employment until the completion of the public work or scheme on which they are engaged.
“(7.) How long may the temporary officers referred to in paragraph 3 anticipate receiving employment in the Taxation Department.
“(8.) Whether any of the temporary officers, irrespective of those transferred from other Departments, whose services have been continuous since the passing of the Public Service Act, are eligible for permanent employment in the Taxation or any other Department under the control of the Public Service Board.”

(Mr. Crick.)

Land and Income Taxation Department.

- (1.) Answer.—141, including 1 Typewriter and 3 Junior Messengers.
- (2.) Answer.—Twenty-eight, including 3 Messengers mentioned in paragraph 1.
- (3.) Answer.—With the exception of 6 permanent officers, the whole of those mentioned in paragraph 1 are engaged temporarily.
- (4.) Answer.—116 members of the present temporary staff have completed nine months' service.
- (5.) Answer.—No. (See attached explanation.)
- (6.) Answer.—No. (See attached explanation.)
- (7.) Answer.—During such period as the proper administration of the Land and Income Tax Assessment Act may render their services necessary; subject always to a performance of their duties to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and, further, subject to the examination and grading of the Staff by the Public Service Board.
- (8.) Answer.—This question cannot be definitely settled until the Staff shall have been graded by the Public Service Board.

NOTE.—In connection with Questions 5 and 6, it may be pointed out that when the Public Service Act was framed provision does not appear to have been contemplated for the establishment of a large Department such as the Taxation, nor for the employment continuously of such a large number of temporary clerks as has been found necessary to carry out the provisions of the Land and Income Tax Assessment Act. All appointments, transfers from other Government Departments, and retirements have been made upon the authority and under the immediate supervision of the Public Service Board.

No. 1.

Mr. Maurice Hickey to The Chief Secretary.

Dear Sir,

18, Charlton-street, Newcastle, 26 April, 1897.

After being in the Civil Service for over twenty-three years I have been discharged for a most trivial act, and have to respectfully ask your kindly advice and assistance in my trouble. I am a one-armed man, and have for the last twelve years been employed as a look-out man on the Signal Hill, Newcastle. I am married, and am the sole support of a wife and young family.

My chief object in addressing you is to ask your assistance in obtaining a refund of the sum of £60 paid by me into the Superannuation Fund of the Colony during my service. As I know the appointments to the Service are now not in your province, I can hardly expect you to be able to reinstate me, but do trust you will be able to restore to me the above sum, which will save an honest family from being compelled to ask assistance from the State.

Trusting to receive an early and favourable reply.

I remain, &c.,

MAURICE HICKEY.

For the Public Service Board, who will, perhaps, kindly let me have the fullest information respecting Hickey's case.—J.N.B., 28/4/97. The Secretary, Public Service Board.—C.W., P.U.S., B.C., 1/5/97.

The papers in this case, which have been obtained from the Treasury, are forwarded for the information of the Hon. the Chief Secretary. The Public Service Board had nothing to do with the dismissal of Hickey.—J. W. HOLLIMAN. The Principal Under Secretary, B.C., 12/5/97.

Returned.—C.S.O., 12/5/97.

No. 2.

Mr. Maurice Hickey to The Public Service Board.

Gentlemen, 18, Charlton-street, Newcastle, 15 April, 1897.

On the 18th March last I received a communication from the Local Marine Board stating that my services were no longer required by them. At the time of my dismissal I was employed at the Signal Hill, Newcastle, as a night look-out man, which position I filled for a period of twelve years and four months, to the satisfaction of my superior officers. Prior to this appointment I was a warder for ten years and ten months in the Government Powder Magazine, Newcastle, and while I have been in the Civil Service have paid into the Superannuation Fund about £60. I have therefore to respectfully apply that, in view of my long years of service, and of the trivial nature of the offence for which I was dismissed, I be reinstated to my late post or to some other vacancy in the Department.

I would further respectfully bring under your notice the fact that some years ago I had my right arm amputated at the shoulder, and the post I lately filled was one of the few which a man afflicted in that manner could fill, and also that a wife and large family are solely dependent on my labours for a living. If, gentlemen, you are unable to reinstate me, I would respectfully ask you to assist me in obtaining a refund of the amount paid by me into the Superannuation Fund.

I have, &c.,
MAURICE HICKEY.

Acknowledged, 20/ Will the Under Secretary for Finance and Trade be so good as to furnish a report on this matter?—J. W. HOLLIMAN, B.C., 20/4/97. The Secretary, Marine Board.—F.K., 22/4/97. No. 3.

Mr. J. H. Veitch to The Secretary, Marine Board, Sydney.

Sir, Office of the Local Marine Board at Newcastle, 11 March, 1897.

By the direction of the Local Marine Board, I have the honor of submitting the attached papers, being charges by the Harbour Master, Captain Newton, against Maurice Hickey for insolence and insubordination on the night of the 2nd instant, together with evidence taken and the Board's decision thereon, for your consideration.

I have, &c.,
J. H. VEITCH,
Secretary, L.M.B.

The Marine Board approve of the Local Marine Board's recommendation. By Order.—G. S. LINDEMAN, 16/3/97. The Secretary, Local Marine Board.

No. 4.

J. L. Fegan, Esq., M.P., to The President of the Marine Board.

Dear Sir, Legislative Assembly, N.S.W., Sydney, 13 March, 1897.

I trust you will pardon me for bringing the case of Maurice Hickey under your notice. The papers in connection with his case are in Sydney, so I was informed. I trust you will be able to see your way clear to allow him to retain his position, as he is unfitted for any other kind of work if discharged from his present position. If a fine and apology will do, I am sure Hickey is very sorry; and, having a wife and three children to look after, I trust you will give him another chance for their sakes.

Yours, &c.,
JOHN L. FEGAN.

No. 5.

Captain Henry Newton to The Secretary of the Marine Board, Newcastle.

Sir, Harbour Office, Newcastle, 3 March, 1897.

I have to report that during last night, the 2nd instant, I found it necessary to place the assistant look-out man, Maurice Hickey, under suspension (when on duty) for an act of insubordination and disobedience of orders. Further, I did not consider him in a fit state to occupy such a responsible position.

I may state that, at about 7 p.m. of the 2nd instant, I went on the look-out station, and remained there some time on the western side of the balcony. F. Martyn was in charge, in the absence of the look-out man. Hickey came from the eastern side of the house, and spoke in a most irreverent manner on a subject not in connection with his duties. I frequently requested him to go to his duty, as I did not wish any conversation whatever; he, however, still persisted in the most insolent manner possible—in fact his conduct was unbearable—absolutely refusing to obey my orders. I threatened to suspend him. He replied, "You cannot; I am a better man than ever you were," and such like. When accused of not being in a fit state for duty, he replied, "You are a liar."

I then sent Martyn for the Assistant Harbour Master, and one of the boatmen to go on duty. On the arrival of these the conduct of Hickey was of such a nature that Captain Melville forcibly removed him off the station. I had serious thoughts of requesting the officer in charge of the fort to place him in the guard-room.

With the concurrence of the Local Marine Board, I will keep the man referred to under suspension until convenient for an investigation into his conduct, as I consider this matter of such serious importance as to demand the attention of the Board.

Yours, &c.,
HENRY NEWTON,
Harbour Master.

No. 6.

Evidence taken before the Marine Board, Newcastle, and Decision of the Board.

CHARGES made by the Harbour Master, Captain Newton, against Maurice Hickey, assistant look-out man on the Signal Station.

Present: The Chairman, H. R. Cross; Members—J. Reid, W. R. Logan, F. Gardner.

On Captain Newton's report being read over, Maurice Hickey stated that nobody would tolerate such behaviour as mentioned by the Harbour Master, if it were true. But the only part he would admit was that he had unfortunately called the Harbour Master a liar, for which he was very sorry.

By Captain Newton: He was not attending to his duty.

Hickey: I was attending to my duty, and I consider I was doing my duty, and doing it well.

By the Chairman: Were you insolent to your superior officer?

Hickey: I was not; only on the one occasion.

To Captain Newton: I deny insubordination. You told me I was drunk.

By Captain Newton: I did not say, "You are drunk," but, "You have been drinking."

By Hickey: Exactly, sir. I said, "You're a liar," and am sorry for it.

George Melville, Assistant Harbour Master, on the charge made by the Harbour Master against Maurice Hickey, being read over, stated: That Hickey's conduct, on the night of the 2nd instant, was abusive and insubordinate to the Harbour Master, and also to myself; so much so that I opened the gate and put him forcibly off the Hill.

To the Chairman: If he was not drunk, he was mad; he could keep his legs; he was making use of language unbecoming of a street arab, and when asked by me if he were drunk, replied, "You are a damned liar"; I was long enough on the Hill to hear Hickey abuse Captain Newton before putting him off the Hill.

By the Chairman to Hickey: Do you say that Mr. Melville is not telling the truth.

Hickey: I do say he is not telling the truth, as Mr. Melville was not on the Hill at the time:

GEORGE MELVILLE.

Taken and declared before me, this the 10th day of March, 1897,—

J. H. VEITCH,

Secretary, Local Marine Board.

F. Martyn, boatman, acting look-out man on the 2nd instant, on hearing the charges preferred against Hickey, by Captain Newton, stated: I was on the eastern side of the look-out; saw Hickey go up to Captain Newton, who was on the western side of the look-out, and refer to something about some letter, to which Captain Newton replied he was not Hickey's messenger; what he had done, he was asked to do, and did not want to hear any more about it, and ordered Hickey to go on the other side of the house, in the sea side, as he could see nothing from where he was; to which, Hickey replied, "that he could see more from that position than ever he (Captain Newton) could do from the other side"; Captain Newton told Hickey "not to be insolent, or he would have him put off the Hill"; Hickey answering "that he could not do it," and there were a lot of words passed at this time; Captain Newton trying to get Hickey to be quiet and go to his duty, which Hickey would not; heard Captain Newton call Hickey an "insolent little puppy"; and Hickey abused Captain Newton roundly as much as to say, "You think I am drunk"; Captain Newton said, "You have been drinking"; Hickey then said "You are a liar"; Captain Newton then called me, and drew my attention to what had passed, asking if I had heard the remarks; I said, "I did, sir"; then sent me for Mr. Melville to get a man to take Hickey's place for the night; I cannot say I heard any bad language on my return, as I did not want to see the row, and kept away as much as possible.

To the Harbour Master: Time after time I heard you telling him to go to his duty; I could not say I heard him say he was a better man than you; his conduct was unbearable and insubordinate; I remember Mr. Melville coming on the Hill; I must admit that there was talking and grumbling going on, but I could not distinguish what was said.

To Hickey: I say you were perfectly sober.

FRANCIS MARTYN.

Taken and declared before me, this 10th day of March, 1897,—

J. H. VEITCH,

Secretary, Local Marine Board.

John Henderson, boatman, stated: I was sent for to come on the Hill, by Mr. Melville, to relieve Hickey; I saw the Harbour Master there; he told me to stop there in Hickey's place until relieved; the row was pretty well over before I came up; saw Hickey taken away by Mr. Melville; could not say I heard any bad language used; I heard Mr. Melville order Hickey off the Hill; I do not remember the words; was not exactly close to them, being on the east side of the house; they were on the south side.

To Mr. Melville: I do not remember you using bad language.

JOHN HENDERSON.

Declared before me, this 10th day of March, 1897,—

J. H. VEITCH,

Secretary, Local Marine Board.

John Crapp, signal master, stated: Hickey was perfectly sober when he came on duty at 5-30 p.m.; I have been on the Hill seventeen years; Hickey twelve years; I do not think that any man who has had drink to be fit to be on duty on the Hill; Hickey, to my best belief, was sober and fit for duty.

JOHN CRAPP.

The Chairman to Hickey: You will remain under suspension until you hear from the Board.

Certificates produced by Maurice Hickey:—

I have this night, at 8·10 p.m., seen Mr. Maurice Hickey, and he appears to me to be sober, but excited.
HENRY DALTON.

16, Bolton-street, Newcastle,

March 2nd, 1897, 8·30 p.m.

I have this evening, at half-past 8 o'clock, examined Maurice Hickey, age 57 years, night look-out man at Signal Hill. I find him perfectly sober, and with all his faculties clear and keen.

H. MARTIN DOYLE,

Decision.

After careful consideration, the Board found the charges preferred by the Harbour Master against Maurice Hickey, assistant look-out man, to be proven. They therefore recommend that the said Maurice Hickey be dismissed from the service, this not being his first offence by any means, he having been forgiven on several former occasions by the Harbour Master and Assistant Harbour Master, whose authority must be upheld by the Board, especially in discipline.

The Government Printer to The Under Secretary for Finance and Trade.

Sir,

Government Printing Office, Sydney, 17 February, 1897.

With reference to the note of the Honorable the Premier this morning, I have the honor to state that there are no arrears of work at present in the office which could in any way call for the employment of further labour; and with regard to the annual reports specifically mentioned, nothing is at present in my hands which has not already been submitted, and is now forwarded almost to completion pending approval of the House.

It could be arranged that the Night Staff—say, eighteen men—who usually take three weeks lost time during the year, should do so from this date; or the Debates Staff—say, twelve men—could be treated in the same way; but both staffs are picked men, and it might shortly be necessary to avail myself of one of these courses to further reduce the existing staff, unless Departmental work increases.

Sir,

21, Denison-road, Petersham, 1 March, 1897.

In connection with the information supplied by the Honorable J. N. Brunker, Colonial Secretary (acting for the Honorable the Premier), that a number of hands would be required, and that a ballot must be taken, a meeting of those concerned was held, when the following resolution was unanimously carried, with a view to your reconsideration of the mode of selection:—

“That, in view of the promise of the Superintendent that the hands required would be selected by the Government Printer, and sent for through the Father of the Chapel, it is thought that any ballot would be inimical to both parties.”

Respectfully awaiting a reply,—

Messrs. C. I. Peachey, W. H. Champion, John McDonnell, and Andrew J. Hulmes to The Premier and Colonial Treasurer.

Sir,

21, Denison-road, Petersham, 3 March, 1897.

The communication forwarded to the Government Printer by you on the 16th February last having borne no practical result, and on handing the document desired by you on that occasion to Mr. Brunker, that gentleman, after obtaining information from us, had an interview with the Government Printer, after which we were informed that a number of hands would be required, and a ballot could be taken at once.

A meeting was held for that purpose, when the following was resolved:—

“That, in view of the promise of the Superintendent that the hands required would be selected by the Government Printer, and sent for through the Father of the Chapel, it is thought that any ballot would be inimical to both parties.”

This was duly submitted and agreed to by the Government Printer, who minuted it to that effect. Notwithstanding the efforts of yourself and Mr. Brunker, no result has yet been obtained.

We would, therefore, respectfully urge that your favourable and early consideration may be utilised to achieve the object desired.

Extract from "Votes and Proceedings" of the Legislative Assembly, Tuesday, 22nd September, 1896.

QUESTION NO. 4.

TRIAL OF RACHEL DAWSON:—Mr. Haynes asked the Minister of Justice,—

- (1.) Was the trial of Rachel Dawson, for illegally wounding by shooting one Frederick Acheson, at Rosedale, near Tilpa, fixed for 9th September, at Cobar?
- (2.) Was the Crown unable to proceed with the case owing to the absence of the prosecutor?
- (3.) Was the prosecutor bound over to appear at the prosecution, and was any reason given for his non-appearance?
- (4.) Was the prosecutor under a bond to appear; if so, has the Crown taken any steps with respect to the bond?
- (5.) Why was the principal witness for the defence (E. M. Perrott) not called at Louth?
- (6.) Was not the accused, Rachel Dawson, compelled to travel with her witnesses 150 miles, and in no way notified of the non-appearance of the prosecutor?
- (7.) As no date for the trial has now been fixed, and the accused is under heavy expense and a serious imputation, can the Crown arrange for a special early hearing at Bourke, the Court nearest the locality of the dispute?

Mr. Gould answered,—The Secretary to the Attorney-General has supplied the following information:—

- (1, 2, 3, and 4.) The trial of Rachel Dawson was fixed to take place at Cobar, on 9th September, but owing to the prosecutor being too ill to travel, the case had to be postponed, and for other reasons nothing has been done about the bond.
- (5.) I am not aware of the reason.
- (6.) Yes; as the Crown did not know until the last moment that the prosecutor could not appear, the accused could not be informed.
- (7.) The trial has been fixed to take place at Dubbo Circuit Court, on the 29th instant, and instructions have been given to pay the expenses of all material witnesses for the defence.

No. 2.

E. D. Millen, Esq., M.P., to The Minister of Justice.

Sir,
 I have the honor to forward petition, addressed to His Excellency the Governor, asking for the release, under license, of Rachel Dawson, now undergoing a sentence of eighteen months' imprisonment in Bathurst Gaol.

I have, &c.,
 E. D. MILLEN.

[Enclosure.]

Your Excellency,

May it please your Excellency, I, Mary Ann Drew, mother of Rachel Dawson, who is at present under a sentence of eighteen months' imprisonment in Bathurst Gaol on a charge of maliciously shooting, do hereby pray that it may please your Excellency to favourably consider the many extenuating circumstances surrounding the case, and the fact that two young children are entirely dependent upon Mrs. Dawson for their support, with a view of granting her release, under license, as provided in the Criminal Law Act.

Humbly praying that my appeal may receive your Excellency's most merciful consideration, I do myself the honor of subscribing myself,
 Your Excellency's most humble and obedient servant,

MARY ANN DREW.

To His Excellency the Right Honorable Viscount Hampden, Governor of New South Wales.

Forwarded for the information of his Excellency the Governor. The Private Secretary.—J.L.W. (for U.S.), B.C., 15/10/96. The Minister of Justice.—HAMPDEN, 17/10/96. Deposition

Deposition of Witness.

New South Wales, }
Louth, to wit. }

(11 and 12 Vic., c. 42, s. 17.)

THE examination of Arthur Lewis, of Louth, in the Colony of New South Wales, senior-constable, taken on oath, this 8th day of August, in the year of Our Lord 1896, at Louth, in the Colony aforesaid, before the undersigned, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Colony, in the presence and hearing of Rachel Dawson, who is charged this day before us for that she, the said Rachel Dawson, on the 5th day of August, at Rosedale, in the said Colony, maliciously and feloniously did shoot one Frederick Acheson, with intent thereby to murder the said Frederick Acheson.

This deponent, on his oath, saith as follows:—I am a senior-constable stationed at Louth; on the morning of the 6th instant I proceeded to Rosedale Homestead, near Tilpa; there saw the accused, Rachel Dawson; I spoke to her, and said, "I have a warrant for you, which I now produce, charging you with maliciously shooting one Frederick Acheson, of Tilpa, with intent to murder"; the warrant is under the hand and seal of W. H. Dunlop, one of the Justices for the Colony; I cautioned accused in usual manner, and said, "I am going to ask you some questions, you are not obliged to answer them unless you like"; she said, "I will make a statement to you," which was as follows:—About sunrise on the 5th instant, three men came to the Rosedale Homestead, Acheson being one of them (she said). I heard footsteps outside; I looked out and saw three men going inside; I followed them and said, "Go outside"; they said, "We won't"; I said, "I have a revolver here, if you don't go I will shoot you"; one of the men came towards me, I fired one shot; they still stopped inside; I fired again, which took effect on Acheson; I did not aim particularly at anyone; nothing further was done; Acheson, after going outside, said, "I am shot"; I did not maliciously shoot them, but fired in self-defence; I was at the house all alone, there being no men near the house; I then arrested accused, and charged her with shooting with intent to murder Acheson; accused made no reply to the charge.

By Accused: No questions.

By Bench: No questions.

The above depositions of Arthur Lewis, this deponent, was taken } and sworn before us, at Louth, in the said Colony, the day } and year first before-mentioned,—

Deposition of Witness.

New South Wales, }
Louth, to wit. }

(11 and 12 Vic., c. 42, s. 17.)

THE examination of Frederick Acheson, of Tilpa, in the Colony of New South Wales, shearer, taken on oath, this 8th day of August, in the year of Our Lord 1896, at Louth, in the Colony aforesaid, before the undersigned, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Colony, in the presence and hearing of Rachel Dawson, who is charged this day before us for that she, the said Rachel Dawson, on the 5th day of August, at Rosedale, in the said Colony, maliciously and feloniously did shoot one Frederick Acheson, with intent thereby to murder the said Frederick Acheson.

This deponent, on his oath, saith as follows:—I am a shearer, and reside at Tilpa; I remember the morning of the 5th instant; I left Tilpa in company with two men; I went along the main road down the river into the gate on to Mr. Perrott's lease; I proceeded to the homestead; I saw the two other men post notices on the trees on the lease; the notices were posted on behalf of the mortgagees of the lease (Hill, Clark, & Co.); this happened after sunrise; we waited until the sun got up; we went down the river; when we got opposite the house, came up on to the bank of the river; we then entered the garden by an open gate, and then went round to the back door, which was also open; one of the other men went in first, and said, "Follow me and see me take possession in the name of the mortgagees"; I went in along a passage into the front room and sat down; the next moment the accused came in through the passage behind us; she went round the table to a sideboard, picked up a revolver, and presented it at me; the revolver missed fire when first pulled; she fired again, and the shot hit me in the right leg on the inside, near the groin; I got up and ran out the back door, the other two with me; we collided in the passage, and she fired another shot at us; this shot took no effect; I ran a few yards from the door and fell; accused came to back door and said, "I might as well give you another through the body, and settle you"; I said, "I am winged; I am beat"; I got up and hobbled out of the garden and laid under a tree; I was afterwards taken inside by Perrott, who dressed the wound for me; I then went to Tilpa and laid an information before a Magistrate for maliciously shooting with intent, which I signed and swore in the presence of D. H. Dunlop, a Justice of the Peace.

By Accused: No questions.

By Bench: No questions.

Deposition of Witness.

New South Wales, }
Louth, to wit. }

(11 and 12 Vic., c. 42, s. 17.)

THE examination of Frederick Parkes, of Tilpa, in the Colony of New South Wales, police constable, taken on oath, this 8th day of August, in the year of Our Lord, 1896, at Louth, in the Colony aforesaid, before the undersigned, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Colony, in the presence and hearing of Rachel Dawson, who is charged this day before us for that she, the said Rachel Dawson, on the 5th day of August, at Rosedale, in the said Colony, maliciously and feloniously did shoot one Frederick Acheson, with intent thereby to murder the said Frederick Acheson.

This

This deponent, on his oath, saith as follows:—I am a constable of police, stationed at Tilpa; on the morning of the 5th instant I heard a man was shot at Rosedale; I went there; I saw Perrott at Rosedale, who said, "My place has been broken into," at the same time showing me a gate which was lifted off its hinges; a man has been shot; Perrott said he was away at the time it happened; I went in a room, and saw Acheson there; I said to Acheson, "What is the matter?" he said, "I have been shot"; he said, "Accused shot me"; I said, "How did that happen?" he said, "I came down here after sunrise with two other men; I was employed by Mr. Howell; we posted notice on the trees inside the lease; we went into the house by the back door; I was employed as a bailiff; when we were in the room at Rosedale, accused ran in, and picked up a revolver, and said, 'I will shoot you dead'; she said this to Acheson"; on the same morning I saw accused; she said, "Three men came to the house in the morning; I followed them in; I said to them, 'Go out of here'; they said, 'We won't'; I (accused) said, 'There is a revolver here, if you don't go out I will fire'; the men replied, 'Fire away'; I (accused) said, 'I am not trifling; I will fire if you don't go out'; I then picked up a revolver [produced] on the sideboard; it was loaded in three chambers; one of the chambers was empty; two chambers had recently-discharged cartridges in them"; she said she fired two shots; I then removed Acheson to the "Royal Hotel," Tilpa.

By Accused: No questions.

By Bench: No questions.

GEORGE LEGGATT, J.P.

William Burns, being duly sworn, states:—I am a gardener, in the employ of E. M. Perrott, at Rosedale; on the morning of the 5th instant I found the garden-gate had been taken off its hinges; I allude to the front gate; I examined inside the house where some shooting had taken place, and I believe I saw a bullet-mark in the door about 15 inches from the floor, and also blood on the door.

By Bench: I was not inside the room when the shooting took place; I did not see the men before they entered the house.

The above deposition of William Burns was taken and } sworn before us, at Louth, in the said Colony, } this 8th day of August, A.D. 1896,—

WILLIAM BURNS.

S. O. LAYCOCK, J.P.
GEORGE LEGGATT, J.P.

Frederick Hayden, being duly sworn, states:—I am a labourer in the employ of E. M. Perrott, at Rosedale; I remember the morning of the 5th instant; on that morning I heard revolver shots; I should judge the time was between 7'30 and 8 o'clock in the morning when the first shot was fired; I was about 100 yards from the house; I then ran to the house; while running there I heard a second shot; I then saw three men coming out of the back doorway at Rosedale; I spoke to accused and said, "What is the matter?"; she said, "They came to rob the house; I cautioned them to go out, but they would not. I then fired"; Acheson was one of the men.

By Acheson: Accused was standing about 4 yards from the doorway; when the two men ran round the house Acheson ran a different way; I did not pick up a hoe and follow the other two men; I did not threaten to knock their brains out; I went straight to accused, and did not interfere with anyone.

The above deposition of Frederick Hayden was taken and } sworn before us, at Louth, in the said Colony, on the } day and year first before-mentioned.

FREDERICK HAYDEN.

S. O. LAYCOCK, J.P.
GEORGE LEGGATT, J.P.

Frederick Acheson, being duly sworn, recalled by the Bench, states:—As accused came in the passage when we were in the room one of the men who accompanied me stated to her, "We have come to take possession, in the name of the mortgagees, Hill, Clark & Co.,"; this was just before the shooting took place; in the first instance the revolver was presented at my head; the hammer went down, but missed fire; the second shot took effect.

By Accused: No questions.

By Bench: No questions.

The above deposition of Frederick Acheson was taken and } sworn before us, at Louth, in the said Colony, this 8th } day of August, 1896.

Acheson v. Dawson.

RACHEL DAWSON stands charged before the undersigned, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the Colony aforesaid, this 8th day of August, in the year of Our Lord 1896, for that she, the said Rachel Dawson, on the 5th day of August, at Rosedale, Tilpa, in the said Colony, did shoot one Frederick Acheson, with intent to murder the said Frederick Acheson, and the examinations of all the witnesses on the part of the prosecution having been completed, and the depositions taken against the accused having been caused to be read to her by us, the said Justices (by or) before whom such examination has been so completed; and we, the said Justices, having also stated to the accused, and given her clearly to understand that she has nothing to hope from any promise of favour, and nothing to fear from any threat which may have been holden out to her to induce her to make any admission or confession of her guilt, but that whatever whatever she shall say may be given in evidence against her upon her trial, notwithstanding such promise or threat; and the said charge being read to the said Rachel Dawson, and the witnesses for the prosecution being severally examined in her presence, the said Rachel Dawson is now addressed by me as follows:—"Having heard the evidence, do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not obliged to say anything unless you desire to do so; but whatever you say will be taken down in writing, and may be given in evidence against you upon your trial"; whereupon the said Rachel Dawson saith as follows:—"I have nothing to say."

Acheson v. Dawson.

BE it remembered, that on the 8th day of August, in the year of Our Lord, 1896, Rachel Dawson, of Tilpa, housekeeper, in the Colony of New South Wales, and Edward Montgomery Perrott, of Tilpa, homestead lessee, in the said Colony, both personally came before us, the undersigned, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Colony, and severally acknowledged themselves to owe to Our Sovereign Lady the Queen the several sums following (that is to say); the said Rachel Dawson the sum of £100; and the said Edward Montgomery Perrott the sum of £100 each, of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be made and levied of their several goods and chattels, lands, and tenements respectively, to the use of our said Lady the Queen, her heirs and successors, if they the said Rachel Dawson and E. M. Perrott shall fail in the condition indorsed.

Taken and acknowledged, the day and year first above- } mentioned, at the Police Office, in the said Colony, } before me,— }

E. M. PERROTT.
RACHEL DAWSON.

S. O. LAYCOCK, J.P.
GEORGE LEGGATT, J.P.

Condition in ordinary Cases.

The condition of the within-written Recognizance is such, that whereas the said Rachel Dawson was, on the 8th day of August instant, charged before Simeon Oakes Laycock and George Leggatt, Esquires, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Colony, with shooting with intent one Frederick Acheson; if therefore the said Rachel Dawson will appear at the next Court of Quarter Sessions, to be holden at Cobar, in and for the Colony of New South Wales, on Wednesday, the 9th day of September, at Nine of the clock in the forenoon, and then and there surrender herself into the custody of the keeper of the gaol there, and plead to such information as may be filed against her for or in respect of the charge aforesaid, and take her trial upon the same, and not depart the said Court without leave,—Then the said Recognizance to be void, or else to stand in full force and virtue.

Acheson v. Dawson.

BE it remembered, that on the 8th day of August, in the year of Our Lord, 1896, Arthur Lewis and Fred. Parkes, constables of the Police Force of Louth, in the Colony of New South Wales, and Fred. Acheson, Fred. Hayden, and W. Burns, all of Tilpa, in the said Colony, personally came before the undersigned, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the Colony of New South Wales, and acknowledged themselves to owe our Sovereign Lady the Queen the sum of £40 each, of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be made and levied on their goods and chattels, lands and tenements, to the use of our said Lady the Queen, her heirs and successors, if they the said before-mentioned persons shall fail in the condition indorsed.

The condition of the within-written Recognizance is such, that whereas Rachel Dawson was this day charged before S. O. Laycock and Geo. Leggatt, Esquires, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Colony, with shooting with intent to murder one Frederick Acheson. If therefore they, the before-mentioned persons shall appear at the next Court of Quarter Sessions, to be holden at Cobar, in and for the Colony of New South Wales, on the 9th day of September next, at Nine of the clock in the forenoon, and then and there give such evidence as they know, upon an information to be then and there preferred against the said Rachel Dawson for the offence aforesaid, to the Jurors who shall pass upon the trial of the said Rachel Dawson,—Then the said Recognizance to be void, or else to stand in full force and virtue.

Précis of Depositions.

Department of Justice.

On the morning of the 5th August last three men, of whom one was Frederick Acheson, went to Mr. E. M. Perrott's homestead lease, Rosedale, near Tilpa, to take possession on behalf of the mortgagees, Hill, Clark, & Co. They got on to the property at sunrise, posted up notices at some trees, and then went into the house. Prisoner (the housekeeper) appears to have been alone on the premises, and followed the three men. She said if they did not go out she would shoot, and, taking a revolver from the sideboard, fired, and the shot struck Acheson on the inside of the right leg, near the groin. She fired a second shot as the men were rushing out, but did not hit any of them.

The prisoner did not from the first deny having shot Acheson, but alleged she fired in self-defence, and did not aim particularly at anyone. The only evidence of violence on the part of the bailiffs was that of Mr. Perrott's gardener, Wm. Burns, who stated the garden-gate was broken off its hinges. Acheson, however, said the gate was open when they arrived, and that at the outset they explained their business to prisoner. He added that after he fell down from the effects of his wound prisoner said, "I might as well give you another through the body and settle you."—J.C.S.S., 18/11/96.

Mr. E. M. Perrott to The Minister of Justice.

Sir,

"Windsor Lodge," West-street, North Sydney, 25 November, 1896.

I have the honor to hand you the enclosed additional evidence that was not brought before the jury at the trial of Rachel Dawson, at Dubbo. There is also the evidence of Constable Parkes, taken at the Louth Police Court, which was not given at the trial. I have the honor to draw your attention to the evidence of F. Hayden, who would swear he saw the gate that morning, and could not pass through, as it was locked; also, as to the said Rachel Dawson not leaving the house or speaking to anyone; also the state of the woman when he met her at the door.

The evidence of W. Burns as to the gate being locked, which Acheson swears was open.

The evidence of Constable Parkes, as to seeing the gate broken open and the mark of the bullet on the door, when he was with myself and W. Burns. The mark will always be there.

The evidence of D. O'Brien, as to what took place on my arrival with him and others; also, to what took place when we saw Richardson, Howell, and O'Connor, as to none of them being able to show any authority; also, to the house being attempted on two nights while I was away at Louth while taking care of the place; also, to his conversation, when with Garrity, with Acheson.

The evidence of Jas. Callaghan and W. McNeelly, who, with others, heard what took place with Richardson; and as to Hill, Clark, not moving in the matter; and McNeelly's evidence as to having seen Richardson and party break one of my private gates, and to their not seeing any notices posted up as sworn by the Crown witnesses. The evidence of J. W. Harold to the same effect. The evidence of J. Morrison and H. Brookman, as to McNair and Anthos not being able to show authority, and what took place on my arrival with them.

The evidence of myself herein sworn to, as to Mrs. Dawson always keeping a loaded revolver for her protection ever since she has been in my employ—three years. Any amount of further evidence can be brought on the point, as everyone about the place knows she kept it, being left by herself so often. That Mrs. Dawson was leaving my employ on the 21st July, but had consented to stay till I got someone else; that her account was squared up on that date for her to leave, as my books (that are sealed up in Mr. Myer's (solicitor) office, and not been opened) will show; that Acheson, after the trial, told me they had to put her up to save themselves; that one of my houses had been robbed only about three weeks before by three men, who got two months at the Louth Police Court. The evidence of Dooley also goes to show what took place with Richardson and Howell.

That R. Sleath, M.L.A., has made a sworn statement that Acheson, before the trial, informed him that his evidence was a matter of money, and if he could not make terms with one side he must with the other. I can give no reason why some of this evidence was not called at the trial, but some of the witnesses here were not present; but I can swear that all the above evidence was taken down in writing by L. E. Serisier, solicitor, Bourke, when he was to defend her at Cobar, on the 9th of September. I would also ask you to take into consideration the evidence of McNair and others, as to their coming under cover of the river bank; also, to their producing no authority to me or saying they had any; to the hour in the morning that they rushed the house, and to their being between the door and the said Rachel Dawson when she fired, and should they have attempted to lay hands on her she could not have got away. That the passage which they said she fired down is only 2 ft. 6 in. wide, 9 ft. long, and 6 ft. high at the back door, so she could not have fired down it without hitting someone or something; but the mark on the door puts this out of the question.

Trusting you will give the evidence your consideration.

I have, &c.,

E. M. PERROTT.

I, J. W. Harold, of Keen-street, Lismore, do solemnly and sincerely declare that I was in the employ of E. M. Perrott, of Rosedale, on 5th August, 1896; I, with others, J. Garrity, D. O'Brien, D. Dooley, and Callaghan, and others, when we met J. J. Howell (Hill, Clark, & Co.'s agent, I believe), J. S. Richardson, and O'Connor off the public road; heard Perrott ask Howell for his authority for being there, and heard Howell say, "I am here only to drive Richardson down," and heard Richardson say, "Let me tell you Hill, Clark, & Co. have not moved in the matter; what's being done is being done by me." Afterwards saw them off the run, and saw them post notices on Clement's lease, but never saw any notices posted on E. M. Perrott's lease, although sent round with others to see if we could find any.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and in virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in the various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

We, John Morrison and Henry Brookman, of Tilpa, in the Colony of New South Wales, labourers, do hereby solemnly and sincerely, jointly and severally, declare as follows:—

1. We are labourers, and on the 5th day of August last were in the employ of E. M. Perrott, of Rosedale, near Tilpa.

2. From information which we received on the said morning we proceeded to the residence of the said E. M. Perrott and with the said E. M. Perrott.

3. When we arrived there we saw two persons named George McNair and Frederick Anthers, and we heard the said E. M. Perrott state to the said George McNair, "Have you any authority for being on my premises?" and we heard the said McNair reply, "No, we are simply hired servants, and will leave if you will let us." The said E. M. Perrott did not threaten to kick the said McNair off the said premises, nor did any one of us spur his horses towards the said McNair with a view to ride him down, nor force him to leave the said premises, nor did the said McNair produce any authority, or state he had any.

And we make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in the various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

We, James Callaghan and William McNeely, of Tilpa, in the Colony of New South Wales, labourers, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare as follows:—

1. We are labourers, and on the 5th day of August last were in the employment of E. M. Perrott, of Rosedale, Tilpa.

2. On the said morning we were both at the private gate leading to the homestead of the said E. M. Perrott, and there were present besides the said E. M. Perrott and others, three persons, viz., T. L. Richardson, J. J. Howell, and O'Connor; and we heard the said E. M. Perrott ask the said Howell and Richardson what authority they had for being on his land, and we heard the said Howell (whom we believe to be an agent of Messrs. Hill, Clark, & Co.) state, "I'm simply here to drive Richardson down"; and we heard the said Richardson say, "Let me tell you, Hill, Clark, & Co. have not moved in the matter; I am here as a part owner; what is being done is done by me." We subsequently both searched over the homestead lease of the said E. M. Perrott, but could not find any notice affixed to any tree. As the said Howell and party were leaving a lease adjoining the said lease of the said E. M. Perrott, we saw the said Howell affix to a tree thereon a notice. This was some time after the shooting at the residence of the said E. M. Perrott.

And the said William McNeely for himself declares as follows:—I saw the party consisting of Richardson, Howell, and O'Connor break down the gate leading from Clement's into the said E. M. Perrott's homestead lease.

And we make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute Declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

I, Edward Montgomery Perrott, of "Windsor Lodge," North Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare and affirm that, on the 3rd day of August last, John James Howell, agent for Hill, Clark, & Co., served me with a notice of injunction, restraining me from selling wool, &c., till the 12th day of August. When he served it on me, he informed me in front of John Morrison, Jas. Callaghan, D. O'Brien, and Dooley and O'Connor, that he had no instructions to take possession, all his instructions were to the contrary. On the 5th day of August, I left my house about daylight, and went to the wool-shed, about a mile and a half away. Before leaving I was at the garden-gate, and saw it was locked and all right. I caught my horse in the corner beside the said gate. I received word at the shed that my house had been entered. I at once proceeded there in company with J. Morrison, J. Garrity, H. Brookman, Taylor, and D. O'Brien. I saw there two men, whom I afterwards found to be G. McNair and F. Anthers. I asked McNair if he had any authority for being there, and he replied, "We are only hired servants, and will leave if you will let us." Anthers asked could he go and get his coat, which I afterwards found lying where the gate was broken, and handed it to Constable Parkes. The above-named men heard McNair make the above reply to me, as well as Fred. Hayden, who was there before I came up, and they said nothing about being there for Hill, or mortgagees, or any such thing. I afterwards met J. J. Howell (Hill, Clark, & Co.'s agent), T. L. Richardson, and O'Connor, about a mile off the public road. I asked Howell for his authority for being off the road, and he replied, "I am only here to drive Richardson down," and Richardson said, "Let me tell you, Hill, Clark, & Co., have not moved in the matter, what is being done is being done by me." I asked him on what grounds, and he said as part owner. I told him to prove his claim (if any) in the court, and that I held him responsible for the men breaking into my house, and a man being shot. McNair and Anthers arrived during this conversation, and nothing was said about any authority by anyone; during the whole of this time I was with Richardson, Howell, and O'Connor. I had J. W. Harold, J. Garrity, Dooley, Taylor, Jas. Callaghan, W. McNeely, and D. O'Brien with me, all who have sworn to the above statements. Morrison was also there after McNair and Anthers arrived, and all heard Richardson say it was he who was acting, and not Hill, Clark. I returned to the house, and Acheson called Fred. Hayden, Taylor, J. Garrity, and myself to him, and said, "I want to clear myself. I will be called a bloody dog for this; but Perrott partly promised me a stand, and then would not give me one, and I got as much as I could make in two shearings to come down, but I made a mess of it going inside. I could have gone back and got my bit." When dressing his wound he said, "If it had come off, I would have made £50, but now I expect I will get a couple of years as well as this wound; but I did not think it was loaded till hit." On arrival of Constable Parkes, I told him my house had been entered, and showed him the gate broken off hinges, and took him and showed him the room where Mrs. Dawson, in front of me, told him everything that had happened. I afterwards, in company with W. Burns and Constable Parkes, saw the mark on the door (bullet-mark), and the mark will always be there. I handed Acheson over to Parkes for being illegally in my house and breaking gate. That while I was at Louth Court I left three men to mind the house, being J. M. Perrott, D. O'Brien, J. Garrity, and on my return they all informed me that the house had been attempted on both nights, and they saw someone on each night, but lost him in the dark. I reported to the police at once. Mrs. Dawson was leaving my employ, and got her account made up only a few days before this occurred. She had given notice to leave, on account of too much to do, and wishing to get her children near a school. Mrs. Dawson has always kept a loaded revolver ever since she was in my employ, and kept it in the front room, where the children never went. She was often left by herself, and it was her only protection. Everyone about the place knew she kept it. Acheson, after the trial, and in the Dubbo Court-house, told me they had sent her up to clear themselves, or I would have put them up. I had a search made by men, and also myself, but could find no notices posted on my lease. One of my huts was broken into, and everything robbed by three men the first week in July, and they got two months at the Louth Police Court. That the said Rachel Dawson has had to support two children, which she has brought up religiously, and schooled the three years she was with me, and that they have now no support, and are now living at an hotel, where their religion and schooling will be neglected.

And I make this solemn declaration as to the matter aforesaid, according to the law in this behalf made, and subject to the punishment by law provided for any wilfully false statement in any such declaration.

I, Daniel O'Brien, of Tilpa, in the Colony of New South Wales, labourer, do solemnly and sincerely declare as follows :—

1. I am a labourer, and was on the 5th day of August last in the employ of E. M. Perrott, of Rosedale, near Tilpa.
 2. From information received on the said date, and at about 8 of the clock, I was at the residence of the said E. M. Perrott, and there saw George M'Nair, Frederick Anthers, and Frederick Acheson.
 3. I heard the said E. M. Perrott state to the said George M'Nair, "Have you any authority for being on my premises?" and I heard the said George M'Nair reply, "No; we are simply hired servants, and will leave if you will let us." The said E. M. Perrott did not threaten to kick the said George M'Nair off the said premises, nor did any one of us spur his horse towards the said M'Nair with a view to ride him down, nor force him to leave the said premises, nor did the said M'Nair produce any authority, or state he had any.
 4. Subsequently I with others saw Messrs. Richardson, Howell, and O'Connor at the private gate leading to the said homestead, and I heard the said E. M. Perrott ask the said Howell and Richardson for their authority for being on his land, and I heard the said Howell say, "I am simply here to drive Richardson down"; and I heard the said Richardson say, "Let me tell you, Hill, Clark, and Company have not moved in the matter; I am here as a part owner; what is being done is done by me."
 5. I was present with others and heard the said E. M. Perrott give the said Frederick Acheson into custody of Constable Parkes for being illegally on his, the said Perrott's, premises. I heard the said E. M. Perrott offer to lend his buggy to the said Constable Parkes to take Acheson to Wilcannia, and I heard the said Constable Parkes state that he could not take him to Wilcannia, as it was out of his district. I further heard the said E. M. Perrott say, "You can do what you like with him; I can give him in charge to him (? you)."
 6. I with John Garity was left in charge of the said house whilst the said E. M. Perrott was at the Louth Police Court, and on two consecutive nights an attempt was made to enter the house, as I believed, by some person or persons unknown to us. I distinctly on both occasions saw a person—in the front of the house on the first occasion, and at the back of the garden on the second occasion. I followed the man, and lost him in the dark.
 7. Whilst the said Frederick Acheson was lying in the said residence of the said E. M. Perrott after the shooting, he stated to me as follows :—"Why don't you come in and see a man. Am I a bloody dog? You blokes might think so. I was bidding for a stake, and if it had come off all right it would have been better than two sheds. I am on the strong side, and you are on the weak side." He further stated to myself and Garity, "When the first shot went off I thought she was only bluffing, but I found out she was playing for keeps."
- And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

I, Frederick Hayden, of Tilpa, in the Colony of New South Wales, labourer, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare as follows :—

1. I am a labourer, and on the 5th day of August last was in the employ of Edward Montgomery Perrott, of Rosedale, near Tilpa.
2. I remember the morning of the said date, being engaged near the residence of the said Edward Montgomery Perrott, and at a distance of about 100 yards therefrom, and at about half-past 7 of the clock I heard a shot fired in the said residence. I ran towards the said house, and had covered a distance of about 60 yards when I heard a second shot, and after running a further 30 yards I saw three men coming out from the door of the passage of the said house. I subsequently ascertained the said men to be Frederick Acheson, Frederick Anthers, and George M'Nair.
3. I continued running towards the said house, and passed the said Acheson and M'Nair about 6 yards from the door from which they had come. The other person, namely, the said Anthers, seemed to me to have passed through the kitchen, and after issuing from the rear thereof met the said M'Nair and Acheson, when the three again separated, the said Acheson passing through the back gate, and the said M'Nair and Anthers passing round the house.
4. From the time the said Frederick Acheson left the said passage until he reached the said gate he was under my observation, and did not fall down. I saw him subsequently at the rear of the house and outside of the fence surrounding the same.
5. After passing the said M'Nair and Acheson I met the accused Rachel Dawson, and said to her, "What is the matter?" and she replied, "Three men came to rob the house. I told them to go, but they would not. I then fired." She was in an extremely agitated state of mind, and greatly frightened, and appeared to be unable to control herself. She went into the kitchen.
6. The said Rachel Dawson did not subsequently make any threat or statement to the said Acheson to the effect that she would put another through his body and settle him, nor did she flourish the revolver, or make any reference to Willis or Richardson.
7. I subsequently had a conversation with the said Acheson, when I said to him, "What did you come here for?" and he replied, "I was a bloody fool for coming inside; I was only paid to show the road."
8. I remember E. M. Perrott arriving at the house after the shooting, and I heard him say to the said George M'Nair, "Have you any authority for being on my premises?" and I heard the said M'Nair reply, "No; we are simply hired servants, and will leave if you will let us." The said E. M. Perrott did not threaten to kick the said M'Nair off the said premises, nor did any horseman spur his horse towards the said M'Nair with a view to ride him down, nor force him to leave the said premises. The said M'Nair did not produce any authority nor state he had any.
9. The gate at the front of the said house through which the said M'Nair and party passed when entering on to the property, and which I am informed the said M'Nair, Acheson, and Anthers have stated to have been open, was immediately before the said shooting, locked, as I attempted to pass through the same, but could not. After the said shooting I found the said gate had been removed from its hinges, and broken down.
10. From the time I arrived upon the scene of shooting until the said E. M. Perrott arrived with others, and the said M'Nair and Anthers left the said residence, the said Rachel Dawson did not come out of the house, and never entered into any conversation with the said Acheson, or anyone.

And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual abolition of Oaths and Affirmations taken and made in various Departments of the Government of New South Wales, and to substitute declarations in lieu thereof, and for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial Oaths and Affidavits."

J. Haynes, Esq., M.P., to The Minister of Justice.

No. 3, Montague Chambers, Elizabeth and Hunter Streets,

Dear Mr. Gould,

Sydney, 28 November, 1896.

Under separate cover, I send a statement of the case of Mrs. Dawson, which I believe will prove an honest and justifiable ground for her release. I greatly desire that you will go into the matter at once. I can scarcely tell you how I feel when I think how Willis, Richardson, and friends control the administration of the law out in the back country.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

[Enclosures.]

Dear Sir,

No. 3, Montague Chambers, Elizabeth and Hunter Streets, Sydney, 28 November, 1896.

I beg to lay before you several reasons why mercy should be extended to Rachel Dawson, recently convicted at Dubbo for shooting one Acheson; and I believe, had all the facts been placed before the Judge and jury, I would not now have to make the request I do, as the woman would doubtlessly have been acquitted or only nominally convicted.

In the first place, there is no proof of premeditation, Mrs. Dawson having always a loaded revolver in self-defence, she being left at times in the bush totally unprotected. Moreover, three weeks previously an adjacent residence had been broken into and looted; and furthermore, a few nights prior to the shooting, sounds were heard in Mrs. Dawson's house as if a forcible entry were being attempted.

In extenuation of Mrs. Dawson's act, I must describe the entrance of the men to her residence as a flagrant outrage in itself. They do not enter by the ordinary gate, but force their way, and they come early in the morning. They present no authority whatever, neither at the time of entry, nor at any time subsequently; and the assertion that Mrs. Dawson knew there was litigation going on between Perrott and Hill, Clark, & Co., is set aside by the proven fact that there was no anticipation of trouble, and that the party who entered were on a totally different business, namely, on behalf of one Richardson, a Justice of the Peace, whose removal from the Bench I am demanding in the interests of public decency.

The evidence and affidavits prove that the men were put in by Richardson in defiance of all law; but this defiance of law is nothing new in the locality, as far as the local Magistrates are concerned, whom I will prove to be connected with infamous evasions and manipulations of the law, and out of which all this trouble has arisen to an innocent woman.

The attitude and conduct of the man Acheson, who was shot, show that his presence in Mrs. Dawson's house was an infamous outrage. On every testimony he was there without authority, and plainly as a hired intruder. He has stated, as shown in the affidavits and elsewhere, that he was selling himself for money to a Justice of the Peace (Richardson), and having got his money he had no further interest in the case.

The whole proceedings afterwards—the action of the police in not taking the trespassers into custody, when they (the trespassers) were given into custody; the action of the Magistrates in associating with, and, after the first hearing, driving away with Acheson—prove a state of things which indicate a monstrous torturing of the law, and the infliction, in the course of such torturing, of an unjust punishment on an innocent woman.

The case at Dubbo was entrusted to a solicitor named Ryan, whom I distrust, and material witnesses were not called whose evidence would have put a new light on the whole business. This new evidence would have shown that the men went into the premises violently and without authority; that they were sent there by Richardson, J.P., on his own account, in a sudden dispute, which was a matter of legal rights; that Acheson was a hireling, and was basely paid for the risk.

It appears that the whole affair was a planned attempt on the part of Richardson, J.P., in the interests of himself and others, to raid the premises and obtain important letters and other documents seriously involving several people in questionable land transactions in and about the district. They violate the law by their method of procedure, and were contributors to the act perpetrated by Mrs. Dawson; and it appears to me that, in keeping Mrs. Dawson in gaol, the arm of justice is being, unwittingly to you, used to promote the ends of a disreputable lot of people.

If necessary, I can produce original letters from Richardson, showing him to be engaged in a conspiracy to fraudulently acquire some of the public lands of the Colony, and showing that the entry of the party to Mrs. Dawson's house was, on the face of it, of such a violent character that their act was likely to excite anyone, and especially a woman, to a use of firearms in resentment or self-defence.

Enclosed is an affidavit by Mr. Sleath, M.P., and I believe you have others.

The Honorable Minister of Justice, Parliament House.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

Postscript.—The witness, Garity, swore at the trial at Dubbo that Acheson told him, "He thought Mrs. Dawson was bluffing until after the second shot was fired," proving that, as only two shots were fired, Mrs. Dawson could not have followed the men, firing. Hayden further states that Mrs. Dawson never followed the men, and could not have threatened to shoot Acheson again; and, reckoned together, I think any evidence almost more reliable than that of the band of men associating with the ruffians who were the prime cause of all the trouble.—JOHN HAYNES, 28/11/96.

I, Richard Sleath, being duly sworn, maketh oath, and saith as follows:—I am a Member of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, and resident in Sydney; that Frederick Acheson, principal witness against Mrs. Rachel Dawson, waited on me at Parliament House on Tuesday, the 22nd of September, 1896, or thereabouts; that he then stated to me that his evidence in the Dawson case would depend upon the terms he could make previous to the trial with Hill, Clark, & Co., or their agent, W. N. Willis, M.L.A.; that he had no desire to see her (Mrs. Dawson) convicted, and that if he could get Hill, Clark, & Co., or their agent, to pay him fair compensation for his work and injury received in their service previous to the trial he would not appear as a hostile witness against Mrs. Dawson; that if Hill, Clark, & Co., or their agent, made it a condition that Mrs. Dawson would have to be convicted before they made him any allowance in cash, apart from his expenses, he would have to send her up, as he had up to then only received enough from Hill, Clark, & Co., through W. N. Willis, M.L.A., to pay expenses, and having on account of this affair lost the year's shearing, he was actually without money altogether; that the evidence given by him was on all material points the same as that given by Mrs. Dawson herself; that he was very much afraid that E. M. Perrott, of Rosedale, would succeed in getting a summons issued against him for forcible entry; that unless he could make favourable terms with Hill, Clark, & Co. he would have to try to make terms with Perrott, as he was sure that if his evidence was favourable to Mrs. Dawson, Hill, Clark, & Co. would refuse to give him any money compensation.

Sworn before me, at Parliament House, this 20th day of SECOND report of the Honorable the Chief Justice, of the 7th December, 1896, submitted with reference to Minister's minute of 3rd instant.

G.M., 8/12/96.

I should be much obliged if the Honorable the Chief Justice will furnish me with a copy of his notes.—A.J.G., 17/12/97. E. J. B. Macarthur, Esq., Clerk Associate to the Honorable the Chief Justice.—G.M., B.C., 19/12/96. See my minute herewith.—F.M.D., C.J., 22/12/96.

Minute of The Honorable the Chief Justice.

22 December, 1896.

I DESIRE to call the attention of the Minister to the fact that, although the prisoner was only tried in October, I have already written two full reports upon this case.

The case was a peculiarly plain one, and practically there was no defence. The prisoner was by me treated with great, perhaps undue, leniency, and was given leave to petition at the close of a year should her conduct prove good.

It is no part of my judicial duty to report upon any but a capital case; and although I am at all times anxious to give the Minister every assistance, to enable him to arrive at a correct conclusion, so as to be in a proper position to give safe advice to His Excellency the Governor, yet there must be a limit.

I am now called upon to forward a copy of my notes without any explanation afforded me why they are required.

I accordingly decline to comply with the Minister's request, as I see no reason why my report should not be considered as conclusive in the matter.

Minute of The Minister of Justice.

Subject :—Case of Prisoner Rachel Dawson.

Department of Justice, Sydney, 23 December, 1896.

I REGRET the determination of the Honorable the Chief Justice. I had not anticipated such refusal, but had relied upon receiving the fullest assistance from him in connection with the case, which, however plain, has at any rate attracted a considerable amount of public attention, and evoked much sympathy with the prisoner.

While the report of the Honorable the Chief Justice would sufficiently enable me to advise His Excellency, yet, in view of the confidential character claimed for the reports of the Judges, and by none more than by the Chief Justice himself, I would certainly, without copy of the notes of evidence, be placed at a disadvantage in replying to any incorrect statements and allegations made as to the circumstances surrounding the commission of the offence, and the nature of the evidence submitted upon the trial, unless I made use of His Honor's reports.

Moreover, in the event of the case being debated in Parliament, or of my advice being challenged—and for this I, and not the Judge, am responsible—without a copy of the notes of evidence, or the use of His Honor's reports, I could neither satisfactorily place the facts of the case before the public, or perhaps sufficiently justify my action (which is necessarily the action of the Government), nor refute any misstatements made.

The Honorable the Chief Justice to The Minister of Justice.

Dear Mr. Gould,

Lilianfels, Katoomba, 14 January, 1897.

Having acted as Vacation Judge for the first two weeks of the vacation, I have come down here for a rest after a very hard and anxious year's work.

The papers in Mrs. Dawson's case, upon which, although she was only convicted in October, I have already twice reported fully, are in a paper-basket on the table in my chambers.

Will you kindly send one of your officers for them to my chambers.

The case was simplicity itself. A woman loses her head, and, without the pretence of provocation, fires a revolver (two shots) at men who, right or wrong, were upon the premises of her master, in the undoubted exercise of a civil right.

One

One of these shots takes effect upon one of the men at whom she had deliberately aimed.

Now, a Member of Parliament, having some feeling apparently against some other Member of Parliament, who was supposed to be interested in the claim made to the land (although no such interest appeared at the trial), seems to think that the woman was quite justified in doing what she did, advocates her release.

As I understood your last minute, you said that my reports were quite sufficient to enable you to safely advise His Excellency, but you wanted to put the matter right if asked anything in Parliament. Now, with Parliament I have nothing to do. To you personally I will be always ready to give the utmost assistance for every purpose you require it, but I will not write reports or forward notes for the satisfaction of any Member of Parliament. If when you return from your well-earned rest you require further information, and call on me, I will be most happy to afford it to you; but as my reports are sufficient to enable you to advise His Excellency, there ends my self-imposed official duty.

Hoping you will enjoy your holiday,

I am, &c.,

FREDK. M. DARLEY.

The Minister of Justice to The Honorable the Chief Justice.

Dear Sir Frederick Darley,

Department of Justice, Sydney, 15 January, 1897.

I have obtained the papers in Mrs. Dawson's case, and endorsed a minute declining to recommend any remission at present. I fully appreciate that you have nothing to do with Parliament. Fortunately, or unfortunately, I have, and am responsible to that body for any advice I may tender; and it is therefore eminently desirable that I should not only be prepared to meet any attack, but to prevent, if possible, any discussion in Parliament with reference to the administration of justice; but where, as in this case, there is a strong feeling in favour of a remission, I am not, without a copy of your notes, in a position to meet and rebut the statements made to me by those taking an active interest in the case.

While the case may appear simplicity itself—and this I can only convince others of by an authoritative copy of the evidence taken upon the trial—still it is alleged (1) that the woman was not properly defended; (2) that the entry on the premises was not really to enforce the rights of the mortgagees, but to get the possession of certain letters which would disclose a wholesale system of dummyping on the part of the prosecutor's principals; (3) that Hill, Clark, & Co. held the mortgages in the interests of Richardson. From the representations made to me I am satisfied that very strong grounds exist to believe that the action of the principals to which the bailiffs willingly lent themselves was not bonâ fide. However, this would not justify Mrs. Dawson's action, but should, I think, induce the Cabinet to take a very lenient view of her conduct.

I thank you for your kind promise to give me personally the fullest assistance. It was in the full reliance of this willingness that I asked for the copy of your notes. You will remember you furnished me with them in Butler's case, though it would, perhaps, have been better had I written a fuller minute at the time; but I was very busy, and, moreover, I felt sure you would not misinterpret my motives.

Petition.

(Presented by Richard Sleath, Esq., M.P.)

To His Excellency the Right Honorable Henry Robert, Viscount Hampden, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of New South Wales and its Dependencies.

THE Petition of the undersigned humbly sheweth :—

1. That one Rachel Dawson was tried at Dubbo Assizes on the 30th day of September, 1896, before His Honor Sir Frederick Darley, on the charge of firing a revolver at one Frederick Acheson with intent to do grievous bodily harm, and was found guilty of maliciously wounding the said Frederick Acheson, and was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment with light labour in Bathurst Gaol, with the right to petition at the end of twelve months.

2. That the said Rachel Dawson has two young children depending entirely upon her for support, the husband of the said Rachel Dawson having left her three years ago, and during the incarceration of the said Rachel Dawson they will be left entirely unprovided for and at the mercy of the world.

3. That the said Rachel Dawson was, at the time of the offence of which she was convicted, alone at the homestead of her employer and unprotected, and we fully believe that she was so overcome with excitement that she was unable to control herself, and that the unfortunate occurrence in which Acheson was wounded was purely a misadventure.

4. That, although in law there may not have been any lawful excuse for the use of the revolver, we believe that the said Rachel Dawson was under such intimidation that she thought she was justified in firing the revolver to frighten the persons then present, although in doing so she, by reason of her mental condition, may have been reckless and showed an indifference to human life.

5. That, with all due respect, we submit that justice will be done by the infliction of a less punishment than that imposed upon the said Rachel Dawson.

6. That the prosecutor has expressed himself to the effect that he has no ill-feeling against the said Rachel Dawson, and is anxious that she should be released from custody as soon as possible.

Legislative Assembly Chamber, New South Wales,

Dear Mr. Reid,

Sydney, 25 January, 1897.

For Heaven's sake, before you leave, let this woman (Mrs. Dawson) out to her children.

These two children have been snapped from their mother, or she from them, and one is dying.

Here is a copy of message which came from Tilpa, Darling River, this morning. I had heard about these children being down, owing to their being amongst strangers, who have taken them out of mercy.

I put aside all the full features of the woman's case. Mr. Gould positively told me he would consent to release her after six months. If she is not liberated now (and two months, surely, is not material) I may have to ask for her liberation a few days later to bury her child.

I really do appeal for prompt and humane intervention.

I pledge myself as to the facts, and, as a representative of the people of the West, I beg for your clemency under such circumstances.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

J. Haynes, Esq., M.P., to The Acting Minister of Justice.

Dear Mr. Young,

Parliament House, 27 January, 1897.

I desire urgently in the matter of Rachel Dawson to draw your attention to the fact that from some extraordinary and unexplainable cause the solicitor, Ryan, at Dubbo, did not produce the evidence to the Court which was deemed of the utmost value as showing that the woman was taken by surprise; that the men had forced their way by breaking the gate open and sneaking into the house unobserved; that there was no process-serving, and that entry of the house at night had been twice attempted just at the time; that one of Perrott's houses in the neighbourhood had three weeks previously been broken into and robbed of everything of value, &c. The fact that in Perrott's house at the time were papers of the utmost value as bearing on titles to large areas of Crown lands, supplies the motive for the secret and sudden entry of the men, and this was absolutely proved by one of the parties concerned stating that the men were acting solely for him, and not those concerned in some other business with Perrott. All these facts were ready for submitting, not in justification, so to speak, of Mrs. Dawson's action, but as exculpatory and as proving that the men themselves were the prime authors of the whole mischief. The Crown Prosecutor said if such could be shown it would be a monstrous thing that Mrs. Dawson should be punished. Ryan mismanaged the case, and the evidence was not called. Since then I have had this evidence taken on oath, and I desire, in the interests of justice, that it be received by yourself and submitted to the consideration of His Honor the Chief Justice, who tried the case. Mrs. Dawson was wholly unprotected at the time of the shooting, and thought there was no man within half a mile of the place.

Regarding shooting under fear of molestation, in the Grasmere case, fifteen months previously, a man shot a shearer who had walked into his hut, and the man died; but the Crown did not prosecute.

From all my view of this case I am convinced Mrs. Dawson is suffering great injustice. I am pained at the whole circumstances, and I appeal with the fullest confidence for a prompt and searching investigation, and ask for the release of the unfortunate woman forthwith.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

J. Haynes, Esq., M.P., to The Acting Minister of Justice.

Dear Sir,

Parliament House, Sydney, 27 January, 1897.

I beg to ask the remission now of the sentence passed on Rachel Dawson at Dubbo for shooting one Acheson at or near Tilpa.

Mr. Gould, prior to his leaving for New Zealand, saw and told me distinctly that from a newer and wider view which he had had of the case, he would recommend the prisoner's release in six months. Since he left, I have learnt that the woman's children are in sad need of her care. There are no friends or relatives to whom the children might be entrusted, and it would not be worth while asking the intervention of the State. One of the children has been ill for some time—very seriously of late; and I desire to ask you to exercise clemency in the case, on behalf of all concerned.

The unfortunate woman bears an excellent character, and no doubt acted impulsively, and certainly in fear that she was in risk of personal assault. Everything now goes to prove that there was no process of law being served on the woman at the time, but that a very different object was the reason for the presence and sudden appearance of the men on that early morning.

I do not think that the law has failed to assert itself, for Mrs. Dawson has been punished very severely, especially in being dragged away from her children.

I enclose two telegrams showing the condition of affairs and trust that you may be able to advise the release of the unfortunate woman at once.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

I, Edward Montgomery Perrott, of Windsor Lodge, North Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, do hereby solemnly and sincerely declare and affirm that while the inquiry was proceeding at Louth with respect to the shooting of one Acheson by Rachel Dawson, and during the dinner adjournment, I was approached by one Patrick Matthews, then in the employ of W. N. Willis, whom he had driven over from Cobar, and asked by him to come to a settlement with Willis and Richardson, and save the woman. I replied I would not, as there was no case against the woman. He then joined William Richardson, and the case was called on again. And Acheson was recalled, and then for the first time stated he was one of the three bailiffs. At Dubbo, Acheson afterwards swore he was there without authority, but merely as a guide.

And I make this solemn declaration as to the matter aforesaid, according to the law in this behalf made, and subject to the punishment by law provided for any wilfully false statement in any such declaration.

J. Haynes, Esq., M.P., to The Acting Minister of Justice.

Dear Mr. Young, Legislative Assembly, New South Wales, Sydney, 27 January, 1897.

I am particularly anxious something should be done in Mrs. Dawson's case, for this reason. Mr. Reid said before he went to Melbourne that Mrs. Dawson should serve four months at any rate. I took this really to mean that it would be done, and the release take place this month, and this fact I have communicated to her people, who have made arrangements accordingly.

Apart, therefore, from the whole facts of the case, I am personally, as a public man, involved; and at this juncture, I do not wish to offend the Western people, hundreds, if not some thousands, of whom know I took up this unfortunate woman's case. So you can quite understand the situation.

Sir, Legislative Assembly, New South Wales, Sydney, 1 February, 1897.

I journeyed yesterday to Bathurst to visit the prisoner Rachel Dawson in gaol, and found that although she was in good health generally, she was in deep distress of mind regarding her children, who are at Tilpa, living apparently uncared for at an hotel, on the bank of the river. I think the infliction of such torture on the woman, whom I still regard as innocent, is to be deplored. Could you, under the circumstances, have her case brought up once more for consideration with a view to her release.

Dear Sir,

Parliament House, 10 February, 1897.

Relative to the case of Rachel Dawson, there are now developments with respect to the woman's children, to which I have to draw your attention. From the accompanying telegram it will be seen that the children will be left alone after the 13th. The person who has charge of them—he took them temporarily out of mercy—will be leaving on the date mentioned, and it will be necessary for the State to do something in the matter.

To remove them per coach to Cobar would mean two and a half days' journey in a wretched coach for two very young children. Under the circumstances, might it not be considered, in view of all the circumstances, to extend mercy to the mother, and let her return to them. I propose seeing you in respect to the matter, if you will favour me with an interview this afternoon at the Justice Department.

Yours truly,

JOHN HAYNES.

J. Haynes, Esq., M.P., to The Hon. G. H. Reid, Esq., M.P.

Dear Mr. Reid,

Legislative Assembly, New South Wales, Sydney, 13 February, 1897.

Herewith a letter from the Justice Department, and a telegram from the west, relative to the children of Rachel Dawson. Mr. Gould told me he would agree to her being liberated after the woman had served six months, owing to the new light let in on the case, showing the woman acted impulsively and from fear. Now a pressing development has taken place. The most unfortunate woman's two children, 7 and 9 years old, are wholly uncared for at a low riverside public-house, a bush drinking-den, where there is no person to look after them. The only decent man there is the one who telegraphs as per message, whom I have detained till to-morrow. The State must send for the children, and carry them three days in a coach, unless the mother is released. I therefore ask for intervention to-day. If released to-day or to-morrow morning, the woman can catch the weekly coach from Cobar, and reach her children on Saturday morning.

On all grounds of mercy and good judgment I beg your assistance.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

Minute of the Minister of Justice.

Minute Paper.

Subject:—Issue of License to prisoner Rachel Dawson, authorising her to be at large under Section 409 of the "Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1883."

Department of Justice, Sydney, 19 March, 1897.

His Excellency the Governor.

I recommend that prisoner Rachel Dawson be released from custody, upon the issue to her of a license to be at large under the provisions of Section 409 of the "Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1883" (46 Vic. No. 17), and I suggest that the limits of the license be the Police District of Bourke, or such other limit in substitution therefor as His Excellency may at any time appoint, and that such license be issued subject to the following conditions:—

- (1.) That upon the issue of the license, prisoner place herself in charge of some officer or constable appointed for that purpose, and remain in, and travel under, his charge, until she shall have reported herself to the officer in charge of the police station at Louth.
- (2.) That thereafter the prisoner shall report herself, on the first Saturday in each month, to the officer in charge of the police station at Louth, or at such other place in substitution therefor as his Excellency may at any time appoint.
- (3.) That the duration of the license shall be for the unexpired portion of the term of sentence.
- (4.) That the prisoner shall be, and continue to be, of good behaviour during the term of the license.

I also recommend, as a condition to the issue of the license, that prisoner enter into a bond in the sum of £100, with two approved sureties in the sum of £50 each, for her good behaviour and due observance of the conditions of the license.

ALBERT J. GOULD.

J. Haynes, Esq., M.P., to The Hon. Minister of Justice.

Dear Sir,

Legislative Assembly, New South Wales, Sydney, 1 April, 1897.

I desire to apply for an amendment of the condition of the license in the case of Rachel Dawson, who was recently liberated on license. The woman would have to travel 60 miles to and 60 miles back to report herself to the Louth police, at a cost per coach of £15 or £16 every month. The woman is with her children, and I think the Crown should remove the penalty now inflicted upon her. Cannot this matter of her reporting herself to the police be dispensed with? You can have £1,000 surety as to the woman's good behaviour for six or twelve months.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

Prepare minute permitting her to report by letter.—A.J.G., 1/4/97.

His Excellency the Governor,—I recommend that Rachel Dawson, now at large upon license under section 409 of the "Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1883," be in future required to report herself by letter to the officer in charge of the police station at Louth, instead of personally as at present, the conditions of the license in all other respects to remain unaltered.—ALBERT J. Dear Mr. Gould, Parliament House, 8 April, 1897.

There is evidently some mistake here. How can this poor woman travel 120 miles at a cost of £10 a trip to report herself? Does this policeman think he can act like the other police in the district, and administer the law as he pleases? The woman is with her children, and has no intention of leaving. Why not, as you have two good bonds, free the woman from the necessity of reporting at all. I am firmly resolved to haul these western police and the magistrates before Parliament as soon as it opens.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN HAYNES.

Notes of Evidence taken by The Honorable the Chief Justice.

The Circuit Court, Dubbo. Coram the Chief Justice, 30th September, 1896.The Queen v. Rachel Dawson.

Charge.—That she did, on the 5th of August, maliciously shoot at Frederick Acheson, with intent thereby to do grievous bodily harm to the said Frederick Acheson.

Plea.—Not guilty.

Crown Prosecutor opens case.

Accused, housekeeper to one Perrott. Perrott had given a mortgage and stock mortgage to Messrs. Hill, Clarke, & Co. Possession was taken under the mortgage, and Acheson was employed to show the way to Perrott's House. The accused fired at Acheson.

Arthur Lewis, examined by Crown Prosecutor: I am a senior-constable in the Police Force of New South Wales, stationed at Louth; on morning of 6th August I rode to Rosedale; I saw accused there; I spoke to her; I had a conversation with her; I said, "I have a warrant for your arrest for that you did, on the 5th August, 1896, maliciously shoot one Fred. Acheson, with intent to murder him"; the warrant is under the hand and seal of D. H. Dunlop, J.P., of Colony; I said to her, "I am going to ask you some questions; you are not obliged to answer them unless you like; if you do, whatever you say will be taken down, and may be used against you on your trial"; accused said, "I will make a statement"; I then took the statement down in writing, which was as follows:—"On the morning of the 5th August three men came to the Rosedale Homestead; I heard footsteps, and looked out of the window, and saw three men going inside; I followed them and told them to go out; they replied, 'We won't'; I said, I have a revolver here, and if you don't go out I will shoot you; one of the men came towards me; I picked up the revolver and fired; I fired a second shot; this shot took effect on Acheson; then they went outside, the three men; Acheson, after going outside, said, 'I am shot'; nothing further was done; I did not aim in particular at anybody, nor did I maliciously shoot him, but shot him in self-defence"; I then arrested her, and took her to Louth Police Court, and charged her with maliciously shooting at one Frederick Acheson, with intent to murder him; she made no reply. First witness.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ryan: I would not swear she did not say she fired in self-defence; she made the statement; I read it to her, and she signed it; I find, on reference, she said, "I fired in self-defence."

To the Chief Justice: She did not say when she fired in self-defence what had occurred which made it necessary for her to defend herself; Rosedale is in the centre of a large sheep district; there are at this time of the year a large number of people travelling about; I can't say at Rosedale; there is a shed about a mile away; I know of my own knowledge that three men were convicted of robbing a hut on this same homestead lease about 8 miles from where this matter occurred; I did not take the depositions; I was there when they were taken, and Acheson was examined; I made an examination of the room where the shooting took place; I could find no trace of a bullet, nor in the passage, nor in the kitchen; I think it is a wooden partition.

Frederick Acheson, examined by Crown Prosecutor: I am a shearer at Tilpa; I remember meeting M'Nair and Anthers at Tilpa; I had a conversation with them; I left Tilpa with M'Nair and Anthers; I escorted them down the road; I went down outside the main road; the Rosedale Homestead is 13 to 15 miles from Tilpa; I do not know the time; it would be about breakfast time—about 8 or 9 o'clock—that we arrived; we went through a gate at the boundary, and proceeded through the homestead paddocks, and M'Nair put a notice on a tree at the homestead paddock; we went from there to the river above the house; we went along the river until we were opposite the house; we entered the house by the front garden gate; M'Nair went to the front door, which was locked; Anthers and I went round the back; Anthers entered the back door, which was open, and called on me to follow him; I went inside the house and sat down; M'Nair followed me in; we were in front room, which appeared to be a parlour; the accused followed us in; M'Nair spoke to her and said he had come to take possession in the name of the mortgagees; Mrs. Dawson took no notice; she walked round the table; I was then sitting down; Anthers was standing at the door; when she walked round the table she picked up a revolver off the sideboard, and told us to clear out, at the same time pointing the revolver at me and pulling the trigger; I was then sitting down; the revolver missed fire; I heard the click of the hammer; she fired again immediately, and the bullet struck me on the inside of the right thigh; the ball went through a finger on my left hand on its way to the thigh; I exclaimed, "Christ, I am shot"; I then got up and made down a passage; I made outside the back door; there was a shot fired in the passage as I was going out; I went a few yards from the back door and fell; M'Nair and Anthers came out after me; accused came to the back door of passage as I was lying down; she said, "I might as well give you another one and finish you through the body"; I replied that she need not bother—that I was winged; she had me beat; she told me to get up and clear out; I said, "After I have had a bit of a spell I will clear out"; I got some assistance and went out to the garden and laid under a tree; I laid there for an hour or an hour and a half; M'Nair and Anthers were also with me; assistance was sent for; Mr. Perrott was sent for; Mr. Perrott came up shortly after, some men with him; Mr. Perrott had me taken inside, gave me some spirit, Second witness.

spirit, and did all he could for me ; I was there for some hours ; I went to Tilpa with Constable Parker ; I was taken to Cobar, where operation was a failure ; in Sydney they located the bullet with the X rays, and extracted the bullet at the Sydney Hospital ; I acted as guide for McNair and Anthers ; I did not go there as a bailiff ; I had seen Mrs. Dawson before ; I took a telegram to Rosedale to Mr. Perrott about a week before the occurrence ; Mr. Perrott was not at home, and I saw accused at that time ; we were then talking together about the station, and the station being in trouble, and about Mr. Perrott ; she said she would like to see Mr. Perrott keep the place, as he had been a very good master to her ; that she would not like to see the other people get the place ; and that she would stand by Mr. Perrott with her last drop of blood.

Cross-examined by Ryan : I did not give this last evidence at the Police Court ; I was not asked ; I was asked to go into the room by Anthers ; I heard there was a mortgage over the place ; I may have said I made a "bloomer" by going in ; we made no attempt to get any papers out of the room ; we did not go to take any papers ; I made no attempt to take any, nor did the others in my presence ; I did not say I would not go out ; I did not, nor did anyone, advance towards the woman before revolver was fired ; she pointed the revolver at me with the right hand ; when the revolver missed fire it appeared to me that she pointed it at my head ; I think her hand dropped, but when she fired the pistol was pointed at me ; I did not take the front gate down ; it was open when we went through ; I saw a man rush up as we came out of back door ; I saw McNair produce a paper from his inside pocket.

Re-examined by the Crown Prosecutor : I had no arms with me, nor do I know that McNair and Anthers had.

To the Chief Justice : I sat opposite to the passage ; she was at the other side of the table in the room, and fired at me across the table.

Third witness.

George McNair, examined by the Crown Prosecutor : I am an accountant ; I live in Sydney ; I am in the employ of W. N. Willis ; I am his confidential clerk ; I recollect the 5th August last ; I was at Tilpa, and went down to Rosedale ; Frederick Anthers and Frederick Acheson went with me ; Anthers joined me at Cobar, and I picked Acheson up at Tilpa ; I had never been to Rosedale ; Acheson came with me to show me the road ; we entered the property from the main road from Tilpa ; there is a gate on the boundary of Perrott's lease ; we made to a private road used by Mr. Perrott ; I then nailed up a notice on a growing tree ; Anthers assisted me with nails, and Acheson stood by ; we went towards the river bank ; we followed this bank along till we got opposite the house, and came up to top of bank ; then we went to different parts of fence which surrounded the house ; when Anthers said something I went over to him, and through a gate, and up a pathway that led to the front door ; I found it locked ; I then saw that others had gone round house ; I followed them round, and heard them inside ; Anthers said something, and I heard a scream ; I ran forward and entered the house by the back door ; there was a passage leading to the room, and as I came up the passage I said I take possession of this house and premises on behalf of the mortgagees, and taking the authority from my pocket, I said, "Here is my authority" ; when I came to room Acheson was sitting down just inside room, and Anthers standing between him and the door ; the first thing that met my eye was the accused standing at the other side of the table with a revolver in her hand, pointing at Acheson ; she pulled the trigger, and there was no explosion ; without giving us time for an explanation, she again pulled the trigger, and the shot took effect in Acheson ; I threw my eye round to him, and saw blood on his finger ; he said, "Oh, I am shot," and bounded past me down the passage, and Anthers followed me and collided with me ; I looked over my shoulder, and saw accused standing at the mouth of the passage pointing the revolver directly at us ; I said to Anthers, "Good God, get out as fast as you can" ; hardly had I uttered these words when another explosion took place ; she fired again ; I ran right round the house, following Anthers, and we went towards place where the wounded man Acheson was lying ; the accused was standing over him saying, "I will give you another in the body to settle you," or words to that effect ; Acheson said something which I did not hear ; he then got up on to his feet, and I and Anthers assisted him to a tree, where he lay down ; I had no firearms with me, nor had any of the others ; the accused was walking about inside the wire netting during twenty-five minutes or so that we remained outside at the tree ; she had the revolver in her hand all the time ; she did not say anything ; a man rode up along private road and said something to her which I did not hear ; we were pointed out to him ; he got off his horse, and made two or three steps towards us ; the accused motioned him back, saying "I can look after them with this" holding up the revolver ; she then said she would like to empty it into W. N. Willis, and fill it again for old Tot Richardson ; W. N. Willis is an M.P., but has no interest in the place ; Richardson has some interest in the place, I believe ; shortly after Perrott rode up ; I had sent him a message ; after this I saw no more of the accused ; after this the wounded man had succour ; something else occurred, and I left the place with Anthers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ryan : I swore an affidavit in the Court of Equity ; it is quite correct ; the prisoner was in the room before I was ; I did not attempt to take any papers out of the room ; saw none there ; the whole thing was over in a minute ; I did not advance upon the accused ; she appeared to me to be pointing the revolver at his chest ; when Perrott's party came up I asked which was Perrott ; the woman was excited, but she knew what she was doing ; the gate leading to the garden was open.

Re-examined by the Crown Prosecutor : I heard Anthers say to the accused as I entered "It is no use, Missus, I take possession of the place on behalf of the mortgagees."

Frederick Anthers, examined by the Crown Prosecutor : I am a sheep overseer ; I recollect going with McNair to Tilpa about the 5th August ; McNair, Acheson, and myself out to Rosedale ; we left Tilpa and went along the main road along river bank ; we entered a gate leading into the leasehold, and we went to the private track where McNair nailed up a notice, Acheson and myself being witnesses to this ; after this we proceeded from the private track to the river bank ; we went along the river bank till we got opposite the house ; when we got opposite the house McNair and Acheson went round one side of the house and I went round another, until we came to an open gate ; I said something ; McNair and Acheson came up and went through gate up to the front door ; McNair tried this door ; I went round to back door, which was open ; I walked inside, and spoke out in a loud voice that I was in possession of the place on behalf of the mortgagees ; accused not present ; Acheson came in ; I called him to notice that peaceable possession was taken ; accused ran in between me and Acheson ; I again told her in a loud voice I was in possession on behalf of the mortgagees ; I think I said, "Missus, I am in possession on behalf of the mortgagees" ; she said nothing, but rushed past us ; I followed her inside a room ;

Acheson

Acheson was with me; she ran round a table, and Acheson sat down on the other side of the table from her; I stood up; McNair at this moment came in producing his authority, and saying in a loud voice he was in possession on behalf of the mortgagees; accused, when McNair came in, was standing at the other side of the table with a revolver pointed at Acheson; she said, "Clear out of this," at the same moment pulling the trigger; the revolver missed fire, and she pulled again, which took effect on Acheson's leg; before we had time to give her the authority she rose the revolver again; Acheson, when explosion occurred, exclaimed, "Oh, Christ," and ran out of the room, McNair and self going two or three steps down the passage after him when we collided; on looking round I saw the accused with the revolver pointed at us again; she fired another shot while we were in passage and retreating; it took no effect; Acheson ran round to the back of the house; McNair and self round to the front, and came up to where Acheson was lying; accused was standing over him with the revolver; I heard her remark, "I had better give you another one through the body to finish you"; he made some reply to her I did not hear, and got up on to his feet; we helped him out near a tree, where he lay down; then the milkman came up; something was said to him, and Perrott came about half an hour afterwards; all the time the accused was walking about the front of the house with the revolver in her hand; another chap came up, and she said, "Don't bother about these blokes while I have got this," showing the revolver; "I am pretty right"; she said, "Why did you not fetch W. N. Willis with you, I would empty this into his pot-gut, and fill it again for old Tot Richardson"; I left shortly after.

Cross-examined by Ryan: She rushed past us going into the room; I exclaimed in a loud voice I was there on behalf of the mortgagees; when McNair came in she was standing up with the revolver pointing at Acheson at the door of the room, and when the revolver was pointed McNair produced a paper; it was then she pulled the trigger; she still kept the revolver pointed; did not take it down and fired; none of us advanced towards the woman in the room; never moved towards us at all; she did not ask us what we were doing; just as she took the revolver she said to us to clear out; I did not go through kitchen [One Frederick Hayden called in]; I saw that man just after I left the house and come towards garden, where Acheson was lying; this man seemed to come from a shed at the back; when accused said she would put another bullet into Acheson was about the time I first saw Hayden; he was as far as from this to the end of the Court; the tree he lay down under was outside the enclosure; I will swear that he lay down first near the gate inside the enclosure. [Witness describes the position of the tree, and the place where Acheson first lay down, and where accused pointed revolver. Marks these places with crosses. Plan put in—Exhibit "A."] Case for the Crown closed.

Defence.

Rachel Dawson, examined by Mr. Ryan: I am the accused; I am a married woman with two children; I am not living with my husband; I have been housekeeper at Rosedale with Mr. Perrott since November, 1893; I recollect the morning of the 5th August last; on that morning I was in the kitchen, and heard a noise; I heard stamping and footsteps; this was on the back verandah, leading to the passage; I looked up and saw three men rushing inside, like three drunken men; they rushed in helter-skelter; my children—one 9 the other 7—were also there; I followed them close behind; I did not know who they were; I had charge of the place and all papers; there were papers in the front room; McNair stood inside, further from passage [Describes position on the plan—"A" McNair, "B" Acheson sitting down, and "C" Anthers]; when I got in I never heard a sound from them; I said, "You men go out from here"; when I went in I went to the opposite side of the table from them [Describes on plan where she got revolver at ("R"), and where she stood when she fired ("D")]; when they rushed in I was very excited, terribly so, and frightened; when I said, "You men go out of this," they said, "We won't"; I said, "If you don't, there is the revolver, and I will fire"; Anthers said, "She is only bluffing"; the other two said, "Fire away"; I said, "I am not bluffing, if you don't go out I will fire"; when they said they would not go, I got it and held it in my two hands—in front of my body in my two hands [Constable brings in revolver]; that is the revolver [Put in and marked Exhibit No. 1]; then Anthers and McNair advanced towards me in a threatening attitude; I said, "Go away, or I will fire"; I held revolver at my waist; I did not point it at anyone; the first time I pulled it it exploded, and the bullet hit the door 15 inches from the bottom; this was about 18 inches from where Acheson was sitting; I then said, "Will you go now"; they said "Fire away," and I fired again, which took effect on Acheson; Acheson said, "By Christ, it is loaded; I have got the ball"; Anthers turned and ran outside, McNair followed, and Acheson last; as he was getting up from chair McNair stepped in front of him, and passed out before him; not one word up to that time about taking possession for the mortgagees, nor did they produce any authority; I followed to the outer door; I did not fire off another chamber at them; Anthers went through the kitchen and McNair and Acheson went round it, and passed the kitchen on their left; I do not know what became of them after; I went to the verandah, one step off the verandah, and then I saw Hayden a few steps away from me; he spoke to me as they were passing him; they would be passing the end of the kitchen as he came up; I never saw Acheson fall; I went into kitchen and sat there; I was much agitated and excited; I never saw Acheson after; I never said anything to Acheson; I did not go to the back with the revolver, nor say I can manage these men; I did not say anything about emptying the contents into Willis; Mr. Willis' brother married my sister; I said nothing about him or Richardson; I know nothing about Perrott's affairs, or that he was in trouble, or that anyone was likely to take possession; I gave Acheson a cup of tea when he came with the telegram; had no conversation with him; did not recognise him; heard of a hut having been robbed in the district; the revolver was generally kept on the sideboard; I am sometimes left there by myself a month at a time; neither before or after the shooting did they say they had come to take possession.

Cross-examined by Crown Prosecutor: I have been living apart from my husband for three years last March; I am housekeeper to Perrott; I did not tell Lewis they threatened me; I was frightened at the time; I am not naturally a nervous woman; the gardener is always at home, and generally is about; I did not know that Hayden was there; Hayden is a blacksmith, I believe; it is mostly about 8 o'clock or 10 o'clock that the milk comes back; I did not speak to Acheson when he came about the telegram; I know Perrott was attending to Acheson, but I never asked anything about him; Mr. Perrott told me to take a drink of tea in to Acheson; I never saw him under the tree; Hayden did not tell me he was wounded; I was not asked to take a glass of water to Acheson; I never saw any man ride up to the house; I was in a terrible state of excitement that day, but I recollect very well everything that passed

[Marks

[Marks where she was standing in kitchen on the plan]; the men never molested me, and Anthers made a step towards me; they used no violence; I never asked the men what they were there for; there were three or four seconds between the shots; I gave them plenty of time to go; they did not stay any time after the second shot, so Hayden could not be far away; I never fired a revolver before; I said I fired in self-defence to the constable; I do not know where the revolver came from; the revolver was my own revolver; so far as I know, my husband loaded this revolver; I took the revolver to my bedroom on the Tuesday night; the robbery I speak of took place in the daytime; the men did not touch the papers; I never asked the men their business, but told them to go away.

To a Jurymen: It was about sunrise when the men came.

Second witness.

Edwin M. Perrott, examined by Mr. Ryan: I am a grazier, and live on homestead lease at Rosedale; I am a J.P.; the accused has been my housekeeper for three years; on the night of the 4th August; I believe that Willis and Richardson were mixed up in this matter; I had seen Willis and Richardson on the night of the 4th at Tilpa; I left between daylight and sunrise to go to the woolshed, about a mile and a half away; I instructed them to put away the valuable documents off the table; these were letters from Willis and Richardson, also my statement of claim; about 8 o'clock in the morning I heard something, and went up to the house; I saw McNair and Anthers, who were strangers, also Acheson, whom I knew; I asked McNair what business he had on my premises; McNair said "I have no authority; I am a hired servant, and will leave the property if you will let us"; Hayden told me there was a man shot; he was lying down under a tree; I asked Acheson for his authority; he said he had none; I looked at his wound; I asked him how he was shot; he said he had gone inside, and that Mrs. Dawson had fired on him; that he had made a bloomer in going inside; that he had no right to do so; I gave Acheson in charge at Tilpa for being illegally inside my house; I saw a bullet mark in door.

Cross-examined by Crown Prosecutor: I tried to give this man Acheson in charge, and asked Constable Parker to take him in charge; there were business relations between me and Richardson; Willis asked me to come up and settle this matter at Tilpa; I asked McNair for his authority; he said, "I am only a hired servant"; I may have had a revolver on me that morning or not; I did not threaten to kick McNair off the premises; I did not order the men to drive him off the premises; I took Acheson into the house; I told the accused that she should bring me some hot water to dress the wound; I never saw Mrs. Dawson go into the room; the revolver had not been emptied that I am aware of since I know when; I was looking over my papers from 11 to after 1 o'clock; I saw no mark on the floor—only on the door; Acheson was there all the time I was getting the men off the premises.

Re-examined by Ryan: I also carry a revolver for pigs.

Third witness.

Fred. Hayden, examined by Ryan: I recollect the morning of the 5th of August; I was at Rosedale, in Perrott's employ; I heard a shot; I was about 100 yards from the back of house, at "H" on plan; I could see the passage from where I was; after hearing the shot I ran towards the house; I went about 60 yards, and I heard another shot fired; I saw three men come out of passage door; I ran about 30 yards after I heard second shot; I heard a noise; Anthers came out first, McNair next, and Acheson last; Anthers went through kitchen; the two others ran past me; I mark "H1" on plan where they passed me; I saw accused; she came out of passage behind them; I met her 4 yards from the door; she did not go away; she stopped there; she was there two or three minutes, and went inside to the kitchen; I did not see McNair and Acheson after they passed the kitchen; I saw Acheson go through the gate; he did not fall before he got to the gate; I did not see him after he got out of the gate, not at that time; I saw him afterwards at a tree, sitting down; Mrs. Dawson not outside the house until Acheson was brought back.

Cross-examined by Crown Prosecutor: I was taking a forge off dray; accused did not tell me that Acheson was one of those men; I said to her, "What is the matter?" She said, "Three men have come to rob the house; I told them to go out, they would not"; she did not say that Acheson was one of the men; I got a drink of water for Acheson; I got a drink in a dipper; I gave it to McNair; did not notice accused then; I did not try and stop the men when they passed me; accused told me that they came to rob the house; I did nothing; I saw Perrott come up, and there were four with him; Garrity was one; I forget who the others were.

Fourth witness.

John Garrity, examined by Ryan: I am a station-hand at Rosedale, in employment of Perrott; I was with him on the morning of the 5th; Acheson said, "I thought the old duchess was bluffing; I found out she was not on the second occasion"; I have seen the door; there is a dent in the door.

Cross-examined by Crown Prosecutor: I did not say last night which side; I said it was a matter of money to them, but not to me, that Perrott would have to ante up; I was very drunk.

Case for defence closed.

Reply.

McNair recalled, examined by Crown Prosecutor: I asked for a drink of water when Acheson was under the tree.

To the Chief Justice: I told Perrott, after finding out which was he, that I was in legal possession, but as I couldn't stand against firearms I would retire; I distinctly deny that I said I had no authority, for I had my authority in my pocket at the time.

Anthers recalled, examined by Crown Prosecutor: I heard Perrott say he would kick McNair off the place, and what business had he there? McNair said, "I am in legal possession; I have my authority, but I can't stand against firearms, and I will leave"; he did not say he had no authority.

Ryan addresses the jury.

The Crown Prosecutor replies.

I sum up.

Jury retired at 5:45, and return at 6:5, and find that the prisoner is not guilty of the intent, but find she is guilty of maliciously wounding Acheson.

Sentence:—Eighteen months' imprisonment, with light labour, in Bathurst Gaol, with leave to petition at the end of twelve months if conduct good.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

NATIONAL PARK.

(REPORT OF TRUSTEES FOR THE YEAR 1896.)

Printed under No. 6 Report from Printing Committee, 3 June, 1897.

The Chairman of the National Park Trust to The Chief Secretary.

Sir,

O'Connell-street, Sydney, 21 May, 1897.

The Trustees of the National Park Trust have the honor to present you with their Report for the year ended 31st December, 1896.

During the year the following alterations in the Trust have been made, viz.:—Mr. William ^{Alterations in} McMillan, M.P. (in place of Mr. Angus Cameron, deceased); the Hon. G. H. Reid, M.P. (in place of ^{Trust.} the Hon. John Davies, C.M.G., M.L.C., deceased); and Mr. William John Lyne, M.P. (in place of Mr. J. P. Garvan, deceased).

The Trustees have again much pleasure in referring to the great interest which continues to be ^{Visitors.} taken by the public in the various attractions of the Park, the number of visitors having exceeded by several thousands that of former years.

The greatest care has been taken in the preservation of the flora, and the rules prohibiting shooting ^{Flora and Fauna.} and net-fishing have been strictly enforced by the Park officials.

The principal works carried out during the year are as follows:—

The public accommodation house at Audley has had a commodious verandah added thereto, and the ^{Audley Pavilion.} building has been renovated, painted, and otherwise improved for the greater convenience of visitors.

The cottage occupied by the caterer being old and dilapidated, the Trustees found it necessary, in ^{Caterer's} order to provide more suitable accommodation, to remove the old building and to erect a larger one in its ^{cottage.} place.

A building for the sale of fruit, cordials, &c., has also been erected near the accommodation house, ^{Refreshment} and it has proved to be a great convenience to the public. ^{room.}

A new telephone room has also been erected at Audley in proximity to the Pavilion for general use. ^{Telephone room.}

At the rear of the stables two commodious loose horse-boxes have been built, and a cart and buggy ^{Horse boxes, &c.} shed; with store room attached, has also been erected.

The boatshed at Audley has been enclosed, and two new ways have been laid down which facilitate ^{Boatshed.} the hauling up of launches and boats for cleaning and repairing, and the canal leading thereto has been widened and improved.

For the convenience of the public a ferry punt has been placed on the fresh water river in lieu of ^{Ferry punt.} Varney Bridge which was washed away in the flood of 1895.

A new aviary for small birds has been erected at Audley and contains about eighty canaries and ^{Aviary for small} other song birds. ^{birds.}

All the cottages occupied by the employees have been kept in a good state of repair. Four of ^{Employees'} them have been recently painted and two enlarged. ^{cottages.}

This portion of the park continues to be a favourite resort, so much so that the Trustees have ^{Warambul.} met with considerable difficulty in providing accommodation for visitors. The buildings have been renovated and otherwise improved. An additional area of land has been cleared and planted with ornamental shrubs and fruit trees, and enclosed with a substantial fence. A pier has been built forming an approach to the floating wharf, which has had a thorough overhaul and is now in sound condition.

Dredging operations have been carried out under the direction of the Harbours and Rivers ^{River improve-} Department, and the river is now navigable at all tides for pleasure boats and steam-launches. ^{ments.}

The navigable waters have been kept clean of fallen timber, both above and below the dam. ^{Snagging.}

- Beacons. For the convenience of boating parties a number of beacons have been placed at different points of the River indicating the channel.
- Lan clearing. In order to meet the requirements of picnic parties, the Trustees have had several small areas on the river banks cleared and improved.
- Loftus and Audley Road. This road has been regravelled in parts, and the whole length put in a good state of repair.
- Waterfall Road. This road has been kept in good condition and repair, and is much used by the public on holidays.
- Lady Carrington Road. This has also been kept in excellent repair, and several of the bridges have been redecked and strengthened.
- Roads and pathways. The whole of the other roads and pathways in the Park have been well maintained.
- Deer park. A further area of land has been cleared of useless trees and underscrub and sown with grass seed. The deer are thriving and have increased in number.
- Trees planted. About 700 additional trees consisting of ornamental shrubs, &c., have been planted at different places in the Park during the year and are doing well. Those previously planted are making rapid growth.

I have, &c.,

CRITCHETT WALKER,

Chairman.
